FAMOUS WOMEN OF HISTORY

Jenny Lind--1821-1887

Jenny Lind was born to poverty and obscurity. She achieved wealth and worldwide fame. Her father was a wood-churner. Her mother supported the family by keeping a school at Stockholm.

Later she found Jenny still industriously singing the same word. Arrived at Paris she encountered a terrifying shock. Manuel Garcia was the greatest singing master of the age and him she sought out.

Her Crolius, singing master of the Royal theatre, was sought out, and in a letter of later years Lind recalled that he was moved to tears by the simple songs she sang.

Finished with Garcia she was fairly launched in the world of opera and concert. Popularity and prosperity came at once. The theatre at Stockholm tripled her salary.

Minds of Pupils Are Turning Already to School Gardens

Miss Alice V. Joyce.

Every child should have mung beans, grasshoppers, water-bugs, tadpoles, frogs, mud-turtles, elderberries, wild strawberries, acorns, chestnuts, trees to climb, brooks to wade in, waterfalls, woodchucks, bats, bees, butterflies, various animals to pet, hay fields plume cones, rocks to roll, snails, snakes, huckleberries and hornets, and any child that has been deprived of these has been deprived of the best part of his education.

With the holiday vacation over and school resumed, the minds and hearts of the pupils and teachers are already turning longingly to "God's great outdoors" and to the possibilities of those wonder garden plots—the school gardens.

Are the children to have their school gardens this spring? This is the question which many people are asking. So great was the success of the gardens last year that it is little wonder that interest in the matter is already keen in this brand new year of 1913.

Not Too Early - "What are the prospects for the school gardens?" I asked. "At this time no definite plans have been made. With frost in the air and snow on the hillsides it is a little difficult to bring the children's thoughts to the growing of radishes and roses."

of the department of agriculture; in addition to these a Garden Magazine, published by Doubleday, Page & Co., at Garden City, N. J. Many of the above books may be secured at the Portland public library and any that are called for which they have not now will be secured.

Community Plan Best - Last year's experience demonstrated clearly the advantage of the community garden over the individual one. Although we hear so much said of the "back to the farm" gardening, but school gardening in most cities means rather "back to the backyard" gardening.

Money Back 12 Fold - The plots last year were 8 by 13 feet in size and on these the children raised lettuce, radishes, potatoes, beans, onions and cabbage in such quantities that many homes were supplied with fresh vegetables without any cost except the effort of the children.

One boy spent seventy-five cents for seed potatoes and he told me at the end of the season that he sold $9 worth of them. She was very prominent in some of the eastern cities. The products of the school gardens are turned over to the domestic science department and the surplus is marketed every day just as it does to jump rope and play marbles.

Good Garden Books - To this end, the names of several of the best books on the subject of school gardens may not be amiss. There are: "Among School Gardens" by M. Louise Green; "Children's Gardens," by Louise Klein Miller; "Nature Study and Life," by Dr. Hodge; "How to Make School Gardens," by H. B. Hemenway; "Agriculture for Beginners," by Burket, Stevens and Hill; "Nature Study," by Frederick L. Holtz; "Nature Study and Related Subjects," by Jackman; "Rural Science Series" (30 volumes), by William A. Dickover. Then there are a number of valuable leaflets, "Nature Study," issued by Cornell University; Reports of Cleveland's Home Gardening Association; bulletins 160, 195 and 234

Not a Fad - Let me point out a few of the many good things which the school gardens have done. They have brought to the children a wider professional interest in doing for pupils outside of the school room. Teachers have come in closer relation with the pupils. Parents have taken a greater interest in the school.

and a training of the hands highly valuable to future usefulness, supplied. Many home tables were supplied with vegetables fresher than could be bought at any market—an aid in solving food problems of humble homes was given. The work brought to the people a realization of the economic as well as commercial value of gardens within the reach of all.

DRAMATIZATION OF NOVEL AT THE BAKER

There has probably been no better or more interesting stock play ever written than "In the Bishop's Carriage," which the Baker Players are presenting this week at the Bungalow theatre.

One of the strongest characters is that of the burglar, Tom Dorgan, which Robert Wayne is portraying. Mr. Wayne is giving just as striking a performance of it as did the man who played it in the high priced road company seen in it formerly.

Miss Fleming as the girl thief, and Robert Connors as the lawyer, also have star roles. There will be a matinee Saturday.

Out of Babes' Mouths

Minister—Now, Tommy, can you tell me why it is wrong to go fishing on Sunday?

Tommy—Well, it leads one to fall into the barber's big chair.

Little George had just taken his place in the barber's big chair.

"Do you want your hair cut like mine?" asked the red haired barber.

"No, thank you," replied George. "I don't want it cut that color."
