

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL GREAT AID TO HIGH SHOP EFFICIENCY

Bureau of Education Issues Indorsement of German System of Training Young Men for Life's Work.

(Washington Bureau of The Journal.)
Washington, March 29.—What sort of bread-and-butter efficiency training does the educational system of this country offer the young workman who wants to better himself by going to an industrial school out of shop hours? This question is touched on by Charles L. Richards, director of Cooper Union for the advancement of science and art, New York city, in a publication just issued for free distribution by the United States bureau of education. Mr. Richards finds that just now evening schools have the most pupils of this sort, but points out the advantages which would accrue if America should follow the example of Germany in allowing workmen to get off in the daytime without having their wages docked, in order to raise their efficiency by attendance at an industrial school.

Dr. Richards says in part:
"Evening schools represent the first form of industrial education in this country, and they reach today by far the largest number of individuals under instruction in this field. As a means of supplementary instruction in mathematics, science, drawing, and technical subjects they present a simple and effective method of industrial education, at least for young men above, say, 18 years of age."

Germany Has Good Plan.
"Evening continuation schools were for half a century the backbone of the German system of industrial education. Today that country is coming to a realization that for students between 14 and 18 the evening is not the best time for instruction, and she is bringing the work of her continuation schools into the day period. It will naturally require a considerable time for this country to reach the same point and to bring about a general agreement among manufacturers to allow learners in their establishments to attend industrial improvement schools during working hours."

The positive benefits that result when such a plan is followed, and the close correlation that is made between the work of the shop and that of the classroom, have, however, been so strikingly shown that this system of industrial education deserves to be increasingly studied by both employers and schoolmen. When the time for attendance upon the school work is granted to apprentices or other learners by employers and the wages continued during this period, the economic problem for the boy is solved. Inasmuch as the public school is not called upon to supply the costly equipment for practical work, but only that instruction specifically fitted to the technical needs of the learners, the administrative expenses are reduced to a minimum.

"In its beginning such a plan is evidently most readily applied in cities and other localities where the concentration of high-grade industries gives a large number of apprentices or learners in a comparatively few lines."

Other types of schools which occupy important places in the intermediate industrial or preparatory trade schools, the trade school, the evening school, the part-time school, and the corporation or apprenticeship school. These are also discussed by Mr. Richards in the Bureau of Education's report. Dr. Richards finds that the economic factors involved in the conduct of these schools are of two kinds: first, the cost of the community of running the school; and second, the cost to the pupils of attending the schools. "Of these," says Mr. Richards, "the second is probably the more important in determining practical possibilities of a school type."

Forest Grove to Hear Criticisms.
(Special to The Journal.)
Forest Grove, Or., March 29.—The senior class of the local high school will deliver a set of orations at the Methodist church tomorrow night. The orations will be "The Value of Conquest," Emma Craft; "What Is That in Thy Hand?" Paul Griffith; "The Finer Chiseling," Constance Geiger; "Up to Specifications," Claude Bryant; "The Essentials of Leadership," Marie Buffum; "Simon Says Thumbs Up," Joseph McCoy; "Opportunity vs. Compensation," Leone Smith; "Rome Was Not Built in a Day," Ernest Troutman; "Awakened China," Nellie Johnson; "The Immigration Problem," Leland Carl; "The Dignity of Labor," Annie Deane; "Is It Worth While?" Jay Austin; "Our Treatment of the Indians," Evelyn Rogers.

Postal Bank Opens Monday.
(Special to The Journal.)
Cottage Grove, Or., March 29.—Arrangements are being made by the local postal authorities for the opening of the postal savings bank next Monday. Postmaster Gault is having literature distributed to patrons of the office giving all the information necessary to prospective depositors.

A Preventive of Tea Kettle Scale
Every housewife who lives where water is hard, knows how the lime and other salts form a coating on the inside of the kettle. This may be largely prevented, and the outside of the teakettle kept free from soot and grease, by washing thoroughly inside and outside every day or so, with hot water and Gold Dust.
The hard lime and other salts are dissolved by the Gold Dust and the inside of the kettle will be kept smooth much longer if thus cared for. Be sure to rinse thoroughly with clear, warm water, then refill with cold water for heating.
