START WORK ON A MILLION DOLLAR BUILDING, JAN. 1

(Continued From Page One.) Western Electric company when they granted us a franchise by such an overwhelming vote. I want to reiterate that the company will keep all its promises and that it will furnish an efficient service as obtains anywhere else in the United States.
Before I return to San Francisco next week I and the executive staff of the company will close deals for a number of sites for substations at various locations in the city.
Associated with Mr. Fielshacker in the subsidiary company which will erect the building on the Pittock block are Fred W. Leubert and George H. Kelly, local capitalists who need no further introduction in Portland than the mere mention of their names. S. O. Johnson, a multimillionaire timberman who controls extensive land and timber holdings around Klamath Falls, is also interested in the enterprise.
Much of the credit for bringing competition to Portland by inducing the Northwestern Electric company to enter the local light and power field belongs to Mayor Rushlight, Councilman John H. Burgard and George H. Kelly. These men, made a trip to San Francisco more than a year ago to meet the Fielshackers, with the object of persuading them to invade Portland. It was largely on the assurances given by the mayor and councilman that the Northwestern company was formed and a franchise was requested from the city council.
Mad Hard Fight.
The efforts of the Northwestern to obtain the franchise were stubbornly resisted for many months by the Portland Railway, Light & Power company. Even after the franchise was finally granted by the council the local company continued the fight, invoking the referendum on the grant. At the special election, November 2, the people of the city unmistakably expressed their desire for competition, approving the franchise by a vote of more than 10 to 1.
Early this year the Northwestern company, anticipating the result of the fight it was waging for a franchise, commenced the construction of the first unit of a green waterpower system, which will ultimately generate 100,000 horsepower. This unit consists of a large dam and generating plant on the White Salmon river three miles above Underwood, Wash. Work of construction is power line from this point to Portland has already been started, and the line will be finished by the time the final touches have been added to the White Salmon plant, which will generate 20,000 horsepower.
Coman's Rise Steady.
Within the next year the company expects to have another plant capable of generating 30,000 horsepower well under way. This will be located on the Klhickitat river in Washington, about 25 miles above Underwood. And within five years a third plant of 60,000 horsepower capacity will be constructed on the Lewis river about 40 miles from Portland.
W. E. Coman, who will manage the company, is one of the most popular railroad men in the Pacific northwest. For several years he has with the Harlan system, gaining promotion upon promotion, until he became general freight agent of the O-W-R. & N. company, then the O. R. & N. company, which position he resigned July 1, 1910, to accept the position of general freight and passenger agent of the North Pacific line and the Hill lines in Oregon, including the Oregon Trunk and the Oregon and the United Railways.
Mr. Coman is progressive and active

ARRIVAL OF BABY GIRL DELAYS DEPARTURE OF A MULTIMILLIONAIRE

OREGON TRIUMPHS WHEN A GAME LEG LIFTS A FIELD GOAL

(Continued From Page One.) Coach Dolan's men seemed suddenly to have lost their grip. Had they played in the first half as they did in the second, there might have been a different story to tell. Whether it was inability to get started or just the traditional bugaboo that was responsible for the Aggies' poor playing in the first quarter is unexplainable.
Story of the Winning Play.
In the second quarter there had been little action before the victory was turned. Walker shot a forward pass from the 40 yard line to Fenton and the ball was on the Aggies' 15 yard line. "Pat" Fenton fell to get it out of sufficient yardage and Cornell called upon his men to deploy for the place kick. They spread out in protective formation and Cauffield made a beautiful snap back to Cornell, who placed the ball on the turf as coolly as if he were laying down a four, and Fenton did the rest. It sent the big Eugene delegation into spasms of delight, while the hundreds in the opposite bleachers sent forth an encouraging cheer to the Agriculturalists.
Oregon and O. A. C. both tried place kicks in each quarter and once Fenton, from the 40-yard line, sailed one within a foot of the crossbars.
Lots of Dangerous Fumbling.
In the second half both teams resorted to punting and Fenton had it over Larson, who had replaced Blackwell in the kicking department. There was a great deal of fumbling of punts, and oftentimes the ball was recovered under the shadow of the goal post. On one straight football, which Coach Pinkham's men had concluded to discard in favor of forward passing, the variety had it over the collegians. Only once or twice did the Aggies take the ball on downs, the signalmen invariably punting on the third or fourth down. The luck was about even unless one chooses to call Fenton's goal a lucky one.
Second Team Man Shines.
Chrisman and May led the Aggies on defensive playing. Richardson, a second string halfback, was their star on offense, carrying the ball repeatedly for gain through the Oregon line or around the end. Kellogg was not up to his usual standard, while Hofer played brilliantly for a first-year man. Blackwell and Evenden were not in the game long enough to show to their best advantage.
For Oregon, Parsons, Cook, Fenton, Cornell, Hall and Bailey shone resplendently in a sparkling collection of "comebacks," who figured on paper to be beaten about two touchdowns. The only marbling of their playing was the necessity of Headlinesman Smith to inflict penalties for holding and offsides.
No "Rough Stuff" After Game.
There was general good feeling after the game and none of the hanting

POULTRY SHOW ENTRIES COMING IN RAPIDLY

PORTLAND BOY WINNER AT N. Y. HORSE SHOW

C. D. Minton, secretary of the Oregon Poultry and Pet Stock association, which will have charge of the poultry show to be held at Fifth and Yamhill streets, from December 9 to 14, stated yesterday that many entries for the competition are already made in spite of the fact that a week still remains to make the entries.
A particular feature of this show will be that more than half the birds that will be on exhibition will be white, for the classes that will be the most widely represented are the White Rocks, White Orpingtons, White Wyandottes and White Leghorns.
In addition to the chickens that will be shown, there will be many Belgian hares and Caviens. Entries for this show, in all divisions, must be made by December 23, and all entries received after that date must bear a postmark of November 23.
Considerable interest is being shown in the contest for the cup for the best display of 25 cockerels, for there will be four entries. The rules of the contest provide that the 25 cockerels shown must be of the same breed and owned and bred by the exhibitor.
Birds from Oregon, Washington, California and British Columbia will be shown at this exhibition.
Portland Boy Winner at N. Y. Horse Show
Lieutenant H. R. Adair, Tenth Cavalry, United States army, who on last Wednesday, at the New York horse show, won the international broad water jump by outdistancing 35 others, some of them crack foreigners, is a Portland man and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel D. Adair, of 438 East Eleventh street, North.
This event was considered one of the most brilliant features of the famous horse show and the performance of Lieutenant Adair was declared to be particularly noteworthy. Lieutenant Adair is a graduate of West Point Military academy and of the Mounted Service school of the United States army at Fort Riley, Kan. In the competition, Lieutenant Adair rode "Flee," a prize winning horse, which has often been exhibited.
Dog Owners Arrested.
The city "dog catcher" is again after owners of dogs upon which a city license tag has not been taken. Two arrests were made yesterday by the police upon complaint signed by B. R. Welch, the

HOCKIN REMANDED TO JAIL; BOND IS DOUBLED BY COURT

BRILLIANT FLASHES ILLUMINE WATERFRONT

(Continued From Page One.) read an article by Miss Mary Field in the union's official monthly magazine, in which the trial was called a "farce." Judge Anderson was plainly angry at the defendants for permitting such an article to appear in their official organ at a time when they were being tried. Senator Kern of the defense, hastily declared himself innocent of any acquaintance with the article, saying he considered it "very unfortunate" for it to have appeared at this time.
Miss Field, who has held a seat every day of the trial, was absent today and did not witness the unhappy effect of her attempt to befriending the unionists. Miller called Miss Field an anarchist and asked that she be barred from the courtroom. She was said to be employed on a San Francisco newspaper.
The district attorney and Judge Anderson indicated that she would be cited for contempt of court as soon as they were done with the conspiracy trial.
The opening of court Monday was expected tonight to witness a wholesale raising of bonds of the other defendants.
