MAN WHO MARRIED FOR $25 IS GIVEN ONE TO FIVE YEARS

Thought Marriage Contract Would Be Safe in Basement and Is Sorry Now He Left It There.

(Special to The Journal.)

Vancouver, Wash., Sept. 13.—Quick justice was meted out to Scott Sylvester Brown, alias Earl E. Vance yesterday by Judge Donald McMaster, who sentenced him to not less than one year nor more than five years in the state penitentiary at Walla Walla on his entering a plea of guilty to a charge of bigamy. Brown was arrested at Portland Wednesday evening on a warrant sworn out by his wife, who lives at Montavilla, charging bigamy in marrying Nanny Elizabeth White of Los Angeles on May 29, 1912, under the name of Earl E. Vance.

Brown was photographed at the county jail this morning and on returning to the corridors was asked by The Journal correspondent for the Los Angeles address of Nanny Elizabeth White. "What do you want to know for—you are not going to communicate with her, are you? If so, I advise you not to as she is unwell and the shock might prove bad for her."

"She is 23 years old and lives at 811 Clauton street, Los Angeles.

"The contract, as near as I remember, was to the effect that she would not trouble me after the ceremony, that she would go her way and I mine, and that after six months she would get a divorce. She said she was the victim of a Los Angeles millionaire and business man, and that to shield him and blind her family, she wanted to say she was married and to be able to produce her husband if need be. We signed the contract in the Vancouver postoffice.

"I hid the contract in the basement of my home because I thought it was safe there and no one could find it. I would be foolish to rent a vault to put it in, I thought.

"I don't know what my wife said when she found it, neither do I know personally that it was found. I have not seen my wife for over a month and if she has applied for a divorce, I have not been notified of it."

Brown corresponded with Miss White at Los Angeles where she went on the day of the wedding, and she sent him $30 to pay his fare to Los Angeles. He had arranged for passage on the steamer Bear and intended to leave Portland this week to join his contract-wife, who gave him $25 for going through the ceremony.

Prison authorities have been notified and a guard will likely reach Vancouver today to take Brown to the penitentiary.

PORT ARTHUR HERO SACRIFICES SELF TO SHOW HIS SORROW

mony from the whole empire, and the streets were gay with color, no black being worn as a sign of mourning. The principal official event of the day was the proclamation of amnesty by Emperor Yoshihito to political offenders, in which, however, those members of the anarchist band of Denjiro Kotoku, still held in prison, were not included.

Student Worshipers Injured.

The only serious accident of the day was the collapse of a hall at Meiji university. The hall was crowded with students engaged in worshipping the spirit of the dead mikado, and so great was the crush that the whole hall collapsed and more than 100 students were injured in the wreck.

More than 1,000,000 people saw the last public honors paid to the Japanese emperor who saw his country emerge from semi-barbarism to become one of the leading powers of the world. Massed by hundreds of thousands they stood as the splendid cortege wound through the capital city while evening fell, closed doors and windows hermetically sealed behind them, while over the smart military uniforms of New Japan and the flowing silks of an older day flared thousands of torches in the hands of soldiers who formed a solid avenue of flame from the palace gates to the place of ceremony.

Promptly at 6 o'clock the whole imperial guards division, 10,000 strong, paraded in front of the imperial palace. At 8 o'clock the signal was given for the departure of the imperial coffin and instantly the whole body of trumpeters of the guards blew the hymn of national mourning in a low and melancholy tone. Immediately the casket enclosing the remains of the dead mikado was brought forth and placed upon the funeral car, gorgeous with decoration and in front of which blazed the imperial crest of the chrysanthemum.

Drawn by Sacred Bullocks.

Harnessed to the funeral car were the four mandari ushi or sacred bullocks, especially selected according to immemorial custom for the obsequies of the ruler who is half god.

As soon as the body of the dead ruler rested upon its bier a sharp order detached about 5000 of the Imperial Guards, who, at a slow march, passed out of the palace grounds into the jammed but silent streets. Behind them fell in the bands of Shinto priests always attendant on the mikado and certain other functionaries bearing aloft white and yellow flags, bows and arrows, shields, halberds, Sakaki (sprigs of the god tree) and the imperial bands. Then came the court officials, headed by the master of the imperial household, and then the emperor's coffin.

Officers as Pallbearers.

The casket was attended by six chamberlains and 20 army and navy officers as pallbearers; the grand chamberlain and aids-de-camp to his majesty; Prince Kanin and Princess Kanin, who represented the Emperor Yoshihito and the Princess Higashifushimi, who represented the empress dowager, escorted by officers of the Imperial Guards.

After Prince Kanin the presidents of the state funeral committees and their committees were in line. They were followed by the princes of the blood and their aids-de-camp, two representatives of the nobles having direct relationship with the dead emperor, the holders of the Dai-kun-i (Grand Order of the Chrysanthemum); officials of Shinnin rank (ministers, generals, admirals, etc.), and other dignitaries among whom were State Secretary Knox of the United States, Admiral James Reynolds, U. S. navy, and Brigadier General John Pershing, U. S. army; Prince Arthur of Connaught, for Great Britain; Prince Henry of Prussia, for Germany, and General Lebon, for France.

Long Funeral Parade.

More than 12,000 persons took part in the funeral march, which was so long that its van had arrived at the Aoyama parade grounds before the last detachment had left the palace. Meantime throughout the streets en route hardly a sound was heard but the steady tramp, tramp, tramp of the feet of thousands mingled with the low music of the imperial bands as they droned out the funeral march.

Arriving at the Aoyama parade grounds for the funeral ceremony the dead ruler's cortege debouched from the semi-gloom of the city streets into a perfect blaze of light. Hundreds of electric lights shone aloft and at regular intervals during the services from the two Shinto torii, or altars, scores of Kagariki, or watch fires, roared ruddily as the body was borne in.

Fences Surround Grounds.

Surrounding the whole enclosure about the grounds, but especially for the obsequies were tall bamboo fences, and within them in specially assigned positions, the women of the court, wives of the officials of Shinnin, Chokunin, Hannin and Sonin rank, abbots of the Hoganji (the temples), foreigners and their wives and dignitaries of the governments of the cities of Japan awaited in dead silence the celebration of the spectacle.

Just inside the second torii, or shrine, the Emperor Yoshihito, the Empress and the empress dowager, with the princesses of the blood met the imperial coffin bowing low before it as it was brought forward to the main building.

It was nearly 10 o'clock when the funeral services began in solemn silence, holy offerings and multi-colored silks and brocades were laid before the coffin while the Shinto priests chanted mournfully. Then the grand master of the ceremony read from the Shinto burial ritual and the emperor, the empress and the empress dowager, leaving their attendants, each advanced singly to the coffin and offered prayer. They were followed by the princes and princesses of the blood on the conclusion of whose supplications the whole body of royalty retired.

Following the departure of royalty all of those present approached the coffin and prayed, after which, amid melancholy songs, the imperial body was removed to the special train which left at 2 o'clock Saturday morning for Momoyama, Kioto. There Mutsuhito will lie on the crest of a 300 foot hill looking across a narrow valley to where lies Kwammu, who ruled in Nippon 1000 years ago.

SIX MEN CHOSEN FOR TANNER JURY

Mother Sits by Side of Young Prisoner on Trial for First Degree Murder.

Six men have been tentatively accepted as jurors in the case against Willard Tanner, charged with first degree murder for the death of Ray Wallace in an Alder street rooming house. They are S. Eber, A. Kaeserbaum, J. A. Palmer, W. H. Ballard, G. J. Hull and C. H. Thompson, 22 men have been excused for cause. At this rate a jury will not be secured before Tuesday.

By the side of Tanner sits his mother, who has journeyed across the continent to give all assistance possible in his hour of trouble. At times she appears overcome with grief, on the first day of the trial giving completely away to her feelings. She calls Tanner "The baby of the family," as he is only 19 years old.

Hazel Erwin will be a witness in the case, possibly for both sides. Attorneys for Tanner have intimated they would call her, as has also the district attorney. She will be sentenced for manslaughter September 24 for complicity in the killing of Wallace.

A. W. SMITH, REALTY MAN, HELD IN JAIL

WEALTHY NEW YORKER AND HIS WIFE SHOT WHILE AUTOMOBILING

Mysterious Shooting From Ambush Likely to End Fatally for George Hanner.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 13.—Shot from ambush by an assassin who escaped, George Hanner and his wife are near death today in a hospital at Niagara Falls. Neither Hanner, who is wealthy, nor his wife, could supply the police with any motive for the shooting.

The couple were en route to Buffalo in an automobile when the attack was made. As the machine turned into North Tonawanda, a suburb of Buffalo, a man opened fire from a clump of bushes. The first shot struck Hanner. The second shot struck Mrs. Hanner. Without stopping to investigate, the chauffeur drove at full speed to a Niagara Falls hospital. Physicians say Hanner will die.

JACKSON DEMOCRATS TAKE FIRST PLACE IN AIDING WILSON FUND

ing that the active work of gathering funds is under way and that other counties may soon be expected to render reports as Jackson has done, in greater or lesser amounts.

"I will accept the appointment and go out and get the money," says Judge R. B. eBatie of Clackamas county.

"We will endeavor to do our share for the success of Mr. Wilson this fall," writes W. F. Jackson of Sherman county.

Herman Wise of Clatsop county has undertaken the work in Clatsop and Columbia counties. He has sent out some forceful letters and expects soon to make a complete report.

Thomas C. Burke of Baker county is appealing to all the precinct committeemen to "get busy" forming Wilson clubs and subscribing for the fund.

Dr. C. J. Smith at Pendleton is stirring up the Democrats of Umatilla and has volunteered to do work in adjoining counties.

From Douglas, Crook, oJsephine, Lane and other counties replies have come, each promising to go to work promptly and get the funds in shape within 10 or 15 days.

Contributions to be of the best must be made soon. To wait until the last weeks is to weaken the force of each dollar. It is important that the committees be enabled to do their work promptly.

Now is the time to forward your dollars to The Journal. Direct contributions to this paper do not interfere with the other work along the same line. Send in the dollars according to your means, several of them if you can, and ask your neighbors what they can do.

Coupons clipped from The Journal should accompany each subscription, so the needed information as to each contributor may be supplied and receipts given.
