

Valenciennes over Mousseline

Of Lace Quillings and Flowers

Fishnet and Rosebuds

SUMMER HATS OF FILMY FABRICS

BEHOLD the lingerie hat at its best! No longer does the title suggest one type of embroidered hat, for all varieties of filmy fabrics that make for comfort in their absence of weight, and for beauty in their weaves, are used by clever makers—and by women who can copy these models.

The frames are purchasable at little expense; the fabrics are in great abundance, and the styles are here. Therefore, madame, the lingerie hat is yours.

Shadow lace is one of the favorites this season. It is combined with large roses in a becoming shape, with a binding of figured silk. The crown is of pink flowers; the brim is wide and formed of the lace pleated in from the edge and placed over the palest-pink chiffon.

In another model the crown is pleated. These radiate from the crown and, after being stitched around the crown, are allowed to cover the brim in a full sweep. A wreath of roses and forget-me-nots defines the crown. The underbrim of this shape is lined with blue-and-pink muslin.

Point d'esprit is shirred over cords and covers the round crown and brim of the flat hat that shows pale yellow roses and wheat as trimming. The underbrim is of yellow maline shirred and applied on a cord. Simplicity is here in the yellow-and-white combination that would be particularly becoming to a brunette.

A smaller hat is trimmed with quillings of lace that form the high crown. Silk quillings hold in the center of the lace frills, and a cluster of roses at each side continues the pink color scheme to a delightful end. The edge of the brim is trimmed with silk and lace forms the under surface.

Irish lace forms the crown and part of the brim of a handsome model with a front trimming. The edge of the brim is of chiffon, and a quilling of the latter is used to define the irregular line of the overlapped lace. Roses and wheat in an upstanding bunch are held in place under black velvet ribbon.

Allover valenciennes lace is combined with pink roses and white plumes in a hat with an upturned brim. The lace is applied plain over pale-blue mousseline. A pale-blue silk puffing trims the edge of the brim. Underneath there is slight fullness to soften the line next to the face. It carries the stamp of approval of Paris makers and of well-dressed Parisiennes.

Fishnet is a very inexpensive exploitation of the lingerie-hat idea. It is placed over silk muslin, which is excellent in a contrasting shade, and a wreath of rosebuds encircles the crown.

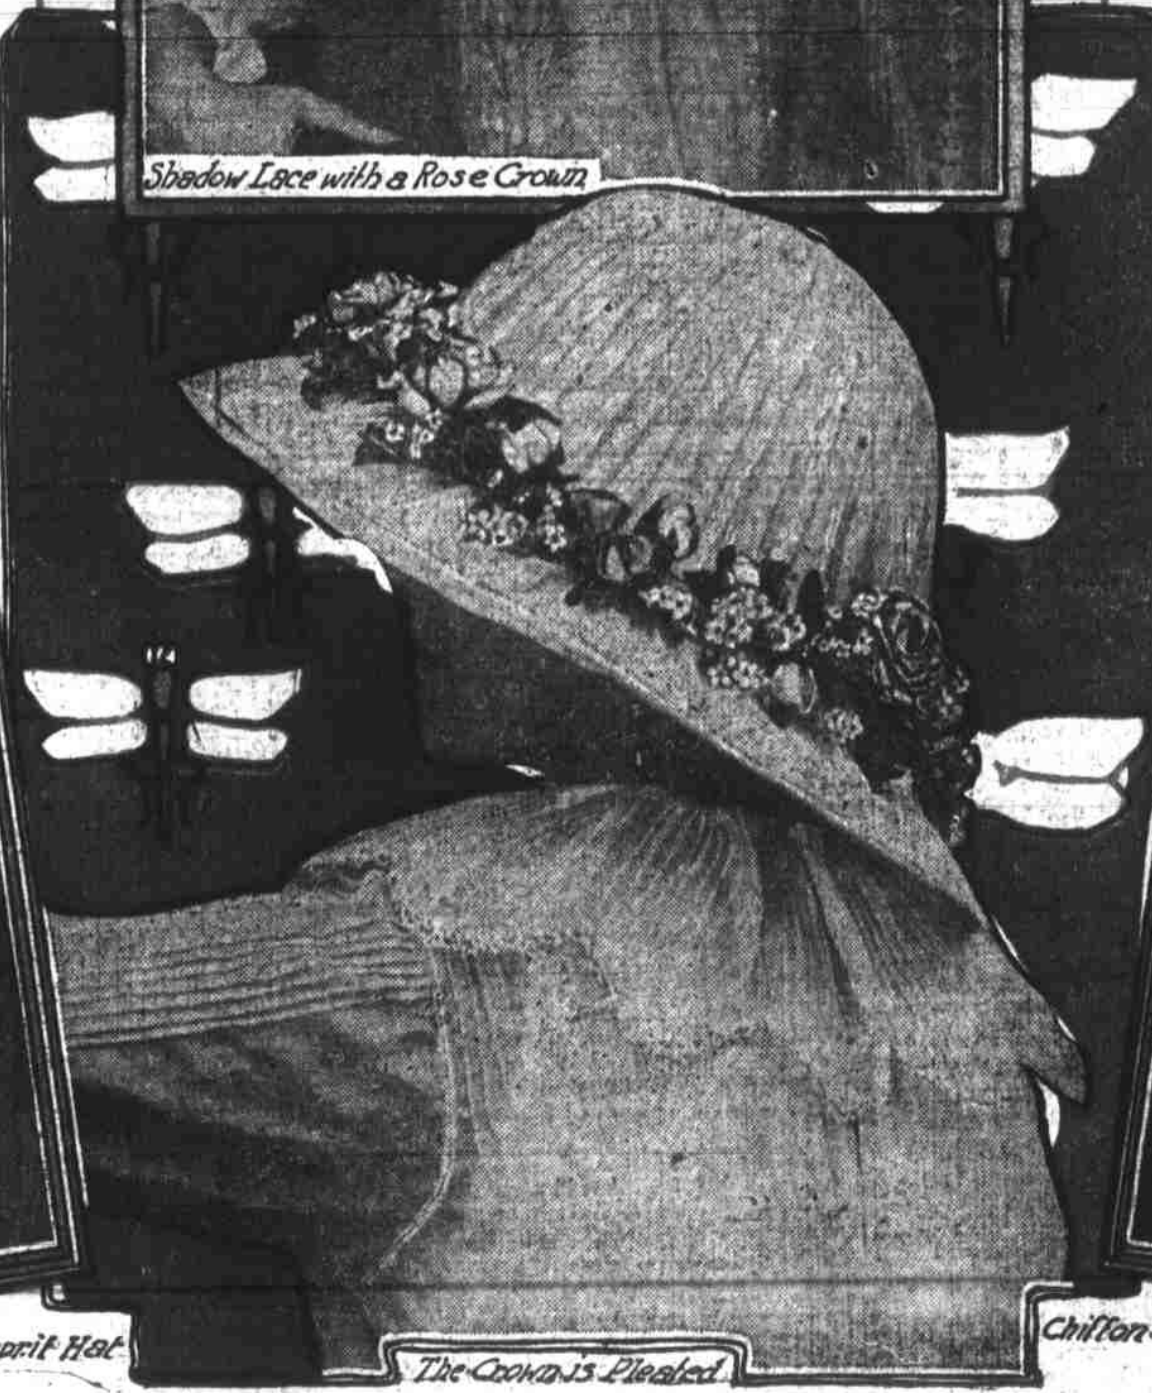

Surely, as a relief from the straw hat that is already showing signs of wear, these fabric hats offer an inducement hard to ignore. They are representative of the best in the artistic millinery which has been characteristic of the summer. They are eloquent reminders of the fact that beauty and good style go hand-in-hand along the way that is ever interesting to womankind.

Shadow Lace with a Rose Crown

The Point D'esprit Hat

The Crown is Pleated

Chiffon and Irish Lace