Railroad Contractors Under Ban

The firm of Plagg & Standifer, railroad contractors, operating near Silverton, Or., are under the ban of official displeasure as far as the office of Mayor Rushlight is concerned. Seventeen men sent out to the firm by the Bennet Employment agency the other day, on the assurance that steady employment awaited them, were given an hour's work and two meals. According to the stories told Mayor's Secretary McCord by the men, they were then told that there was no more work. They had to walk back to Portland, but before they got started they said they were threatened with arrest if they did not pay for two meals they ate at the camp. When notified of the facts the Bennet Employment agency agreed to refund the fees that had been paid by the men.

To Defend Fish Warden

Attorney General Crawford will go to Tillamook Saturday to defend S. L. Rathbun, a fish warden, in a suit that has been instituted against him by fishermen residing on Tillamook bay for recovery of fishing gear. Rathbun appropriated a large quantity of fish because the fishermen persistently violated the law in taking salmon above the "dead line." The fishermen have charged Rathbun with taking the boats and nets for his own use. This is regarded by the state officials as a rather lame allegation, inasmuch as the warden was empowered by statute to sell the gear and the money received for it is already in the hands of the fish commission.

Entertain Sheriff-Elect

M. C. Dickinson, one of the managers of the Oregon hotel, and his wife, entertained Sheriff-Elect Tom Word and his family at a dinner party at the Oregon grill last night. A vote on the most popular man on the entire ticket was taken at the Oregon hotel some time before election and Mr. Dickinson resolved to present the winner with a silver loving cup. Last night was the occasion. It was originally intended to make the affair semi-formal, especially in the presenting of the cup, but the presence of the younger members of the Word family effectually prevented it.

Talk on Mountains

The Mazama club has arranged to give a series of "talks" upon the mountains of the northwest this winter. The first talk will be given by John H. Williams of Seattle at the East Side library tomorrow evening at 8 p. m. Mr. Williams is an author of several books descriptive of the mountains of the northwest. These "talks" are free to the public, and the Mazama organization cordially invites those especially interested in our mountains and mountain climbing.

Monday night. There will be a discussion of the reciprocity scheme of the association and a "short discourse" by Marshall N. Dana on the question of the location of the auditorium, to be followed by a general discussion of that subject. Plates will be $1 each.

Women Disappointed—The realization that no kitchen would be available slightly dampened the joy of the committee from the women's auxiliaries of the G. A. R. in the new courtrooms at the courthouse which have been thrown open to the G. A. R. and auxiliaries by the county court. It is the custom for coffee and light refreshments to be served at the meetings of the organizations, and in the new quarters this will not be possible unless arrangements are made for cooking. The rooms in the section of the building just being completed have been thrown open to the veterans and their women folks and to the United Spanish War Veterans.

Requirements of an Office Building

An office building to make a satisfactory home for a business institution or professional man must have character and distinctive identification. It must be in a good neighborhood with plenty of light and fresh air, and the "building service" must be the best. The Journal building offers all this at reasonable rentals to desirable tenants.

MAN PREFERS DEATH TO SEPARATION FROM WIFE

"If I can't live with my wife, I don't want to live," said Victor Lind to the officers Monday when he was taken in charge for attempting to kill himself at his home, 187 1/2 Chester street. Lind had purchased three revolvers with which to do the work.

Family trouble separated the couple a few weeks ago. After attempts to effect a reconciliation, Lind says he decided life was not worth living, except with his wife. His wife and friends took one revolver from him. He secured another, which they took from him. He is a bartender at a South Portland hotel. After taking the second weapon from him, he returned to the saloon and obtained another. Patrolmen Bales and Coulter found him at the saloon, took the revolver and locked him in the city jail. He promised Judge Taswell yesterday morning to not make further attempts upon his life.
