Events in Society

It is imperative that those contributing news for the Sunday society page should have it reach the desk of the society editor not later than Friday morning, or, if mailed or telephoned, news is always most welcome, but those who have affairs early in the week would confer a great favor by sending their reports in as soon after as possible, otherwise the volume of copy on Saturday may necessitate some items being left over for another day.

Word of the Robert B. Frenches.

The following note from the Chicago Post of July 23 will be of interest to many, as Mrs. French was a popular member of Portland society during the time Mr. French was president of the S. P. & S. railroad. He was succeeded by John F. Stevens.

"Mr. and Mrs. George Barton French of New York, formerly of Chicago, who have had the pillars at the Virginia Hot Springs, shortened their visit owing to the illness of Mrs. Hartley, Mrs. French's aunt, who is with them, and left yesterday for Southampton, L. I., where they will occupy the house of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Steele, who are going to Europe."

Wilson Club Meeting.

The first meeting of the Women's Wilson club, which Mrs. A. E. Clark is forming, will be held at her home, 819 Johnson street, Wednesday. Although Mrs. Clark is an ardent suffrage worker, the new Wilson club has nothing to do with suffrage, as the suffrage workers wisely decided at the beginning of their campaign to remain absolutely non-partisan in regard to politics.

Short Notes.

Edgar Courson and Miss Courson left Monday for Trout lake. While there they will climb Mount Adams. Later they will join Mr. Courson at Seaside, where they will stay until September.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Williams have gone to Newport to remain two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Alsworth have made the trip to Crater lake in company with Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Hopkins of Central Point.

Colonel Cornelius Gardner, U. S. A., and Mrs. Gardner, were cordially greeted.

WHAT THEY QUARRELED ABOUT

By Christine Terhune Herrick.

FRANCES rather prided herself upon her economy and especially upon her cleverness in preparing cheap cuts of meat in a savory way.

Therefore it was with some chagrin that she noticed one night that Paul took but little of the stew on which she had lavished her efforts and ate less than he looked. To observe and to comment were almost synonymous.

"Why don't you eat your dinner, Paul?" she asked.

His answer came promptly and bluntly.

"I don't like stewed meat."

"This was a body blow, but Frances met it bravely.

"That isn't ordinary stewed meat," she protested. "It has all sorts of good things in it—seasoning and mushrooms and sherry."

"It's stew, just the same," retorted Paul. "There's no getting around that. Tell me, Frances, why do we have stew? I can't bear them and I don't believe you like them yourself. Honestly, wouldn't you rather have a good steak, or chops, or veal cutlet, or roast chicken?"

"Or sirloin, or game, or capon, or spring lamb," went on Frances. "Yes, of course I would, if we could afford it. But those things cost money."

"And don't those stewed things cost money too?"

"Yes, but nothing like so much."

"Frank, I'll bet you a pound of carmellets that they cost more than the chops and steaks and things, and I can prove it."

"I'd like to hear you do it!"

"Well, here goes. Is a thing ever an economy that is wasted?"

"No, I suppose not."

"Then look at this dish. You've eaten about a tablespoonful of it, and at the Presidio in San Francisco today after having used two years in the north a portion of the time in Portland. Their attractive quarters at the Presidio, where the colonel is to command for some time, were made beautiful with flowers culled from the gardens of the government reservation.

Miss Genevieve Hailey has been enjoying a visit in Salem with Miss Ellen Thielson.

Dr. and Mrs. L. M. Davis have been visitors at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Lee Baker, Seattle.

Miss Mabel Bell is in Vancouver, B. C., where she is the guest of Mrs. T. A. Bell.

Mrs. James T. Wallace is spending the summer months in Astoria with her mother, Mrs. N. Clinton.

Birthday Party.

Victor Hugo Dunn was greeted by a number of his friends on his sixteenth birthday, July 24. Games and refreshments made an enjoyable occasion for the guests. Master Dunn has looked forward to his sixteenth birthday with anticipation, as that marks the time when he may enter the Clinton Kelly school. His guests for the afternoon were: Bertha Morgan, Bonniel Morgan, Alice Hickey, Mellison Oades, Beulah Dunn, Earl Dunn, Richard Holmberg, Olive Kinig, Mrs. Kinig, Mrs. Myrtle Dunn and James Dunn.

A Chat About Beds

By Elizabeth Lee.

SINCE iron and brass beds have taken the place of the old-time wooden beds, young housekeepers are often puzzled to know which of the two will be in harmony with the rest of the furniture.

The rule is, brass and walnut, mahogany, or other dark woods, and enameled beds, or beds of birch, cypress, or other light woods, are in harmony with the rest of the furniture.

Brass ornaments sometimes decorate iron bedsteads. In buying one should take care to see the quality of the brass is good. Otherwise the bedstead will be discolored in a very short time. The lacquer will wear off and the ornaments become loose and so break off with the slightest knock.

It is best in the long run to buy good bedding. Persons who work hard all day are entitled to the most comfortable bed that can be bought and good bedding will last a very long time, with care.

The upholstered box springs are considered the best, but there are good woven springs at less cost than the box, that will be found very comfortable indeed. In the case of selecting the box springs, it will be a good plan to make a slip cover of some thin, washable fabric to cover the upholstery, and so keep it from getting soiled. This being removable, can, of course, be washed from time to time. Hair mattresses are considered superior to the cotton filled.

Many people have an idea white horsehair is more desirable than dark, but I am informed by an authority in such matters there is absolutely no difference whatever either in the texture or the wear. It costs more to buy white and that is all the difference there is. Mixed hair, that is, black and white, goes into most of the mattresses made except those for infants and small children, when white is used.

The cotton mattresses or felt, as they are called, are a great improvement over the old fashioned kind, which went to lumps, because half worn out. The new method of layer upon layer of cotton prevents any lumping whatever, because it is so closely packed. As a matter of fact, the average mattress of a few inches deep has been packed from a stack of layers of cotton measuring three feet deep. As a result, the cotton is almost solid before it goes into the ticking. Very few feather beds are used nowadays, but pillows continue to be filled with feathers, although quite a number of persons believe in the hair pillow. It is cooler for one thing, and this makes a hair filling desirable for an infant's pillow.

The size of pillows has decreased in late years. The correct pillow is packed with hair rather than soft and only about half the former thickness.

People, too, have found out light bed covering giving warmth is far preferable to heavy quilts and comforters. A thin lambwool comfortable will give twice the heat of a cotton filled spread three times the weight of the woolen one. An elderdown makes an ideal bed cover, because it gives the greatest amount of heat with the least possible weight.

A thin, washable blanket is more than a heavy one of cotton, but a little cotton in a woolen blanket is an advantage because it helps the wear, being stronger and tougher than the woolen threads.

A blanket entirely of wool will first wear thin and then break into a large hole. Woolens never tear into small holes.

The bedspread is of cotton always. Personal taste will determine what kind.

AMERICAN FASHIONS

By Cora Moore; Design by Lillian Young.

SPECIALLY attractive for summer are the robes that come semi-made at the shops and that require no particular cleverness to put together. The one illustrated is of white marquisette, with the long, gracefully hung skirt of plain material. A simple half fringe to finish the train-edge and a wash of flame colored satin wound twice about the waist to terminate in long-tasseled streamers are the only extra touches required.

Beside the marquisette robes are to be had in many other reproductions of the worsted cloths, such as cotton, tweed, crash, sponge and croton, the crotons being especially attractive and possessing the advantage of requiring no ironing.

The colored materials fashions is shown to the loosely woven mesh and to those in which there is a mixture of tone, as, for instance, a gray woven over black, cadet blue over a certain shade of green, and cream with almost any color desired. Then a yard or two of solid color material is included in the pattern, or a few yards of embroidery embodying the color of the under weave. There are a number of fabrics of this nature which have come out since the season opened, many of them possessing of a peculiar color tint, in addition to distinction of weave. Probably no previous season has offered such an extended range of colors in cottons or of cotton materials.

Of the robes the assortment likewise is large and varied. Among them are always a few that are cut circular, particularly among the batistes, and these should be avoided, because it is difficult to adjust them satisfactorily to the prevailing modes. It is a safe hazard, that they are left over from last season.

However, if one finds a bargain that is not to be resisted, the circular cut is best treated by the laying of deep plaits from the hem by graduating them into nothingness toward the top; or, sometimes it will be found profitable to incorporate the flare in a single wide-plait or panel at the back with a corresponding one in front. Still again, the disadvantage of the circular effect may be obviated by cutting the robe through the center in an arched effect, then fixing the section removed as a flounce to the upper part after gathering it to proper narrow proportions, taking in the fullness of the flounce in a deep lengthwise fold.

Facings and self-handings are much used in making up these robes, but nearly all of them comprise two or more materials. Silk also is combined with them, for a dash of color is rarely absent. Neither are all of the robes in which, on the contrary, there are some bewitching patterns in color, with embroidery of another color or white; and there are some gauze-like effects that include a few yards of the same material scattered over with detached flower sprays woven in Berlin work, which can scarcely be told from hand embroidery. These patterns are always in the odd Hungarian color mixtures and not infrequently are accompanied by bandings of a solid color that match the predominant color of the flower sprays.

Then there are the pattern robes that are of daintier character, where batistes with some all-over embroidery or English eyelet, and printed organdies with plain colored material for trimming. Flowered and figured materials are very much in demand, for as they have been omitted from the fashion lists for several seasons, they are counted among the novelties. Moreover, they are very much in keeping with the trend of styles, just now, since they make up more or less picturesquely. They do,

STRIKING WATER INSTEAD OF ROCKS SAVED LIFE

(Special to The Journal.)

Cottage Grove, Or., July 22.—His life being saved by the fact that he fell into 12 inches of water instead of onto the sharp rocks a few feet away, Bert Richmond, an employee in the office of the O. & S. E. railway of this city, lies at his home in a precarious condition, although it is thought no internal injuries resulted and that his chances for recovery are good.

Richmond was assisting a crew on some repair work to the Wildwood bridge. It is thought a timber on which he was working gave way, precipitating him over the bridge to the bed of the river, 27 feet below, where the water checked his fall, but not sufficiently to prevent the rocks in the bottom of the river from inflicting painful injuries. The accident occurred in the forenoon and he did not regain consciousness until well along in the evening.

Mr. Richmond was hurt a short time ago when a gasoline speaker he was running jumped the track.

Mrs. Wincoff Is Buried.

(Special to The Journal.)

Cottage Grove, Or., July 22.—Mrs. C. H. Wincoff, who died at Eugene Thursday morning, was buried here Saturday under the auspices of the Grange, interment being made in Shields cemetery.

Mrs. Wincoff was one of the best known of the early residents here, and a prominent member of the Grange. She leaves a husband.

DOCK WORKERS' BALLOT ON STRIKE SETTLEMENT

(United Press Leased Wire.)

London, July 22.—A few of the dock workers who have been on strike here for the past 11 weeks, have returned to work. The local unions are balloting today to decide whether to accept the order of their leaders and end the strike. It appears that the men will refuse to return to work until their demands have been granted.

Missing Woman Located.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

San Rafael, Cal., July 22.—Apparently drugged and in a critical condition, Charlotte Martens, aged 19 years, missing from her home here since Saturday, was found unconscious early today, lying in a gully near her home.

SIUSLAW BOAT OWNER DIES IN EUGENE HOTEL

(Special to The Journal.)

Eugene, Or., July 22.—William Sausbert, a pioneer of the lower Siuslaw country, having large property interests at Acme and owning number of small ocean sailing vessels, died suddenly in his room at a local hotel last night, aged over 70 years. He had come to Eugene Friday to make arrangements with Porter Brock, contractor on the new Southern Pacific railroad from Eugene to Coos Bay, to transport a large amount of building material from San Francisco to Acme in one of his vessels. After the deal had been completed he engaged passage for home on this morning's stage, but when the hotel clerk went to awaken him he was dead. He had been troubled with heart disease for some time, and Corner Gordon pronounced that the cause of death.

Mr. Sausbert was engaged in the saw-mill business at Acme for years with his sons, but sold out several years ago. He had been a resident of the lower Siuslaw for 30 years or more.

LABORER, SUNSTRUCK, INSANE, IS A SUICIDE

(Special to The Journal.)

Rainier, Or., July 22.—Charles Cranshaw, a laborer who sustained a sunstroke about a week ago and has not been in his right mind since, jumped from a third story window of the Grand hotel at 6 o'clock this morning, struck the cement sidewalk and died 20 minutes later. He was locked in the hotel room by the constable last night to await transportation to St. Johns this morning, whence he was to be committed to the asylum for insane at Salem. He leaves a sister in Swan Valley, Cal. He was aged 41 years.

Singer Shot by Husband.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

San Bernardino, Cal., July 22.—Mrs. Camillo Ruez is probably fatally injured as the result of wounds inflicted by her husband, who fired two bullets into her body just as she finished singing "La Paloma" at a musical recital given at the home of her father here. Ruez fired through the window at his wife. A policeman followed him but was too late to prevent Ruez from putting a bullet through his own brain. Ruez was a resident of San Diego. The couple had separated.
