Willamette Will Be in Commission Latter Part of Aug-Than Heretofore.

Steam was made in the boilers of the Port of Portland suction dredge Willamette at the Willamette Iron & Steel works yesterday afternoon, and it was expected to turn the main engines over for the first time this morning, according to Captain Hugh T. Groves, superintendent of dredges, and J. B. C. Lockwood, consulting engineer for the port, who went down to the shipyards this morning to witness the operation.

Captain Groves said that they expected the contractors to be through about August 15, after which the dredge will be put through an eight hour test at the dock. It will then be taken out into the harbor and given a test at digging. The Willamette will be in commission and ready to assist the other dredges now working on the main channel about the last of August, according to present prospects. That will get her out by the time low water comes in the Columbla river.

All bars in the Columbia will be taken out down to 28 feet this year, which is a foot deeper than was cut last year. The Portland is now at Reeder's Crossing, and she is expected to have that shoal down to the 28 foot depth the first week in August, after which she will move to another bar. The dredge Columbia has a long cut at Henrici's bar, as she is working in the 30 foot contour there this year.

The Bank line steamship Orteric, which is expected in port the last of this month, draws 27 feet loaded, and Captain Groves says that she would have no difficulty in getting out of here with a full cargo. The agents of the line have stated that she will go out of here with as much as she can carry, taking a full cargo if she can go down the river with 27 feet draft.

RIVER WELL LIGHTED

Port of Bandon Aids Mariners to Navigate Coquille River.

Great credit is given to the port of Bandon by Captain Levi Snyder, master of the gas steamer Anvil, for an innovation which it has instituted for helping mariners entering or leaving the port at night. He says that they have placed a series of arc lights from the end of the jetty at the mouth of the Coquille river to the town, there being about a dozen lights. Whenever a vessel enters or leaves the port at night she signals with her whistle and the lights are turned on. He says that they are a great help to a navigator and in addition to this they have placed area on the ranges, the globes being red to distinguish them from other This has been done by the people of the port themselves, he says, as they could get no help in the matter from the government.

TWO SCHOONERS MOVED

Inca Taken to Westport; Robert R. Hind to He Moved to Astoria.

Two schooners in the Columbia river for offshore lumber cargoes are being moved by the steamer Monarch today. The Inca, which has been having new masts stepped at the St. Helens ships yards, goes to Westport to load for Valparalso under charter to Comyn, Mackall & Co, and as soon as she has been berthed the Monarch will tow the schooner Robert R. Hind from that place to Astoria. She is loaded for Kahului under charter to Dant & Russell. The backentine Amaranth, also under engagement for a lumber cargo to Valparaiso, finished loading at St. Johns last night and will put to sea as soon as she secures a crew. She is under chartake out between 1,200,000 and 1,300,000

Contends Monmouth Normal Not Affected by U.-O. Decision Yesterday; State Officials Think Otherwise.

(Salem Bureau of The Journal) Salem, Or., July 24 .- A surprising turn was taken in the Monmouth normal referendum case yesterday when President J. H. Ackerman presented a voucher to Secretary of State Olcott on the $50,000 appropriation involved, and contended that the normal was now entitled to the fund. On the advice of Attorney General Crawford, Olcott refused to honor the claim.

He denied that the normal school case was affected by the decision of the supreme court in the University of Oregon referendum case, and contends that the only decision which affects the normal appropriation is Judge Galloway's first decision sustaining the injunction Attorney General Crawford says it was mutually understood that the normal school case should abide by the decision in the University case, but that this understanding was not in writing when the case was carried to the supreme court. However, he contends that Judge Galloway's decision so far as the normal appropriation is concerned is void anyway, as the supreme court held that the private individual who was the plaintiff and represented the normal in this case, could not legally bring such an action, but that it must be brought by a proper law officer of the state. As a result of this decision the University of Oregon referendum case was retried and was decided yesterday against the university. Attorney General Crawford says no
