

7TH YOUNG WILL BE HIS GIFT HEARING

Judge Maloney Will Decide April 12 Whether It Is Entitled to Probate.

(Special to The Journal.) Pendleton, Or., March 29.—On April 12, the fate of the seventh will of the J. W. Young estate will be decided, that date having been set this afternoon by County Judge J. W. Maloney for the hearing, following submission of a petition and affidavit for probate late yesterday afternoon.

GOVERNOR OF NEW JERSEY IS FAVORED BY ALL CLASSES

The logical nominee of the Democratic party for president. Many leading Democrats, some of whom had before decided definitely which candidate they would support, have within the last week expressed themselves as regarding Wilson the man who should be chosen.

Much more than ordinary interest attaches to the result of the presidential primary vote in Oregon on April 19. Progressives throughout the country look at it as more than a state affair. It is in great measure a matter of national importance.

This is so because the primary election of April 19 will be virtually the first one at which the presidential primary is fairly tried out. While other states have adopted the primary, the primary, nevertheless Oregon, which has used the direct primary for years, is the only state which has safeguarded it so that the candidates named are certain to be the real choice of the people.

The utterances of the prominent Oregon Democrats who favor Wilson, quoted below, are an index of the sentiment of the voters of the state. They include union men, professional men, business men and representatives of many occupations.

R. W. Montague, attorney.—"The mere statement of the qualifications which an ideal candidate for the presidency must have, brings Woodrow Wilson instantly to the mind. No other living Democrat, save one, approaches him in grasp of the deeper meanings of the great political movements of the time and of the ills which afflict popular government, and in the force and splendor of his statements of these issues. Only one surpasses or equals him in power of swaying the minds and hearts of men in public speech. No other living Democrat has in the length of time accomplished in constructive reform and defeat of vicious legislation what the governor of New Jersey has done in one term. And to perfect his little, every spellman and pleacher in the country is against him; every sinister force in this republic hates him."

Great Opportunity.—"The greatest opportunity in 20 years is now open to the Democracy. Of all the candidates before the party none compares with Governor Wilson in fitness for the greatest office in the world. No other has more than a ghost of a chance to win. His election, if he is dominated, is almost certain by reason of his sheer fitness and the profound impression he has made upon the people.

"It is today up to the Democracy of Oregon to make his calling and election sure by a majority which shall proclaim to the whole country that Oregon knows her man when it sees him."

R. B. White, member of Typographical Union No. 58.—"I favor Woodrow Wilson for the presidency because as governor of New Jersey he has given expression to the very fundamentals of democratic government by actual performance in office. He is no mere politician, in the common acceptance of the term, but a politician who understands and applies the science of political economy in its broadest adaptation to our form of civil government."

"Politically, we Democrats should nominate a candidate who can win in the general election. "It is very apparent to almost any observer of the political situation that before the people, Wilson is the strongest man of the political horizon. He is the only man in the Democratic camp who could possibly beat Taft, with his federal and state machine, and it looks like Taft to win."

"Although, Wilson is all that any other candidate is, and much that most of them are not. His nomination and election would do much to restore representative government by the people to replace misrepresentative government by the political bosses. I, and the majority of those with whom I come in contact in the commoner walks of life, are for Woodrow Wilson."

Wilson Real Progressive.

C. E. S. Wood, attorney.—"I am for Wilson because he is a real progressive—and has not been afraid to change his earlier views and say he was wrong. God help (or damn) the man who is the same at 60 as at 20 and proud of it. Governor Wilson has shown his courage and progressivism in beating the very machine which elected him in New Jersey. He stands for publicity against ready made slates and secret combinations. He stands for the people, against the privileged and is not afraid to say so. He is a statesman rather than a politician. He has a distinct policy and outlines it, whether it is popular or unpopular."

"He seems to be running on principles, not hunting votes, and whether nominated or elected will have been a great teacher for Democratic democracy. I don't care to contrast him with the other candidates at this time further than to say I prefer him; and I prefer him because I think him a deeper student of our conditions and believe he has a clearer idea of the remedies. He is in my opinion more the statesman, the other more the high class politician—but I say this with great respect for the high character of the other candidates."

"I think there is a great difference between even the high class honest politicians—clear views and by their strength of thought leading out into new paths of progress. The latter is a statesman, and Wilson is one."

Appeals to Man on Street.

J. L. Ledwidge, business man and member of Carpenters' union.—"From what I have seen and heard of Wilson, I am convinced that he is a true progressive, and a man with the interests of the public thoroughly at heart. He appeals to the man on the street. Though he is learned and especially fitted by training for the presidency, yet there is nothing about him of the snobbish or exclusive. To the contrary, his record and his policies prove him a friend of the everyday man. He is one of us."

"If a man's political education counts for anything, Wilson is surely well qualified in that respect. Not the education gained from practical political experience, which has proved a detriment to so many high office holders, but rather that education gained from a consistent study into the real basic principles of the nation's political growth and prosperity. In this detail Wilson is well equipped."

"Then in the process of elimination I think Wilson is the only man left after the others have been considered. I consider him the only man who has been. If they are not now, contrary to the best interests of the nation. He is too much the politician. Champ Clark I look upon as a second Ben Tillman, with a pitchfork and a loud speaking, cavernous mouth. He is not the man we want."

"The man fact, too, that Wilson has made such a favorable impression on the young men of the country, and on those who know him best, is also, I consider, a big point in his favor."

Wilson Greatest Fighter.—"Wilson is a fighter. That quality, perhaps, first attracted me to him. Other Democrats seeking the nomination are fighters, too, but Wilson goes beyond that. He is scholarly, a deep student of government and events, and knows from first hand the real needs of the people. He is no mere politician or progressive reformer. He shows his executive ability in everything he has taken up, politics included. He showed how he kept his promises to the people by first cleaning up politics in his own state when he was elected governor."

"The Waterston episode I think will hurt him not a whit, but rather strengthen him. "We have not had a president in a great many years with a southern taint. Here is a chance to heal over finally the Civil War wound by electing a man of southern birth who is also a good northerner."

Champion of Clean Politics.—"John H. Stevenson, attorney.—"I have always been favorable to Governor Wilson's candidacy because he has distinguished himself as a champion of clean politics and progressive government. The things he stands for are those propositions in governmental affairs for which the people of Oregon stand overwhelmingly committed. Governor Wilson is neither a radical nor a conservative. He seems to combine the happy qualities of a sound, balanced and deliberative man—the kind of a man eminently fitted for great statesmanship. The evil influences of the country are not favorable to Governor Wilson for president, and this seems to be a sufficient reason why the good influences should be. And, logically, I think he would be a popular candidate, both for north and south."

Has Bryan, Jefferson Qualities.—"F. C. Whitten, business man.—"Woodrow Wilson is a man of courage and conviction, his combination of a striking degree the honesty and fearlessness of Bryan, with the profound knowledge and wisdom of Jefferson. He has a keen mental grasp, and the clearness and consciousness of his utterances leave no doubt as to his meaning. He takes his hearers with him straight to the mark. He is not merely a man of words, but when unsatisfactory conditions are discovered, he goes after the remedy. He is a true progressive along the lines of common sense, and if elected president with a progressive congress, his administration will mark an era of the greatest constructive legislation in the interest of the masses, never known in this country."

"No man can be elected president at this time unless he be able to draw heavily from the ever increasing independent vote, and an honest investigation will reveal to any person that Governor Wilson is far in the lead, with this class of voters, of any candidate yet mentioned for the presidency on any ticket."

"I am for Governor Wilson for these reasons and for the additional reason that every corrupt political machine and every selfish interest is proving its fear of him by fighting his nomination with every foul means in its power. He is the only seriously considered Democrat that Republican National Committeeman Ralph Williams of Dallas has not already nominated at one time or another."

"If the Democrats of this state are actually in favor of Oregon's progressive laws they cannot do less than cast their ballots in the coming primary election for the man who has so signally honored his state by his nomination in the far distant state of New Jersey to adopt 'The Oregon System' almost entire."

Wilson's Policy Best.

J. B. Holbrook, business man.—"Woodrow Wilson is an out-and-out progressive. That in a nutshell is my reason for supporting him. Wilson is a firm believer in the initiative and referendum and has come out in plain language in its support. I believe that only a progressive should be the Democratic candidate for the presidency, and that only a progressive can win. It seems to me that this year is a Democratic year. Personally, the three Democratic candidates seem on an equality, but in policy Wilson is much the most progressive."

Gives Many Reasons.—"Samuel White, attorney.—"I favor the nomination of Woodrow Wilson for president for the following reasons: "First—Because the people believe in him and his integrity and unselfish devotion to the cause of the common people is beyond question."

"Second—Because he is better fitted by education, simplicity of life, purity of purpose, patriotic devotion to constitutional government and general sympathy with the great masses of those who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow, than any other man in the public eye."

"Third—Because he believes that a representative government should truly and honestly represent not the classes, but the masses."

"Fourth—Because he stands for the greatest good to the greatest number, believes that the rights of man are superior to the rights of property, and is safe and sound on the question of human rights as against the dollar."

"Fifth—Because he stands for simplicity and economy in government and is unalterably opposed to money power and governmental extravagance, and believes in integrity in public and private life."

"Sixth—Because he believes in equal opportunity for all in business and political affairs."

"Seventh—Because he is opposed to all forms of special privilege, and particularly that indefensible and inexcusable system of protection which takes from the pockets of the people by indirect to enrich the few at the expense of the many."

"Eighth—Because he is opposed by concentrated wealth and special interests, and by those opposed to the people's rule and those who desire that the government should be conducted for their own enrichment, regardless of the rights of the common people."

"Ninth—The people should love him for the enemies he has made, for his enemies are the enemies of the people; if elected he will surely crush the power of the money and other trusts controlling the necessities of life, and will give the government from the domination of the privileged classes—bring it closer to the people and make it what its founders intended it should be, a representative, constitutional government of all the people—a government of the majority with proper checks and safeguards for the rights of the minority—a government of laws and not of men."

Wilson Man to Oppose Taft.—"Thomas F. O'Day, attorney.—"I am for Mr. Wilson, absolutely and entirely. If Mr. Taft is nominated by the Republicans, and I am now convinced he will be, Wilson is the one logical man to oppose him. Wilson is objectionable neither to the conservative nor the progressive element of the Democratic party, he is logical geographically because he would get the eastern vote, and he alone would hold the party together and lead it to victory. Besides, he is the only Democrat who would swing the so-called 'Progressive Republicans' who will not vote for Taft."

"Mr. Wilson is a thorough progressive, but he blends with that quality the best and wisest conservatism. He is intellectually splendidly fitted for the office, for he has studied and knows the rocks on which nations split, the problems and conditions we are confronting today, yet with all this, Mr. Wilson is no intellectual 'highbrow,' but a man who to a peculiar degree has the interests of the real plain people at heart. And the plain people in turn recognize his sincerity and are with him. That is why he can arouse general enthusiasm and win."

"Mr. Wilson, moreover, is no out-thwarted out candidate. He is no enemy of business, but believes in it thoroughly, yet he does not believe it should control the government. He is the man Oregon Democrats should stand behind and work for."

Has Rare Qualities.

Ernest Knapor, architect.—"I believe Mr. Wilson is possessed of certain rare qualities which are essential or at least greatly assist in making a successful executive. The sober minded citizen ought to and will choose in this matter without getting enthused over the companionable quality or the alleged large heartedness of a candidate, but to select on immaterial matters; these qualities if they exist do not as a rule contribute to a successful administration. Mr. Wilson showed in the Harvey-Watterson episode a determination to spurn the advances of powerful interests in his desire to maintain a complete freedom for himself even at the cost of severing some personal friendships. He is free from the domination of local or sectional influence and may be therefore depended on to carry out a policy unsharpened by immediate surroundings. Such a man would, were he in congress, vote his convictions on the wool schedule, regardless of local clamor for protection, or on the pension bill, unswayed of the soldier's vote; to him, the presidency would be a problem to solve, not an opportunity to cater and develop."

"Wilson is free from the entanglements of a long political service, no obligations for former services rest upon him, every one of his speeches shows capacity, learning, and independence, and let it not be forgotten when he had nothing to say he did not undo himself with rash utterances. I think good politicians will know how to value this latter quality."

"I believe that every Democratic machine is opposed to Wilson but he holds today the lead among the Democratic candidates owing to his hold on the people. He has not a vestige of the demagogue in him. A cool, keen, just and very efficient man, he is able to change his mind and give reason for it."

"I am unable to assign from my own knowledge any reason for the impression which seems to prevail that the very able Mr. Harmon leans too far away from the common people, but I am inclined to say that this is evidently the view of many Democrats in the west. There are other capable men mentioned, and no doubt there are many who, if elected would fulfill the expectations of the people."

HARD COAL MINERS THROUGHOUT EAST WALK OUT IN BODY

April, even if an agreement is reached and very much longer, if it is not. It is believed that several conferences will be held in April and then when a basis of agreement is reached it will have to be referred to the mine workers for a vote. This will take some time and is taken to indicate a suspension lasting four to six weeks under the most favorable conditions.

One of the miners' leaders said today: "We are greatly pleased with the reports from every district, money power, have left the mines to remain until they are ordered back by President White. We have assurances that the men will observe the suspension order, just as strictly as the men who are leading members of the union. This is the spirit that wins and I am sure that when the operators see what the union can accomplish—and they will have plenty of opportunity of doing so before April 19—they will be very glad to grant some at least of our demands."

A leading operator said tonight: "The quitting of the men was like the usual week-end suspension of work and it will be impossible to tell how many will obey the suspension order until next week."

Many of the smaller coal companies and independent operators are evidently preparing for an attempt to operate their collieries. Thousands of strike breakers and special guards have been gathered at different sections close to the anthracite region ready to be sent into the collieries next week. The smaller operators and the independents believe they can mine coal and the prices which they can obtain will tempt them to try."

by the sub-scale committee of the bituminous coal miners and miners of the four central competitive states was unanimously endorsed today by the joint conference.

Within a few days the proposed contract will be submitted to the miners for ratification. The policy committee voted to recommend it and the submission will be more or less a matter of form. The state presidents and International President White say it will be endorsed by an overwhelming vote. The contract is for two years. It is likely that the Pennsylvania and Ohio operators will be permitted to work pending the vote. Illinois and Indiana operators desire a suspension. The Kentucky operators have notified the miners that they will not operate their mines until a joint convention of that district has been held and a satisfactory agreement made. This may take 30 days. The miners of the southwest will work, and possibly Iowa.

Miners "Beat Up" Clerks.

(Latter Press Landed Wire.) Wilkesbarre, Pa., March 30.—Foreign miners employed at the Dorrance colliery of the Lehigh Valley Coal company in this city tonight started the first riot of the anthracite coal suspension when they beat up several clerks employed in the colliery office.

The trouble started when the men demanded their dues. Failure to secure these started the fighting. A hurried call brought members of the special Lehigh Valley detective force and state constabulary here. They dispersed the crowd and took charge of the company property.

miners, by an immediate increase in the price of anthracite coal was made tonight by John S. Hadlock, president of the Plymouth Coal company. He issued his statement under the caption: "Men vs. Melons." He places the responsibility for the present coal situation at the door of coal carrying railroads, which, he asserted, charge exorbitant freight rates to all shippers including their own subsidiaries, with the result that they "rob Peter" but "pay Paul"—the railroads enacting the dual role.
