THE PAST week, socially seen, was a succession of functions of exceptional elegance and significance, which presages a gay winter season. Weddings, engagement announcements, debut parties, dinners and teas have followed each other in such rapidity as to make the week a veritable whirl. The coming week gives promise of being a busy one, although not so many large formal functions are announced.

The MacMaster-Mason wedding of Wednesday evening at Trinity church, followed by the wedding reception at the MacMaster home, which also marked the debut of Miss Maile MacMaster, and the Honeyman ball at the Hotel Multnomah Friday evening, when Miss Honeyman, Miss Grace Honeyman and Miss Evelyn Carey were formally presented to society, were the most notable functions of the week.

Another bridge of the week was Mrs. Roland Chapman's new dress, whose wedding Tuesday evening was a happy occasion, while another of the week's debutantes was Miss Helen Simon, whose coming out ball at the Hotel Multnomah last evening was a brilliant function.

Lights blazed from every corner of the Hotel Multnomah Friday evening, welcoming the elite of Portland society to the debut of Miss Evelyn Carey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Carey, who also made her formal entrance into society at this time. Miss Honeyman wore a superb robe of pink brocade liberty satin, with elaborate ribbons of white and blue, and with a wide white sash, made in becoming girlish fashion, and with which was combined dainty French roses. Miss Grace Honeyman wore a Lucile painter gown of white taffeta, with a wide white sash, and with a wide white sash, made in becoming girlish fashion, and with which was combined dainty French roses. Miss Evelyn Carey wore a gown of white taffeta, with a wide white sash, and with a wide white sash, made in becoming girlish fashion, and with which was combined dainty French roses.

Miss Grace Honeyman, at left, and Miss Honeyman, who were presented to society Friday evening at the Hotel Multnomah, given by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Honeyman.

The same beautiful effect was achieved—strikingly suggestive of autumn—for here, combined with the gorgeous leaves just turning yellow, russet and red, was a wealth of chrysanthemums, all of a delicate topaz tint, arranged in tall, slender brass vases, and in mammoth lacquer baskets, suspended along the walls. The orchestra was almost hidden from view with potted palms and garlands of greenery. The promenade walk leading from the ballroom was decorated for this occasion with growing plants and gold and white chrysanthemums. The banquet hall also presented an autumn-like effect by the use of branches of foliage, graceful ferns, with chrysanthemums and white tiger lilies.

The guest list included Messrs. and Madames: E. D. Adair, Charles F. Adams, J. C. Alsworth, William C. Alvord, N. E. Ayer, Winslow B. Ayer, John Bain, Bert C. Ball, R.
