Dinner Given.

Miss Ada Conry entertained with a dinner party at her home last evening. The living room and dining room were profusely decorated with sweet peas and asters, red and white being used as the sound country. color scheme for the evening. In the center of the table was a huge bowl of prize sweet peas sent to Miss Conry from Seattle. Those who enjoyed the hospitality of Miss Conry were Miss Irma Nelson, Miss Ruth Byers, Ray Templeton, Clynton Bennett and Clayton Hexter.

Second Suffrage Tea.

A charming event enjoyed yesterday by about 20 women was the second of Mrs. A. E. Clark's suffrage teas. The efective decorations prevailed, same corried out in the English suffrage colots of purple, green and white, and the Oregon yellow. Miss Gladys Brown and Miss Ethel Miller served punch. Favors for the afternoon were miniature green brooms with the inscription, "We sweep clean." Mrs. Clark greeted her guests in a stunning gown of apricot crepe with an overdrape of net elaborated with embroldered crepe. A feature of the affair 🔶 was the brilliant paper, "Man's Immortality in Claiming a Right for Himself Which He Refuses to Grant Any Other Human Being," by Mrs. Emma B. Carrol, which she read by request. | + Mrs. Carroll declared that so long as men are responsible for a double standard of values in the home we shall continue to have husbands, sons, fathers and brothers arrayed against wives, mothers, daughters and sisters. Mrs. Carrol said further in part:

"The most stupendous vocation known to the human mind is that of bringing up and educating the child. More wisdom, more character, more mental, moral, intellectual and spiritual force is daily expended in the creditable raising of a single child than is required in all has honored a requisition from the state other avenues of human effort. QUEEN MOTHER GIVES ENGLISHMEN NEW HOT WEATHER CONCOCTION

(United Press Lessed Wire.) London, Aug. 9.-To the queen mother, Alexandra, is attributed the invention of London's most popular hot weather drink: The juice of crushed peaches and oranges is used in equal parts, a few slices of cucumber are added, sugar to taste, and a slight pinch of ginger, the whole being mellowed with maraschino, then placed on ice, where it must remain at least two hours before serving. The concoction, which was first served at one of the early summer functions at Maribor-House, may now be obough tained at almost any aristocratic sideboard in London
