Central Oregon Irrigation Company Has Novel Scheme to Utilize Waste.

(Salem Bureau of The Journal.)
Salem, Or., March 30.—Roscoe How ard, general manager of the Central Oregon Irrigation company, and Jesse Stearns, attorney, met with the state desert land board yesterday afternoon and sought consent of the board to enter into a contract with John Steldl and Thomas Tweet to exchange the use of waste water from the proposed north canal dam for title to the dam site. Steld) and Tweet own the land where the irrigation company wants to build the dam which is to divert water into what is known as the north canal of the irrigation system. The request of the land board is to permit the company to grant the owners of the land the right to use for power purposes the water, in excess of the amount needed for irrigaion purposes, that will flow through a gate in the dam, in exchange for the Gerdes, to be completed within 120 days, The contract price is about $125,000. The canal will be only 6800 feet long, but it will supplement the supply of water already on the project and in addition may furnish water to about 60,-000 additional acres.
