NAME COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Taxpayers, at Annual Meeting, Decide Educational, Business Administration Should Be Looked Into.

Searching investigation into the business and educational administration of school affairs will be conducted during the next year by a committee of citizens appointed and given authority to employ an expert at the annual meeting of the taxpayers in Lincoln High school auditorium last night.

This is for the purpose of learning if the conduct of Portland school affairs is as economical as is consistent with the highest efficiency and if teaching methods are most practical and modern. It was plainly stated in the resolution, proposed by W. B. Ayer and seconded by J. M. Teal, that reflection is intended against the school board, although Mr. Teal did show and asked the reason why the cost per year of teaching a pupil has increased from $23 to $60 since 1908, that where 294 teachers taught 5500 pupils, at an average of $23 each, $60-odd teachers instruct now 22,700 pupils, or an average of about 25 each. Mr. Teal also called attention to the fact that the budget of expense asks this year disproportionate increases over similar items last year.

He made this statement to show that the $7500 which the investigation committee is empowered to spend will not be in the form of additional burden on the taxpayers, but may be taken from the funds on hand.

Mr. Teal said to be an incident, no evidence being found of any organized system of graft collection. During the course of the commission's work 118 instances were reported where police "protection" was claimed by the disreputable element, in which 13 officers were named, mostly plain clothes men.

In one case, used as an illustration, a woman who says she made $18,000 in 18 months, only two arrests were made, and in these cases fines amounting to $150 imposed. Concluding that graft exists, the commission says it is confined to individual officers or small groups.

Operation of the civil service with respect to the police is criticized, because under the present law it hampers the service board in its attempt to establish a qualification to enter the force. It is approved, as a court of appeal it is disapproved, and attention is called to the charter, which provides how hearings before the civil service board shall be conducted. It is declared the civil service board goes too far in attempting to determine the guilt or innocence of officers who have been dismissed.

The report closes with a definite recommendation for concentration of authority in one man, "in such manner that his control of the department shall be absolute."

Accompanying the reports are numerous tables analyzing the record of arrests and convictions, also extracts from the laws dealing with vagrancy, showing how they conflict with each other and confuse the administration of the law.

It is to be noted, however, that the fact of quickest comprehension in a study of local police administration is the contrast between the number of arrests made and the convictions had. Reference to Table I will show that 1504 women were arrested in 18 months, and, including item "bail forfeited," 913 were convicted, or 60.7 per cent. Table VI, dealing with men culprits under the same general class of offense, shows a total of 372 arrests, with 113 convictions, or 30.7 per cent. Combining the total of these two tables there are 1876 arrests, with 1126 convictions, or 60 per cent, a little more than half. Aside from these generalizations the commission in the course of its investigations gathered numerous cases of arrests made in raids upon notorious places wherein there were wholesale dismissals.

Police Policy Suggested. "The commission holds it to be a fair assumption that where arrests are made from an individual house on an average of one every six days, the commission establishes the disrepute of the place. Further, where as many as 10 or 12 arrests are made at different times during that period from the one house there can be no question concerning the character of the house. As a matter of fact, this conclusion is borne out by checking of arrests against the records of the various houses as appears in the data gathered by the commission. It is clear that there is not sufficient persistency against these places. The fact that arrests are made from a house of indefensible character now, six months, eight months and a year from now, and the house is still in business, evidences the utter futility of the present police policy."

Taking up the reasons for inefficiency, the report deals with the confusion of authority, following to the consequence that policemen do not have a feeling of personal responsibility to analyze in such cases the performance of their duty "naturally consider it possible effect on their personal fortunes, as it may be viewed by the chief, by the police committee, by the mayor, by the civil service commission and by the circuit court in the background."

MORALS COURT IS PROPOSED BY VICE INQUIRY REPORT

Proposed by Vice Inquiry Report

The governor, to serve six years, at a salary of $5000, and the appointment by this judge of his own police force, consisting of a chief and not more than three other officers. Persons brought into the court are to be dealt with on the principle of reformation, and not of fixed and vindictive punishment.

The bill dealing with houses used for immoral purposes, also recommended to the council to be placed before the legislature, declares that any person who erects, maintains, uses or leases any building for disorderly purposes shall be guilty of nuisance, and the building, the ground itself, the furniture, fixtures, musical instruments and contents are also declared a nuisance.

When suit is begun complaining of such a nuisance, a prompt hearing must be given, and if it appears that public morals require abatement, the court shall issue an injunction. When brought to trial on its merits, evidence of common fame is competent. If the nuisance is proved, the court must order the removal and public sale of all furniture and contents and direct "the effective closing of the building or place against its use for any purpose, and so keeping it closed, for a period of one year, unless sooner released." The proceeds of sale are to be applied to the costs of prosecution, any balance to be paid to the defendant.

Houses may be reopened. A house thus closed may be again occupied if the owner or lessee files a bond for $10,000 or a sum equal to the value of the property, if the court is satisfied that he is in good faith.

Touching upon the police department, the report says: "In whatever the commission shall have to say respecting the police department it desires to be understood as in no manner arraigning the police as a body on for any purpose, and so subject of duty, or on any other ground in which the allegation of intent of the average police officer to serve the city inefficiently might be implied. While it is undoubtedly true that the police department has its percentage of inefficiency, incompetent and dishonest men from an extended and careful study of police methods and their results in this city the commission is convinced that the personnel of the police force is good; that the average police officer is zealous in the performance of his duty, and it is also his desire that the force be kept clean and made effective, in consultation with prosecuting officers and police court officials the commission has found no objection to the effect that the average police officer evinces personal and departmental zeal in his efforts to secure conviction.

"It is to be noted, however, that the fact of quickest comprehension in a study of local police administration is the contrast between the number of arrests made and the convictions had. Reference to Table I will show that 1504 women were arrested in 18 months, and, including item "bail forfeited," 913 were convicted, or 60.7 per cent. SHE WANTS TORN DOLLAR BILL FIXED

Washington, Dec. 25.—The capitol of the United States is in receipt of one of the most extraordinary requests received in many years. It comes from an Ohio woman whose name the secretary of the senate has, for obvious reasons, declined to make public.

It calls upon the "Capitol of the United States" to repair a piece of paper, about two inches wide, evidently torn from the end of a dollar bill. The secretary, who has fallen heir to the missive, says he has handled many documents, delicate communications and all variety of requests but this one "has his goat." It has been recommended that the communication be referred to the senate committee on banking and currency, but the secretary does not look upon the suggestion favorably and retains the letter.

After the show tonight, hear Philip Feiz and his famous Russian Court Orchestra at The Louvre, Mrs. Philip Feiz, soprano. Other musical numbers.
