By working on the sympathies of charitably inclined citizens of Portland, one Bert W. Jones has been collecting money in sums of from $10 to $100 ostensibly for a benefit fund for the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, though H. L. Simpson, president of local lodge No. 193 of the Brotherhood says that Jones has been given no authority to make collections for that purpose. President Simpson intends to arrange for a thorough investigation of Jones' action at the next meeting of the lodge.

Jones has been authorized, according to Mr. Simpson, to solicit advertise-ments from business houses for a booklet of history and information concern ing the Brotherhood, which the local lodge proposes to issue. Further than this Jones has received no sanction from the officials to work in benalf of the Brotherhood, and the collection of money for the alleged "relief fund" has been unauthorized.

Jones' contract with the Brotherhood is for the publication of a souvenir booklet, one third of the proceeds from which is to go to the lodge, and two thirds to Jones, who is to pay the costs of publication. The money received by the lodge goes into the treasury, for the use of the local lodge only, and applies in no way to the insurance fund, which is handled by the national lodge. Jones holds membership in the Brotherhood in an eastern lodge. He has been in Portland about two weeks.

This afternoon work of delving into the records and system used by the office will begin. Upon the request of the committee yesterday afternoon, the following order was authorized by the county court to be spread upon the commissioners' journal: Put in Journal.

"Whereas, certain charges have been made by the press of the city and others, and the county court has requested an investigation into the financial af-

The scope of the investigation will cover all points which have been criticised, and extend into the past records as far as the committee considers advisable. The committee was assured that witnesses would be called, if such is Laid to Enmity.

Should any discovery be made by the ecountant of any corrupt practice that would lead into another county office this trail is to be followed until the matter is clered, Judge Cleeton explained to the committee the reason for much of the criticism, as he viewed it, in which he said that a certain newspaper was not given the tax roll to print. This act on the part of the county court engendered the enmity of the newspaper management, and a threat was then made that the county court would regret its action From that time, said the judge, the criticism has existed from this publication. One of the chief criticisms made about the county commissioners is the failure to keep records of their acts, an I he unbusiness like way in which much of the county business is transacted.
