DEAN OF AMERICAN SUFFRAGISTS

Mrs. Antoinette Blackwell, who, although 87, is one of the most active members of the woman's suffrage organizations in New York. Mrs. Blackwell is a firm believer that a woman's place is in her home, but she is also equally positive that a woman should have some say in the making of the laws by which she must abide.

He falls behind his classes in school and is not able to grasp the lessons assigned to him. Finally his face becomes drawn and dull looking. Then, too, breathing through his mouth causes the face to become deformed, the palate is arched and the teeth do not have their proper contour.

You like to at least "appear able to trade there." This is all cruelly wrong to the man and husband who is the producer of the family. Has it ever occurred to you how many men are turned into human treadmills by their unthinking wives? Stop a moment, look at your own man, gray-haired before his time, with really shadowy of the treadmill on his worn face. Doesn't something clutch at your heart as you look across the table at him, and note with a shock how he is changing—changing visibly, day after day?

There is a terrible fatality about the charge account. It induces buying when the demand for cash, or the absence of cash, would have precluded that purchase. You buy a dozen silly things you never use, and you only wanted for a time. You forget to keep an itemized note of your expenditures, and are floored, as your husband is, when the monthly bill comes in and you discover how far you have exceeded the amount allotted to you to spend, all because you did not keep track of those purchases! Such home conditions are at the base of those cases of respectable men and husbands who become defaulters to their employers and liars and hypocrites to their friends.

PRESENT DAY HATS AND STYLES IN HAIR DRESSING CAUSE LOSS OF HAIR

We Cannot Change the Styles, but We Can Check Falling Hair

Up to the time we began to civilize him a bald headed Indian was a thing unknown. Wearing nothing on his head except the covering furnished by nature and being a stranger to the use of a hair brush, especially the public one, the scalp and hair had plenty of ventilation, much sunlight and, hence, a condition favorable to a luxuriant growth of hair existed at all times.

Adenoids

By Dr. Edith B. Lowry. RECENTLY we hear so much of adenoids. It does not seem that we ever used to hear of them. They are like appendicitis—an old disease with a new name. People used to have appendicitis and die of it, but it was called inflammation of the bowels or some similar name.

Styles in Sleeves for Elderly Women

By Elizabeth Lee. THAT long sleeves are fashionable even for the smartest evening gown, should be welcome news for the elderly woman who wishes to be modestly as well as becomingly dressed.

I can imagine a very lovely gown developed from ivory charmeuse and black lace or figured net that would be an excellent standby. The skirt finished with a slight train would be of the white silk, and the tube running up into points on the waist and down the arms over the wrists would be made from the lace. These sleeves should fit the arms perfectly and end in a point filled in with a lace ruffling.

Such a gown would come in for day or evening reception, dinner, luncheon, tea, etc., and, in fact, any occasion where a formal toilette is required. Another style of sleeve suitable for the elderly woman who is slender is formed of puffs from elbow to wrist, ending there in a frill. This would be pretty for an afternoon gown, the frill tied to the wrist with a ribbon.

The sleeves last mentioned from wrist to elbow is another becoming model. A simple linen frock closing down the left side, the edge cut into round scallops and buttoned or bound, fitted with a simple waist and wrist length sleeves, would be smart. The collar in sailor shape effect would be scalloped, also the sleeves at the wrist continuing up to the elbow. A chemise of fine embroidery would be in keeping with this dress. Small pieces of embroidery can be brought into use for making long sleeves.

I have to mind a biscuit colored wool, back satin gown that was brought up to date by a few motifs of black chiffon embroidered in and applied with cream. The skirt was cut away in the front at the hem and slashed to close up the left side. The part cut away was filled in with the embroidery and the bottom of the skirt hemmed with black chiffon, which ran up the side to the waist line.

DELIVERS ADDRESS ON LAW ENFORCEMENT

Miss Frances Gottshall addressed the Central W. C. T. U. at last Wednesday afternoon's meeting. Her subject was "Legislation and Law Enforcement." She is the superintendent of this branch of W. C. T. U. work. She is a business woman, carrying on with success the printing establishment left her by her father. She is an earnest White Ribboner, giving of her time and means to help on the work.

her work, July 21 is observed, her birthday anniversary, as a red letter day. She was the first editor of the Union Signal, the W. C. T. U. newspaper. Mrs. Harrison White Kinsey secured her services at a Chautauque held at Gearhart Park. Miss West was at the time on her way to Japan. I met her there and was much impressed by her earnestness and ability. She was very well informed on all subjects of interest. Miss Clara Parrish and Miss Flora Street have succeeded her in the work, Miss Ruth Davis being the present missionary. B. I. LYMAN.

CASH AND CHARGE ACCOUNTS

By Louise D. Mitchell. HE summed up result of all this talk about the cost of living is, as a grocer said to me, recently, "up to the wimmin'." In spite of years of housekeeping, the average woman today does not know how to keep house. She has a regulation system of planning and buying that she has carried on for years, and it has not occurred to her to study either the best uses for her money, the best kind of food to buy, or the best place in which to buy it at the price she can afford.

Now, the question is, where is all that energy going, which we call "brain force," that might have been used in keeping pace with the changes in prices and needs? Six women to whom I put that question, answered: "into cards." If this is true, somebody and something is terribly wrong. If this is true in your case, then you have many things to answer for that it may take you all your later years to clear up.

The Latest Thing in Stoves

For a midnight supper, as for any other meal at any other time, the very latest thing in stoves—the best that stove-artists can do—is a
