(Special to The Journal.)

Reuben T. Hughet was appointed to fill the vacancy and has taken up the duties of the office.

Mr. Waters has been in Portland for two months, and his resignation is due to a break in his physical condition.

DEATH CUTS SHORT YOUNG ARTIST'S FAME

When news came to Portland a few days ago of the death of Louis Akin in Flagstaff, Ariz., few of his old friends in Portland knew that the young painter was engaged in what promised to make his name secure in the history of American art.

It has been learned that he was about to leave for New York with the first series of panels portraying the intimate life of the Indians of the southwest that he knew as no other painter of the day has known. These panels were to be fixed in a great "southwest room" set aside in the National History museum in New York.

About two years ago Akin was given a contract for the decorations of this great room. He was chosen over a large field of artists as the one most capable of telling on canvas the story of the Indians and the great Rockies.

It has been said of him that he is one of the few painters who could catch the spirit of the mountains in their vastness. Where others drew hills, he showed the mighty peaks, and executed the power of vastness where others failed. It was for this reason that he was given the contract, which involved about seven years' work.

Akin learned the Indians by living among them. He actually joined their tribes and lived their life. For 15 years, much of the time he was among the Zunis, the Navajos, the Apaches and other southwest tribes.

The crowning of all his efforts was to come with the work for the southwest room. He was cut off at the close of two years, with his first set of panels complete. These will be used, and the work then completed by another.

In Portland years ago Akin had little opportunity to show his ability in pictures, so he showed it painting signs. At this work he became famous. Finally he went to Arizona and took up his real life work. Some of his pictures have been purchased by James J. Hill and Louis W. Hill, who admire the genius that told of the mountains and the Indians of the far west.

MRS. GRITZMACHER'S BODY LAID TO REST

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Pape Gritzmacher, wife of C. Gritzmacher, of 359 Taylor street, formerly chief of police, was held from Holman's undertaking parlors yesterday afternoon. Interment was in the family plot in Lone Fir cemetery.

Dr. J. A. Leas of the English Lutheran church conducted the services, and a double quartet of the Arion society sang a funeral hymn.

The pallbearers were former members of Company H, Second Oregon Volunteers, of which auxiliary Mrs. Gritzmacher was a member and in which her son, A. B. Gritzmacher, was an officer during the Spanish-American war. They were Captain C. E. McDonell, Lieutenant A. J. McKinnon, Martin Pratt, Arthur Johnston, Carl Rittenspacher and William Fehrenbacher. A beautiful floral tribute was sent by the members of the Portland police force, and the band offered its services. Many members and ex-members of the police department were present at the services, also a large number of friends and old-time residents. A large number of floral tributes were offered.

PLAN FOR MONSTER MEETING IN PORTLAND

Philadelphia, Jan. 13.—Portland, Oregon and the great second world's Christian citizenship conference, to be held in that city June 29-July 6, will be the chief subjects considered at a monster Christian citizenship conference to be held here January 28.

A committee of 100 leading citizens has been planned, which organization will direct the great sessions to be held. It is expected that 5000 persons will attend.

Rev. Dr. James S. McGaw, general field secretary, returned to Pittsburg after a campaign here perfecting the preliminary work. He will return as soon as the committee of one hundred has completed its scheme of organization and cooperation.

The program will introduce several orators of international fame, all of whom will make specific reference to Portland and to Oregon, as well as to the second world's Christian citizenship conference. This conference will be the last of magnitude held in the east under the personal direction of Dr. McGaw, who will remove his family from Pittsburg to Portland and remain in that city as a resident factor until the middle of next July.

U. OF O. SORORITY GIRLS SET LIMIT ON "DATES"

(Special to The Journal.)

University of Oregon, Eugene, Or., Jan. 13.—"Queeners" will have a hard time hereafter, as a most stringent code of rules, governing co-eds, goes into effect today, largely at the request of the Pan-Hellenic association, composed of sorority members. The rules provide against week night "dates," all night parties, limit under classmen to one party a week and restrict boating and driving.

MAKING CRUSADE FOR NEW RULES

Eaton Seeking Support for Changes in House of Representatives.

Much in earnest in his crusade for new rules for the house of representatives when it meets at Salem today Allen H. Eaton, of Lane county, is cruising around among the members of the legislature at Salem, seeking to enlist support for his ideas.

One of the leading changes he suggests is that committees of the house be named this time by a committee on committees, instead of by the speaker. Mr. Eaton, who was himself a leading candidate for speaker two years ago, insists there is nothing personal in his plan and nothing that should disturb the supporters of C. N. McArthur, who is conceded the election as speaker.

"This is a good time to put the plan in operation," he said, "because we have no demoralizing contest for speaker. Two years ago a member of the minority dictated committee appointments, and the house ought to set a precedent this year by revising the rules and prevent a repetition of such things as happened two years ago."

Mr. Eaton used no names, but it was plain he referred to the influence wielded in committee appointments two years ago by W. Lair Thompson, who withdrew as a candidate for speaker and combined forces with J. P. Rusk, thereby accomplishing the defeat of Eaton.

The Lane county man says he finds many members in favor of his plan. Some of them do not want to put it into effect next Monday, fearing to upset the committee lists already understood to have been prepared by McArthur, and thereby prevent speedy organization of the house. So there is some talk of enacting a statute that will establish a committee on committees for future sessions.

It is also intimated by Eaton that he does not propose to seriously interfere with any plans that have been made. No hint is given as to how this paradoxical result would be brought about, but it has been suggested that an agreement might be reached whereby McArthur would agree to a committee on committees, with the understanding that this committee would report to the house the committee lists that he presents. This would establish the principle and at the same time not interfere with the machinery prepared by the speaker-to-be.

Eaton promises to hold a conference with McArthur and talk things over. Whether they will be able to agree is a matter yet to be determined.

WIFE OF PHELPS STOKES PROMISES TO JOIN WORKERS

Tells Striking Women in New York Her Good Clothes and Idleness Are Only Temporary.

New York, Jan. 3.—Declaring that although she now belonged to the "idle class, wore good clothes and lived on the wealth created by the toilers," Rose Pastor Stokes, the young cigarmaker who left her work bench to become the bride of the millionaire socialist, J. G. Phelps Stokes, told a throng of garment workers now on strike, that the time would come when she would have to go back to work among them.

"That time will come when all the wealth will belong to the men and women who create it," she said.

Mrs. Stokes, whose remarks were drawn forth by an attack made upon her by Christine Volpe, a striker, who suggested that Mrs. Stokes "get out on the firing line and be clubbed by the police as other workers are, instead of staying inside and giving real workers advice."

"I don't have to go out on the picket line because I am living on the wealth you are creating," hysterically shouted Mrs. Stokes.

"There was a time when I did have to work; when I froze in the cold just as you do now; when I starved for want of decent food because of lack of decent wages. I was forced into the shops when I was 11 and I slaved there until I was 26, toiled 12, 14, aye 16 hours a day in the sweatshops, and what did my family get out of it? Only a living.

"The bosses ask you to come back and say they will treat you right. They will. They will welcome you with open arms—and clubs."

Mrs. Stokes declared the attack on her was instigated by the manufacturers. She was wildly applauded.

Lived in One House Over Thirty Years

Members of Mrs. Thomas Walker family of four generations.

To be one of the members of a family of four generations and to have lived in one house in Portland for over 30 years, is the distinction of which Mrs. Elizabeth Walker of 354 Montgomery street, is proud. She has lived in Oregon for 54 years, having come here from Ontario, Canada, where she was born 73 years ago.

The members of the other three generations are her son, William Ryder 51 years old; her grandson, Earnest Ryder, 27 years old, and her great granddaughter, Doris Ryder, 6 months old, all of whom are now residing in San Francisco.

Mrs. Walker, who is still strong for her age, recently returned from a trip to California, where she visited her son, grandson, and great granddaughter. Mrs. Walker was married twice, her first husband having died in Canada. Her second husband Thomas Walker was before his death, some time ago, a prominent Portland contractor.

The house on Montgomery street where Mrs. Walker is now living, is in one of the oldest districts of the city.

HEIR TO MILLION WAS CHANGELING, ASSERTS WOMAN

Substituted Still-Born Child of Lieut. Slingsby, H. M. N., Rtd., With Babe of San Francisco Girl.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 13.—"I burned up the body of the prematurely born Slingsby heir. I took it from the apartment of my friend, Mrs. Slingsby, to a home, to try and adopt a newborn baby. There was nothing else for me to do. Mrs. Slingsby said that if she could not show a baby to her husband she would jump out of the window of her hotel."

At the office of District Attorney Fickert this admission, frankly made today by Mrs. Hattie Blain of 1522 McAllister street, for 20 years a friend of the wife of Lieutenant Charles H. Slingsby, a retired British naval officer, clears the mystery which has shrouded the alleged substitution of the illegitimate child of a Geyserville girl for the stillborn baby of Mrs. Slingsby, that there might be presented an heir to the $1,000,000 Slingsby estate in England.

In fullest detail Mrs. Blain tells of Mrs. Slingsby's visit to San Francisco from her home in Victoria that she might have the best medical attention, of the visit paid by Mrs. Blain to the Slingsby apartment, where the mother confided the story of the premature birth, and of Mrs. Blain's part in destroying the mute evidence of the death of the Slingsby heir.
