business from this port. Porced to Accept Bate.

After the first boat had sailed last September, when freight rates from the sound were then only $2 a ton, they were raised to $2.50 a ton, a differential in favor of the sound of 50 cents a ton. Portland shippers, in order to reach the orient, had no recourse but to accept.

This rate continued until about January 1, when rates on the sound began to range around $2.50 a ton. They at once jumped to $3 a ton from Portland. This discriminatory rate could be enforced because Portland shippers, in order to get to the orient, had to take these rates or lose all their business.

Yet in the face of all this discrimination, the ships sailing out of here have been filled, showing the potential strength of the oriental trade from this port. Requests for additional space on the Hercules, soon to sail, have had to be denied unless it happens that some of the shippers do not use all the space water departments and their consequent at present engaged. The Hercules takes about 6300 tons,
