

PAPER PULP MILL TO USE WASTE AT COOS BAY PLANT

Smith Lumber Company Plans to Spend a Million Dollars in Improvements and Extensions at Great Factory.

(Special to The Journal.)
 Marshfield, Or., April 28.—Plans of improvements to be made by the C. A. Smith Lumber & Manufacturing company of this city, announced by C. A. Smith, the head of the company, who is now here, will require an expenditure of more than a million dollars and will be one of the biggest extensions of business that has been made by a southern Oregon lumber concern.

The company will enlarge the electric plant at the mill, the plan of logging by electricity and will build at the mill a paper pulp plant. This plant will be built by H. J. and Rolf Nordrum, two experienced paper manufacturers from Finland, where they have been engaged in that business, and will be financially backed by C. A. Smith. The purpose is to use the waste material from the mill for the manufacture of paper pulp. Everything will be used excepting the sawdust and the bark and that will be used as fuel for the electric plant which will furnish the power. By means of a chemical process fir wood can be used as well as spruce.

Utilizing All Waste.
 Other factories in this country have employed the same process, but this will be the only plant in this country using waste from the mill as the material for the pulp. For several years this waste was ground up and used to fill in the low lands around the mill. When that work was completed a waste burner was built to dispose of the waste but now it will all be converted into a valuable product.

The plant will have a capacity of 20 to 30 tons of paper pulp a day and as products will turn out annually 15,000 gallons of alcohol, 440 tons of turpentine and 200 tons of resin. The making of these by-products is also a feature of the paper plant different from other pulp factories in the country.

Nordrum Brothers have been looking over other plants in this country and are in this city making specifications. The construction of the plant will begin as soon as the plans are ready and it will be completed within a year. The plant will consist of several large buildings, most of which will be of brick or concrete and will be situated on ground adjacent to the logging mill. The pulp manufacture will be operated as a company separate from the logging concern, with the Nordrum Brothers in charge of the operation. It will be necessary to bring some of the machinery from Europe.

Problems Solved.
 C. A. Smith has been studying the paper pulp question for several years. One of the problems here was sufficient fresh water, which was highly expensive. By the process which is to be used salt water answers the purpose and the water used will be pumped from the bay. The plant will run 24 hours a day and will consume each day 3,500,000 gallons of water.

The electric plant, which Smith saw, will be greatly enlarged and will not only furnish power for the operation of the pulp mill, but will also furnish power for logging by electricity.

In at least some of the company's logging camps the electrical logging will be in operation in about six months.

SAYS ARREST OF GIRL RESULT OF SPITWORK

The arrest of Rosa Golts last Saturday afternoon on a charge of stealing a pair of scissors valued at 85 cents from Mrs. James Hildreth, the head of a tailoring school at Tenth and Alder streets, in the Central building, has resulted in an investigation being started by the department of public safety for women.

When the case came up for trial this morning, the prisoner, an orphan girl, explained that she had paid the woman $20 last year for the privilege of working for her for 60 days to learn the trade. Afterward, she said, she went to Yakima and January 1 again returned to Mrs. Hildreth's establishment, where she was compelled to sign an agreement to work for six months without pay in return for further instruction, and her board and lodging. Recently Hildreth and his wife sold their establishment and guaranteed to see that Miss Golts continued in the place Friday, but on Saturday she was arrested on a warrant charging her with the theft of the scissors, which she declared were a present to her.

Attorney Huntman who appeared for the girl, declared that her present was the result of spite work, because Miss Golts failed to continue at her work, and Judge Tazewell threw the case out of court. Mrs. Lora G. Baldwin has interested herself in the case and with Huntman will start an investigation.

The company officials say 100 men remained in the camp and work will be retarded by the strike only a few days until more men can be brought in. DISCUSS FORMATION OF PRODUCE EXCHANGE

Following a luncheon at the new grill at the Imperial hotel, about twelve representative produce men are meeting and discussing the local produce situation, with a view to organizing a produce exchange. The object of such an organization, if it is effected, will deal largely with the regulation of supply and price of butter and other produce. It is claimed that the dealers, while protecting themselves by handling the market more systematically, can at the same time insure more reasonable and stationary prices for the benefit of the public.

Up to the present Portland has been without a butter and egg board and quotations in each line have been named independently by the various dealers. Some of the big packers and creameries have decided to eliminate this competition as much as possible by the formation of the exchange.

NEW VOICE HEARD ON VICTOR RECORDS

Victor records this month include a new voice, that of Miss Margaret Matzenauer, the new Austrian contralto, who sings a Wagner number from Walkure and another from L'Africana. Two arias from Inquisitive Women, a solo and a duet, are charmingly rendered by Farrar and Jadowick. Miss Farrar also sings a duet with Amato from another Wolf-Ferrari opera, the "Secret of Suzanne."

Caruso is heard in one of the most difficult numbers he has yet recorded, namely, Rossini's Tarentella, which he sings each morning to keep his voice flexible. It is a splendid example of the marvelous control Caruso has of his voice.

BEAR OF TRADITION CAUGHT BY INDIAN

Only Known Mounted Specimens in Museum at Victoria, B. C.
 Vancouver, B. C., April 28.—Two handsome specimens of the skins of the ursus hermiodi, a white bear, not of the species of the polar bear, have been received in the city, and are to be seen at a sporting goods store, where they have been left by R. G. Cunningham of Port Harrison, who has succeeded, after trying for a long time, in obtaining them from an Indian hunter of the Klusumskum district. It is said that they were left by a second wife of the British museum.

Only two mounted specimens of this exceedingly rare bear are in existence. They are at the British Columbia museum. At the time of their capture several years ago they attracted wide interest. For a time they were unnamed, as they could not be classified. Finally they were named the "ursus hermiodi," after the curator of the British Columbia museum in Victoria. This bear is seen at rare intervals on Gribble Island, situated at the mouth of Douglas channel. They are never caught with traps and are seldom shot. They are renowned in Indian tradition as the most cunning and fiercest of the bear family. Their claws and even skull differ from the ordinary bear. These two, which were shot by the Klusumskum Indian, were the only two got within the memory of any living Indian hunter.

Approved Course in Letter

"Of course," said Colonel Roosevelt, "Mr. Taft was away, as everyone knows, while I was discussing this matter with the officials of the departments of commerce and labor and justice, but before and after he came back the matter was repeatedly brought up at cabinet meetings and discussed at length.
