ROSE FESTIVAL PLEDGES WANTED

Royal Rosarians to Meet on Tuesday to Consider Financial Aspect.

To "face the facts of the 1913 Rose Festival" the Royal Rosarians will hold an emergency meeting Tuesday at noon in the Commercial club.

The Rose Festival boosters are not satisfied with the way the pledges for the 1913 festival event are being received. Recently returned from a tour of California that is said to be the longest and most expensively spectacular ever sent from one state to another, the Rosarians brought with them the definite pledges of six California cities to send special train delegations to attend the festival, also to enter in one or the other of the six parades.

While the Rosarians were making arrangements for large attendance by Californians and tourists, wintering there, the festival management has been receiving messages from all over the east, from organizations that are planning to hold annual conventions here during the festival, in order that its glittering and brilliant pageantry may add to their entertainment. Railroads are arranging for special low fares that will bring increased attendance.

"All in all," said Manager George Hutchin of the festival, yesterday, "we have the certainty of the greatest crowd that ever assembled in Portland for any event; and we want, and if supported will make the festival the best ever seen in order to compensate the attendance. But we will have to out the coat to fit the cloth. We can't give a better festival than the people appropriate for."

"For that reason," said W. C. Bristol, crown prince of the Rosarians, "we are going to ask the business interest of this city to look for the first time upon the festival in its true light. When they contribute to the festival it is not a donation to charity, but an investment. It is a business proposition pure and simple. By it we attract the people. By it we advertise city and state. People who come here spend money, great sums. I venture that ten times as much money is left here each year as the festival costs. Where can better returns be obtained? At the same time we ourselves get an opportunity to break out of our shells and really enjoy life for a week."

President Ralph Hoyt of the Rose Festival is in New Orleans. He will remain to see the Mardi Gras before going on to Panama. The Mardi Gras has four parades, he says, and costs $250,000. He is curious to learn the truth of the statements frequently made
