Ole Rood Thanks Journal and Friends; Final Accounting Shows Fund $118.75.

After buying the artificial limb and some articles of clothing, there remained a balance of $32.75 in The Journal's fund for Ole Rood, and this sum has been turned over to the young man and receipted for by him.

Young Rood is representative of the efforts in his behalf, and says: 'I desire to express my sincere thanks to my friends who so generously responded to The Journal's appeal in my behalf.'

On re-arrest examination Burstow said that he had visited the office of John Logan, of counsel for the defense, and that after talking to him Logan had remarked that his evidence "was not what I thought."

Special Prosecutor Davis informed the court that the state rested, though he asked permission to later introduce as evidence the memorandum book taken from Wortman's clothes after the shooting, the book having been given by someone in the undertaker's office to Wortman's mother, who had been asked to send it to the attorneys.

Jury Dismissed Till Monday.
At this point Malarky, of counsel for the defense, moved that the state be instructed to discontinue the case on the stand. Huber, Malarky contended, was one of the picket eye-witnesses to the shooting. He charged the state with trying to suppress evidence by sending Huber out of the city at the time of the grand jury investigation.

Devis took exceptions at once to the effort made by the defense to have the state produce witnesses it did not care to produce, and refuted the alleged charges. Judge Gatens gave the jury a recess that the point at issue might be threshed out, but at the end of a half hour discussion, the indications being that the argument would continue much longer, the jury was recalled and then dismissed until Monday morning.

At the conclusion of the attorneys' heated argument the court denied Malarky's motion.
If either Dan J. Malarky, chief of counsel for the defense, or William M. Davis, special prosecutor for the state, ever had any doubt as to their real opinions of each other, all vestige of such doubt has been dispelled by the vituperative Billingsgate they hurled back and forth yesterday afternoon.

Taking advantage of a point of argument on a rule of evidence, they loosed a flame which lit the fire of anger. The bang was knocked from the vitriol barrel, and the range of each was slaked with fiery words.

Battle of Words.
It was as a battle between the clever, scientific boxer and a more beefy, wide-hitting opponent that the cutting thrusts of Malarky were returned by the blunt, retortive punches of Davis. For two hours the wordy conflict raged. The lid was off. It was the culminating blast of a long delayed explosion.

The clash of counsel was not without its amusing features. From the point at issue the belligerents ran the gamut of the law, the Chinese tong wars, Statement No. 2, and the question of woman suffrage. Each held for the other a tale of 20 years' practice at the Oregon bar, and each retired flushed, but with a thoroughly cleansed system.

Judge Gatens feeling that his court had at least been purged of the rankling discord which had been fermenting for five weeks, announced from the bench in no uncertain terms, that it was the end; that no further personal or personal remarks would be heard during the rest of the trial. The conduct of all counsel concerned would be kept strictly within the letter of the law.

First witness for the defense will be put on the stand Monday morning. No session of the court being held today on account of Judge Gatens' juvenile court work.

DR. LANE DEFINES
DEMOCRATS' DUTY,
FIRST PRINCIPLES

Candidate for the U. S. Senate Is Enthusiastically Greeted by Capacity Audience in Jackson Club Meeting.

Jackson club quarters in the Medical building were filled to capacity last night by enthusiastic Democrats who had been called by the announcement that Dr. Harry Lane would speak.

Dr. Lane defined the duty of the party to be to establish equality of opportunity between the citizens and stand against taxation except for the general benefit and the needs of government economically administered.

"We must get back to first principles," he declared, "and carry out our duty to the people in these respects. If the Republican and Democratic parties will not do it, some other party will."

Tariff for Revenue.
"We should have a tariff for revenue, on the principle of fairness to all, one that will benefit more people than it will hurt. We have been doing the other thing, and we have raised up such enormous fortunes that one of our great millionaires says he has so much he cannot give it away."

These conditions cannot continue to exist. The Democratic party must go into this fight united, determined to change this condition, or it is unfit. It will make no difference who is elected United States senator so long as the man elected has the backbone to stand up for Democratic principles. All I have to say is that whatever you do, there is one man who has the backbone, not a very big man, but he will adhere to these principles if he is elected.
