

PETERS WILL JOIN BEAVERS AT TRAINING CAMP

PROMISING PLAYER SIGNS CONTRACT AND SAYS HE'LL SHOW UP

Stanford Infielder, Who Refused to Report Last Year, Will Make Strong Bid.

J. D. Peters, the corking third baseman, who was drafted from Trenton of the Tri-State league in the fall of 1911, but who refused to report last year to Portland on account of his law studies at Stanford university, will join the Beavers at their spring training camp in March.

Manager McCredie received Peters' signed contract today in a letter from the young infielder stating that he will be Johnny on the spot when the Beavers assemble at Visalia.

Peters writes that he will again coach the Stanford baseball team and by that means will be in pretty good shape when the Beavers roll into the training camp and pitch their tents.

"I am very glad that Peters has concluded to join the club," said Manager Mac. "He is a corking ball player and one of the most promising third basemen in the game. He will give Lindsay a hot fight for the third corner and if Bill beats him out there, he may take a wide at the shortpatch against Kores and Courtney. I think that I shall send Bancroft to the Cols if I can get waivers on him. I have not asked the league yet, but will do so at once. I need a heavier hitter than Bancroft in my infield."

Peters played in 62 games with Trenton in 1911 and batted .238. He was at bat 219 times and made 63 hits, scoring 45 runs, which is pretty good for the number of games. He stole 19 bases and laid down 27 sacrifice hits, which is as many as some of the Coast players during a season of 300 games. Peters' fielding average was .924. He handled 57 putouts, 101 assists and kicked 13 chances.

It was McCredie's intention to give Peters a trial at first base last season if he had reported, and the youngsters may be switched over there against Derrick this spring. In his college days Peters played a great first base and inasmuch as he is a natural ball player could probably do even better on the bag now.

Archie Krueger has signed his 1913 contract and the veteran outfielder believes that he will have one of his best years. Dave Gregg, Callahan, Norton and Hausman have also signed.

Stovall Aids Patterson. (United Press Leased Wire.) Los Angeles, Jan. 21.—The Manager George Stovall of the St. Louis Browns started a subscription today for Claire Patterson, Oakland outfielder, drafted by St. Louis, who is ill of pneumonia at Mojave, Cal. Patterson will never play ball again, Stovall believes, even if he recovers.

Vernon's Home Fixed Today. (United Press Leased Wire.) Los Angeles, Jan. 21.—The Vernon Coast league franchise will be fixed for the season before night if negotiations programmed today between President Miley and Manager Hogan of the Vernon club, and the city council and mayor of Venice are mutually satisfactory. The Vernon management is said to have modified its demands to locate at the Venice summer resort, and indications were that the terms would be met.

Burrell to Little Minors. Los Angeles, Jan. 21.—Third baseman Lennie Burrell of Vernon will not be a Coast leaguer when the 1913 season opens according to Manager Hogan's plans today. Burrell is slated to go back to a Class A organization if other Coast league clubs do not exercise a waiver privilege, and two Western league managers are said to be bidding for his services. Hogan has announced that Litschi probably will care for the third sack for Vernon this year.

Mitze Visits Training Camps. San Francisco, Jan. 21.—To select a training camp, Manager Mitze of the Oakland Coast league team today visited several towns within a radius of 100 miles from San Francisco. Livermore is making a strong bid for the champions, as that town was picked last year, and Mitze was slated to look things over today. Watsonville, Hayward and San Jose are holding out attractive inducements, but as the Oaks get away to a good start at Livermore they fear a change might mean "the jinx."

Johnny Evers, Frank Chance and Joe Tinker, as they appeared in Chicago recently. When the Cubs were in their prime these men used to operate a system somewhat similar to the cash carriers in a department store, none the less accurate because of the absence of wires. Tinker started the machinery by scooping up a grass singer and tossing it to Evers, who did not hold the ball until his palms were sweaty, but pushed it along to Chance. And the next morning the loyal fan risked his eyesight by reading the fine print under the box score, where the following appeared: Double play, Tinker to Evans to Chance. But the line probably will never appear again, for with Tinker in Cincinnati, Evers in Chicago, and Chance in New York, there would be too much strain on the throwing wings to make the play worth while.

CRIPPLED AGGIES IN FIRST BASKETBALL JAUNT OF '13 SEASON

Team Leaves Tonight to Meet Idaho and Washington State Quintets.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Jan. 21.—Tonight the basketball team of the Oregon Agricultural college will leave Corvallis on their first trip of the season, going out to Moscow to do battle with the University of Idaho Wednesday and Thursday. From there they will go to Pullman to meet the W. S. C. five.

The men who will make the trip are practically picked, although there is some doubt this afternoon as to just who will be the eighth man on the squad. Cooper, Captain Birdick, May, Durling, Jordan, Dewey, Johns and possibly King. In case the latter is not able to make the trip, the substitute will be either Paratt, Knight or Boyer. Cooper will probably be unable to play in the first game, but it is expected that he will be in condition to get into both of the Pullman contests. Dr. Stewart was rather gloomy at the prospects of the trip presented. "I do not see how we can get more than one game from each of the institutions we meet," said the coach. "If we do that well the students of O. A. C. ought to be well satisfied, considering the fact that we have a badly crippled team to place against these two strong teams. If we had all of our men off of the sick list, we would stand a fine chance of getting all four of the games."

Evenden and Chrisman, two of the football stars of the college, have been persuaded to turn out for basketball, and both have started training.

The Gregory team was composed of Scherzinger and Lair, forwards; Toorney, center, and Meyers and Cassidy guards.

(Special to The Journal.) SILVERTON, Ore., Jan. 21.—The 27 to 20 victory of the Silvertown Commercial club, over the Christian Brothers Business college basketball team of Portland, in this city Saturday evening, and the fact that the locals have recently defeated Company B, of Corvallis, the Baracas, of Salem, Amicus club and the Christian Bros., both of Portland, is taken as an indication that Silvertown is a much stronger team than any of its rivals supposed.

Manager Earl Wood states that what may be considered the strongest teams are yet to be played, future dates having been made for games here. Mt. Angel college, Vancouver, Dallas, Multnomah and the University of Oregon are all considered strong quintets and will be announced within the next few weeks. The locals are playing good ball and are willing to meet any team in the state. However, they would much prefer to play teams somewhere near their class.

ANDERSON TRIMMED THREE OPPONENTS IN SAME PORTLAND RING

Lightweight Theme of Story By Old Boxing Promoter Now in Los Angeles.

A new line on Bud Anderson, who is to meet Sammy Trott at Vernon on January 25, I am indebted for it to Bill Huddy, president of the Columbia Athletic club, writes Harry Williams of Los Angeles. Huddy predicted five years ago that Anderson would be the next lightweight champion. He made the forecast after seeing Anderson, then a raw amateur, knock out three men in one night, turning the three-ply trick in a total of five rounds. Here is the story:

Huddy trekked from San Francisco to Portland, Or., after the big fire. He opened the Pastime Athletic club near Robbe Park. Huddy gave weekly boxing entertainments. When he was shy of talent he would apply to the barracks at Vancouver, Wash., twenty minutes' ride from Portland, where a number of United States troops are quartered. The soldiers were ready to fight at any old time, and there were a number of really good boxers among them.

He had been running his club a short time when reports of the deadly hitting of an "unknown" by the name of Anderson reached him. The Anderson sentiment, in fact, became so strong, that he decided to give the kid a tryout. But then a mere boy was finally put on with a George Reese, of the Vancouver barracks. From this point we will let Huddy tell the story himself.

"Well, Anderson didn't do a thing but drop Reese with a left to the jaw. It was the first blow struck, and Reese was out for the count and then some. Anderson was dissatisfied, and asked me to let him fight again. I substituted him for the man who was to box Joe Prisk, another soldier. This was in the second preliminary. Prisk did not last long. Anderson finished him in the first round. Then we were just two blows struck. Anderson put his left to the stomach, and then chopped this right to the chin. The latter punch did the business. Prisk did not get up until quite a while after the count of ten.

Enter For Third Time. Frank Bernard, champion of the Philippine Islands, and Charley Irwin were matched for the main event. Irwin was taken sick and failed to show. Anderson volunteered to meet Bernard, and entered the ring for the third time that night. It went three rounds. In the third, Anderson drew Bernard's head forward with a back-handed left, and then knocked him out with a right hook to the back of the neck.

"I lost sight of Anderson after leaving Portland, but they say he has been cleaning them all up. I am glad to learn that he has turned professional. "Anderson is a terrific puncher. His style may best be described as cleverly awkward. I predicted five years ago that he would be the next lightweight champion, and I have had no reason to experience a change of heart."

War Among the "Beaners." There is war among the "pork and bean" fighters of Oregon. In his record given for publication Sunday Kid Exposito said that he won a decision over Spike Hennessy in 15 rounds and knocked the Bostonian out in three rounds in another battle. Spike, writing from Pendleton, says that he defeated the Kid in the only battle he fought with the local boy May 17, 1911, from going to gong. Their other meeting was a six round exhibition. Spike says he weighed 115 pounds, and Exposito came in at 133. Spike took this occasion to challenge anybody in the world at 112 pounds, and Expo at an old poundage.

IS OREGON "U" AFTER MINNESOTA COACH TO HANDLE 1913 ELEVEN?

Leonard Frank, Famous End, Said to Have Been Offered Eugene Position.

Is the University of Oregon trying to land a Minnesota coach in order to fight Goinore Doble, five times mentor of the championship University of Washington eleven with some of his own brand of ammunition? It has lately come to light through University of Kansas sources that Oregon offered the position of head coach to Leonard Frank, former star end for four years on the Minnesota eleven and at present assistant coach of the University of Kansas.

Whether Frank is now available is not certain. He and Head Coach Arthur St. Leger Mosse were unable to agree upon the coaching policy at Kansas last year, and Frank handed in his resignation to the faculty athletic committee. However, upon petition of 1500 students he was prevailed upon to reconsider his determination to resign.

The University of Oregon faculty athletic committee, the subject of the offer, admitted generally to have the best collection of individual players of any of the conference colleges.

There was some criticism of the graduate coaching system at Oregon last season because the eleven did not make a better record, when it was admitted generally to have the best collection of individual players of any of the conference colleges.

There may be nothing to the rumor, but at any rate it would be interesting to know what a coach schooled in the Minnesota style could do against Doble and his Washington title holders.
