U. OF O. FRESHMEN TOLD TO BE MEEK

President Campbell Urges Modesty and Silence Upon First Year.

(Special to The Journal.)
University of Oregon, Eugene, Or., Sept. 19.—In contrast to the rapid entrance of Oregon's largest freshman class yesterday, the registration of the older students today was not fast, indicating that many will return a few days late. This is to a certain extent customary. For when not returning until next Monday the students miss but two days of recitations and gain practically one week more vacation. In spite of this fact, the total registration at the close of the second day stood 610, more than 300 of whom are freshmen. This is much in excess of last year at the same time.

Oregon's mammoth baby class received its first education today from President Campbell, when it was politely told to keep still, assume some modesty and to come to college for a little more knowledge than it already possesses. This occurred in the annual heart to heart talk, in which the president gives the "fresh" some general friendly directions. He related that having had been abolished because of its dangerous possibilities, but stated that in order to become part of a communalistic body, such as the students form in the smaller colleges, cooperation is very essential; and he advised the first year men to submit readily to the minor duties imposed by the upper classes.

He urged the freshmen to take a very general course for the first two years, leaving the latter two for specialization. He declared that the high schools of the state do not begin to prepare a student to know the English language, and urged the adoption of one or more English courses, stating that three years' English, two years foreign language and two physical training represent the only required subjects at Oregon. He urged all students to take some mathematics and science.

Business Alley to Be Paved.

(Special to The Journal.)
Albany, Or., Sept. 19.—In addition to all the street paving contracted for in Albany this year, an agreement has been entered into between the property owners along the alley between First and Second streets all the way from Lyon street to Washington street and the construction company that is doing it.

most of the work in Albany this year, enough, the work will be completed this fall but in case the weather prevents its completion this fall it will be taken up early next spring as the paving of the alleys is an improvement that appeals particularly to the tenants of the various properties, which is almost entirely business property.
