THE OREGON DAILY JOURNAL, PORTLAND, THURSDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 21, 1912.

P. R., L. & P. Co. Ordinance Slips in for Consideration at Committee Meeting, at Committee Meeting.

Action of the street committee of the city council this morning in deferring consideration of the proposed Heusner franchise brought upon the heads of the councilmen the wrath of a delegation, of nearly 75 property owners of northeast Portland and came to a climax in a heated personal debats between Councilmen Baker and Maguire.

Though the meeting had been called for the express purpose of discussing the Heusner franchise, as well as one being applied for by M. C. Dickinson and Calvin Heilig for the use of Seventh street, the committee permitted representatives of the Portland Railway, Light & Power company to submit amendments to the blanket franchise applied for by that company more than a year ago and proceeded to consider these amendments informally.

Attack Committee Members.

The session came to an abrupt close when Councilman Burgard made a mopermit the Portland Railway, Light & Power company to lay a narrow gauge track on Seventh street between Burnside and Hoyt within 60 days after the company shall have accepted the franchise for which it has made application. Councilman Maguire sought to road and East Sixtleth street. amend the motion by inserting a clause providing for the laying of three rails to make provision for a broad gauge track on the street in the event the Heusner franchise is also granted. Maguire's motion to amend obtained no second at first, and then Maguire and J. H. Nolta made a bitter personal attack on the members of the committee.

"It is plain to see that this committee does not intend to give the Heusner in-terests a fair deal," declared Nolta. "We don't expect one from the committee, but we are going to see that the interurban rails provided for in Portland company to use streets which the Heusner franchise are laid on Seventh street, if we have to appeal to the referendum

Maguire Becomes Angry.

Chairman Baker of the committee, protested, saying that he had accorded the delegation from Northeast Portland full recognition on the floor.

grant. They can ill afford to spend time in the council chambers when their business is shelved in the interests of the Portland company."

Chairman Baker called Councilman Maguire's attention to the fact that the Portland company's franchise had been taken up by unanimous consent of the committee. Maguire denied that he bridge, had consented to such a proceeding. He agree with the council as to the terms said he could "see through Baker's tac- for the use of the bridge. Since then bate when M. C. Dickinson arose and declared that the committee had evi-dently left out of the discussion alto-sether the fact that a third franchine on Seventh street is being applied for by Dickinson and Heilig. Mr. Dickinson slid he thought that any matters that affected all three franchises together should be considered at the same time. The committee finally decided to defer action on the Burgard motion and to take up the Seventh street matter this afternoon. Seventh street is soon to be widened between Hoyt and Burnside streets, and Councilman Burgard belaying of rails.

Broad Gauge Across Bridge. Before taking a recess at noon the committee voted to adopt a resolution asking the city executive board to have both broad and narrow gauge tracks laid over the Broadway bridge, so that local and interurban traffic may be accommo

The proposed blanket franchise of the Portland Railway, Light & Power com-pany is the same one that was tabled by the council several months ago when councilmen and the company could not agree on terms. Today the franchise was resubmitted informally with a number of amend-ments. The committee recommended the granting of a number of these amend-

One of the amendments provides that all county franchises within the city limits on streets already occupied by the company shall be eliminated in the franchise. The company wanted these eliminated because it holds that it already has all the rights it needs on the streets in question. The committee dis-sented from this view and ordered that the county grants be included in the contemplated franchise. The extensions affected are those on the Sandy boule-vard, East Lincoln street, East Eightieth street, Milwaukie street, Terrace.

Conflicts With Housner Franchise. An amendment eliminating the Mount Tabor extension, which has been granted before, was inserted.

Another amendment adopted was that providing for a single track on the Oregon and Adams street approaches to the new Steel bridge.

The East Harrison street extension was amended so that the line will skirt the Ladd squares, instead of going through them.

The most important amendment or dered was that which will permit the have already been included in the proposed Heusner franchise from the peninsula to the Broadway bridge. This amendment was inserted over the strong protest of Councilman Maguire and the northeast Portland delegation.

(Special to Tae Journal.) Grants Pass., Or., Nov. 21.—The 9-rear-old son of H. M. Pfefferly, justice of the peace living in the Waldo precinct, had a thrilling experience with a cougar Monday.

The lad was returning to his home from school, having some distance to go through the woods. Being late in returning the father started out to meet him, and when in the midst of a slashing heard the boy scream as though badly frightened.

Hurrying along the trail the father came upon his son paralyzed with fear, while a full grown cougar was crouched only a few feet away as though ready to spring, its tail lashing its tawny sides and its teeth gleaming white from its opened jaws.

The father rushed at the big cat and struck it in the face with a walking stick. The cougar turned and crept away in the brush. Tracks indicated that the animal had followed the boy some distance down the trail.
