

WILSON'S SPEECH ON PANIC MAKERS LIKED BY COUNTRY

Many Telegrams Received by President-Elect; He Promises Everlasting Disgrace to Disturbers of Prosperity.

(United Press Leased Wire.) New York, Dec. 18.—Congratulatory telegrams poured in on Woodrow Wilson here today following his speech at the banquet of the Southern society last night, during the course of which he warned panic makers that any financial upheaval would bring down the wrath of popular vengeance on their heads. Wilson's warning, however, was not a prediction of what would come if the Democratic party put into effect changes in economic policy. "I give this warning," said the president-elect, "not as a threat, but merely to convey the intimation that the men responsible for financial upheavals must stand up and be counted. There is just as much money in the country the day after a panic as the day before, but it is differently distributed as a result of the panic."

Brandeis Praises Address.

Louis D. Brandeis, the Boston attorney mentioned frequently as a cabinet probability, praised Wilson's address. "It simply meant," said Brandeis, "that Wilson will carry out his promises to the people, and was absolutely sincere in making them. I was not afraid when he made his pre-election statements and I am not afraid now."

The speech was an announcement that Wilson will follow a direct and straight line and go through with the right regardless of any opposition. He made his statement so clearly that misunderstanding is impossible.

"It was a wonderfully clarifying declaration," said William F. McCombs, chairman of the Democratic national committee. "Nothing could be more specific."

Wilson received a number of callers today. Among his visitors were McCombs, William G. McAdoo, Congressman A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania and Senator Owen.

Won't Allow Panic.

"America," said Governor Wilson in his address before the Southern society, "is not going to let a panic happen. Its eyes are wide open. But I speak as if I expected it—as if I feared it. I do not. I am not afraid of anything. "In many cases panic has come naturally, because of a mental disturbance of people with reference to loans and money generally. But the machinery is in existence by which the thing can be deliberately done. Frankly, I don't think there is a man living who dares use the machinery for that purpose. If he does, I promise him, not for myself, but for my fellow countrymen, a gibbet as high as Haman's. I do not mean a literal gibbet, but the gibbet of public disgrace, which shall live as long as the members of that man's family survive."

At this stage of his speech, Wilson referred to possible changes in economic policies, but he mentioned no specific policy.

"Since I left the academic walks," he said with a smile, "I find an increasing temptation to profanity. I think, however, that the recording angel probably does not hear those things against me, for there is such a thing as righteous anger."

Throughout his address the speaker was frequently interrupted by applause. Vice Chairman William G. McAdoo of the Democratic national committee lauded Wilson's declaration, saying:

"There is everything in the president-elect's speech to reassure legitimate business. It also contains a warning to wanton obstructionists that they will not be tolerated."
