Social and Personal

News for the Sunday society columns must be in the hands of the Society Editor not later than Friday of each week and its receipt as much earlier as possible will be appreciated.

SOCIETY is on the qui vive today for tonight is the opening performance of the comic opera, the "College Pennant," at the Heilig to be given by a group of society women for the benefit of the news boys' home. All the debutante set are taking prominent parts and the interest is keen and nerves are at a high pitch. Portland rarely has the opportunity of seeing so many pretty young girls with fresh young voices in comic opera and aside from the personal interest in the affair the show promises something in the way of a real treat as a splendid entertainment. There will be performances this evening, tomorrow afternoon and evening.

Miss Loomis Weds.

Charming in its simplicity was the wedding yesterday of Miss Beulah Loomis to Robert Hyde of Tacoma. The ceremony was read by Bishop Charles Scadding, in his private chapel at his home on the heights, before the relatives and a few intimate friends, at 3:45 p. m. There were no attendants except Antoine Labbe, who acted as best man. Miss Loomis wore her going away gown, a blue serge suit with chic melon shaped toque of blue with dresden crown and edged in royal blue straw. She wore a corsage bouquet of violets, orchids and delicate fresia and ferns.

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Labbe an informal reception followed the services. Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Hyde were Mrs. Lyman U. Loomis, Mr. and Mrs. Labbe, C. H. Hyde of Tacoma, father of the groom, and Alexander Baillie of Tacoma. The rooms were beautifully arranged with a profusion of spring flowers. The tea table was unusually attractive, set with a basket of delicate yellow jonquils and pink carnations with pink shaded candelabra. Mrs. Kirkham Smith and Mrs. Joseph N. Bradley presided at the urns. About 30 men and women of the younger set called.

Mrs. Loomis, mother of the bride, was gowned in black and white brocade, with Persian trimming. Mrs. Labbe wore an attractive toilette of light pink. Her gown was an imported crepe heavily embroidered in the same shade with lace and fur trimming.

Mr. and Mrs. Hyde left last night for California. They will take an extended wedding trip in the south, including a number of California cities, New Orleans, Panama and the eastern cities, arriving home about the last of May. They will be at home in Tacoma about June 1.

Though Miss Loomis' home was in Ellensburg, she was a popular society girl in Tacoma. Many beautifully appointed parties were given in her honor prior to her wedding. Following is an account of one of the last affairs given which appeared in a Tacoma paper:

"Quite the most beautiful and elebarate of the valentine fetes was the luncheon Friday at which Mrs. George C. Wagner entertained at her home on North E street, honoring a February bride, Miss Beulah Loomis, whose marriage to Robert Hyde will take place February 20 in Portland. The guests included a group of Miss Loomis' girl friends in the Tacoma younger set, Miss Bernice Baker, Miss Margaret Temple, Miss Ava Raze, Miss Constance Rice, Miss Rhoda Vaeth, Miss Janet Ingersoll, Miss Kathleen McMahon, Miss Elsa Hudson, Miss Persons, Mrs. William Reynolds Ripley, and the guest of honor. Nothing was lacking in the expuisiteness of the most minute details, and every course of the elaborate luncheon showed the heart designs, from the dainty timbales to the handsome wedding cake, surmounted by a miniature groom, brought in as the final course. The dining room looked like a veritable fairyland, fragrant with flowers and softly lighted. A huge heart-shaped table was arranged with places for 12, and massed with flowers, softly lighted with shaded candles and laid with glittering crystal and silver, it was wonderfully effective. A beautiful lace cover was laid over a foundation of pale green silk, and upon it were broad bands of pink satin ribbons, at the ends of which were tiny bridal showers of lilies of the valley, roses and hearts. Three low mounds of pink Killarney roses in heart forms were placed in the arcs and angle of the heart. At each place was a heart shaped corsage bouquet of pink roses and lilies of the valley. A single jong stemmed pink rose in a tall cut-glass vase stood beside each place, and as little favors were heart shaped boxes of pink satin filled with bonbons. At the center of the table a miniature lake was fashioned, at the brink of which knelt a little bride, all in the glory of white satin, veil and bridal bouquet. From her hands were extended white streamers to a gilt canoe riding gally on the mirror lake, filled with a freight of rosebuds. Above the center of the table a double heart, fashioned of pink Killarney laces, hung with a shower of lilies of the valley from the dome, through which the light of the electroliers filtered with a soft, pink glow harmonizing with the pale pink rays from the candles under their dainty French shades. The place cards, of heart form, were charming keepsakes, bearing upon them little photographs of the honor guest, Miss Loomis. The decorations were the artistic handiwork of Mrs. Mary Hayden. A delightfully informal afternoon followed the luncheon and gave opportunity for farewells to Miss Loomis before she leaves for Portland, where her marriage will take place."

WOMEN'S CLUBS

Psychology Club Meets.

The Psychology club held a meeting yesterday at the east side library. There was a large attendance of members. The speaker for the afternoon was Miss Eaton and her subject was "The Law of Life in the Universe."

The lecturer showed how the universe is pervaded by law, equally so all forms of life, on the physical, mental and spiritual planes. She applies this law to bodily health, mental health or right thinking, consciousness, which teaches tolerance and unselfishness, duty, which acts on the spiritual plane, and sacrifice, the highest law of all, because in creation the supreme being poured forth his own life to all creatures.

Richmond Parent Teachers' Circle.

The Parent-Teachers' circle of the Richmond school had a very encouraging meeting this week. Mrs. J. L. Mount presented literature, which was very much appreciated, and Mrs. A. C. The evening reception planned for this week has been postponed to Friday, March 7.

Daughters of Confederacy Meet.

The parlor of the Portland hotel yesterday afternoon was the scene of a notably pleasant meeting of the Daughters of the Confederacy. There was an attendance of 30 members and a few guests. The program was presided over by the president, Mrs. E. L. Moses. The chairman of the program committee was Mrs. George H. Thomas.

The ladies first listened to a very interesting address by Vincent Jones on the proposed bond issue for increasing the park and playground area of Portland. Mr. Jones, in a clear and logical way, pointed out the need for more parks and urged upon the ladies the necessity of their cooperation at the polls on election day. At the close of his address Mr. Jones was tendered a rising vote of thanks.

The regular program of the afternoon then opened with the singing of "Dixie." Mrs. D. H. Johnston sang with much sweetness and charm, "O, Haunting Memory" (Carrie Jacobs Bond), and "The Violet" (Mendenberg). Miss Bonnie Replogle acted as accompanist. Little Grace Miller captivated everyone by her charming recitations, "When Angelina Johnsing Comes Swinging Down the Line," and "Persimmons' Care of the Baby." Mrs. Rosalie Goulding then read a most interesting paper on General Forest. Following the program the ladies adjourned to the dining room, where a social hour was spent while ice cream, cake and coffee were served.

Bay View Club Dinner.

Delightful hospitality was extended last evening by the members of the Bay View club to their husbands, the occasion being the annual dinner of the club. The affair was held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Cable, 720 East Burnside street. Dinner was served at 7 o'clock at a long table made fragrant and beautiful in crimson carnations, the club flower, the spicy blossoms being veiled with delicate ferns. Partners for dinner were found by the matching of puzzle cards. A soft light was shed over the table from numerous red shaded candles.

The living rooms of the home were graced with pussy willow sprays and Oregon grape. After dinner the evening was spent in playing five hundred. In awarding the prize the combined score of husband and wife was used as a basis, and the honors thus fell to Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wilson. The prize was a very handsome Royal Doulton tray with a rim of sterling silver. The consolation award for women went to Mrs. Spencer. It was a wonderful diamond ring (purchased at the five and ten cent store). Mr. Bates received as the men's consolation award a little hatchet symbolic of the approach of Washington's birthday.

The evening was enjoyed by the following persons: Mr. and Mrs. Lee Mansfield Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Clark, Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Driver, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Redd, Mr. and Mrs. William Henry, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Barber, Dr. and Mrs. Spencer, Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Cable, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wilson, Mrs. Osgood and Mr. Bates.

Current Literature Department.

The current literature department of the Woman's club met yesterday afternoon with Mrs. M. C. Banfield, 692 Vista street. Mrs. T. P. Wise read the final chapters of William Carlton's "One Way Out." A short discussion followed the reading, although most of the discussion of the work had taken place at previous meetings. Mrs. E. C. Horton, a new member of the department, then entertained the ladies by reading the whimsical southern story by Frank H. Sweet, "Callum Co'tin'." Miss Charlotte Banfield then sang very sweetly a group of three of Carrie Jacobs Bond's songs.

At the close of the afternoon Mrs. Banfield served tea. The next meeting will be two weeks hence at which time Mrs. G. J. Frankel will read "Uncle William." There were fifteen members present yesterday.

DRAMATIC TENOR CHARMS AUDIENCE

Slezak Captivates Hearers With His Splendid Voice and Personality.

By J. L. W.

Leo Slezak's concert at the Heilig last night was "perfectly charming," to use an expression that escaped from the audience. Slezak charms with his singing and his appearance. The big tenor of the Metropolitan, both physically and artistically, reminds one of a great big good-natured boy who on sight accepts everybody as his friend. Every line of the pronounced features radiated smiles and sunshine, so who could see and listen and not join in the chorus, perfectly charming.

Slezak is a dramatic tenor, but his program last night was not all of the dramatic order. For instance, Schubert's serenade—no one ever sang it more tenderly, more soothingly, than this tall, stout Moravian of curly hair and blue eyes that seem to spell all is well with every twinkle. In the same class was the little Bohemian lullaby, arranged from a folksong by Hartman, that he very appropriately gave for an encore.

Gets Real Ovation.

In the well-known tenor aria from Ponchielli's "La Gioconda" especially Slezak found opportunity to display his intense dramatic power and volume and through it he brought the audience to its feet with shouts of "bravo," "bravo." It was the closing number, but the people would not leave and so he very graciously responded with an encore and then another. The audience had started to depart, following the applause after the first encore, but they quickly returned to their seats when, somewhat to their surprise, they saw the artist reappear with another sheet of music before him. Then applause burst loose again in increased volume. Slezak sang all his numbers from the score, which will be very comforting to singers who find memorizing difficult.

Slezak divided his program in four groups, the first consisting of German songs entirely: Schubert's "Undeguld" and "Serenade," Schumann's "Lotosblume," "Mozart's "Veilchen" and an aria from Mozart's "The Magic Flute." For encore he gave Schubert's "Am Meer." The second group consisted of Loewe's "Tom der Reimer," Rubinstein's "Die Trane," and the tenor aria from Meyebeer's "L'Africaine," the latter in Italian. The third group contained Martini's "Plaisir d'Amour" in French. The fourth and last group consisted of songs in English with the exception of the closing number from "La Gioconda." The English songs were Cadman's "Moonlight," Sydney Homer's "Dearest" and Mary Turner Salter's "Come to the Garden, Love." This charming song he rendered with such feeling and expression that the audience simply insisted upon its repetition and with success.

Singer Natural Humorist.

As stated before, Slezak is a natural humorist, and the amusing feature of the concert last night was his announcements of encore numbers. While his voice would fill the auditorium from stage to dome, he whispered the titles of the songs and the names of the composers so lightly that it is doubtful if the voice carried to the fourth row. There was one exception, however, and that when he announced the last encore, "Forget Me Not," for then he spoke very clearly so that it could be heard everywhere, "Don't Forget Me," Hofmann.

Miss Florence McMillan played the accompaniments splendidly. Miss McMillan is a Montana girl and was presented in recital in New York by Carl V. Lachmund of Portland. Miss McMillan is one of the very few women who have the honor of playing for the great opera stars.

The concert was under the direction of the Portland Musical association and the theatre was filled to capacity.

LISTER WILL PERMIT ONLY $200,000 FOR SAN FRANCISCO FAIR

(Special to The Journal.)

Olympia, Wash., Feb. 21.—For the first time this session the legislature really settled down to business yesterday and remained at work till 6 o'clock. The major part of the day was spent by both houses in passing the general appropriations budget. This was done without serious amendment, although when the item for appropriating $500,000 for completion of the Temple of Justice, which was begun by the last legislature a fight was made in both houses, but was finally allowed.

The legislature is in receipt of numerous petitions from [illegible] bodies in nearly every city in the state demanding a generous appropriation for the San Francisco and San Diego fairs. Five hundred thousand dollars is the least these bodies consider should be appropriated, although Governor Lister has announced flatly that he will veto any greater appropriation than $200,000 for this purpose.

The last work of the house before adjournment was the passage of Representative Goss' bill to abolish capital punishment. Goss opened the debate by denying the right of the individual or the government to take life except to preserve life. The arguments were lengthy and eloquent and the bill was finally passed by a vote of 70 to 15.

It is said that President Wilson's inaugural message will be one of the shortest on record.
