Lady Mary Sackville.

London, April 1 .- Lady Sackville, he mother of the beautiful Lady Mary Sackville, is again to appear in the law courts in a case which promises

She was a Sackville-West herself and daughter of the late Lord Sackville. She married her father's nephew, Lionel Sackville-West, now Lord Sackville, in 1890. They have had one child, Lady Victoria Mary, who was born in 1892, and it is for her sake that Lady Sackille is a determined litigant.

Her present legal fight is to protect the fortune left her by the late Sir John Murray Scott, one of the trustees of the famous Wallace collection. Sir, John died suddenly in January of last year, and a draft of a codicil to his will was found among his papers leaving "V. M. S." generally assumed to be Lady Sackville, a fortune of about $75,000, together with his collection of pictures and furniture, valued at a second ued at a million dollars. A reward of $50,000 was offered for a duly executed codicil, and this was presented to Justice Bargrave Deane by Lady Sack-ville. It is now alleged that there is another codicil in existence which reokes all bequests to Lady Sackville.

The relatives of Sir John Murray Scott intend to fight the case to a They allege that certain facts John's knowledge and that this caused im to revoke his bequest, and they come to light Lady Sackville will surely lose the money.

HE SAYS THAT HE IS JUST PLAIN SELFISH

By Edna K. Wooley.

Undoubtedly the great donations made by multimillionaires toward doing good work great benefits to humanity. Yet there are certain small, individual ways of doing good that possibly save more trouble and bring more happiness than any of the world famous philanthropies have wrought.

Now, I know a certain good old doc tor whose advancing age has caused him to give up a heavy practice. He has much time on his hands. What does he do with it?

Of course he takes time to read and think and visit, and be visited by his friends. But his great pleasure is snooping around and doing queer little things that sort of fit into the lives of the people he knows.

Among his acquaintances is a young voman who works in a big office. Sometimes the work is so fast an dfurious that she hasn't time to go to a restaurant for a good noon meal. She isn't very strong and she needs the meal This the good doctor knows, so what

Now, good stories are sometimes scarce when one most needs them. This young woman is also on our good doctor's list. He keeps eyes and ears open, and when he comes upon a good one it's jotted down in a little book. Then, some day—and it always seems to be her most despairing day—the doctor drops into her cubbyhole of an office drops into her cubbyhole of an office and tells these tales, and leaves with her a week's supply of new story ma-

AMERICAN WOMAN'S WORK IN PARIS

By Vida Sutton.

By Vida Sutton, One finds in Paris many American women who are pioneers in various un-dertakings. They have taken advan-tage of the libertles accorded the Amercan women to enter fields impossible to their French sisters.

One such ploneer is Miss Florence Heywood, the only woman art lecturer in the Louvre, and indeed the only wo-man in Europe in her particular field. Niece of the American artist Walter Shiriaw, Miss Heywood grew up in the atmosphere of the studio. She studied portrait painting and the theory of art with Dr. Jordan of Leland Stanford university. This work she continued at the Sorbonne and L-Ecole des Beaux Arts, and spent eight years in travel and virginal research in France, Italy, Spain and Greece. The cue to the particular work she then took up was the gnorance of the average American on the subject of art.

studying individual pictures or masters without a background led her to plan for her students a course on the evolution of painting—a first-hand study conducted in the galleries of the Louvre, of the masters from the beginning through the great epoch in art.

Her classes are variously composed One is of art students. Another of teachers, or perhaps college graduates, or the usual tourist group. She also lectures at the Sorbonne before the Society of Savants-a rare honor for s

In the development of her work Miss Heywood has had a clear field. It is new, original, entirely her own. She has met with enthusiastle encouragement from the French artistsher home filled with paintings of well assistance and the utmost courtesy from the French directors of the Fine Arts. When the Mona Lisa disappeared from the Louvre, a small French paper suggested that this American woman who had such free access and who held her classes there, was the only sider admitted on the day. The idea was sensational and afforded copy to other papers, bringing Miss Heywood into unpleasant notoriety. The French authorities were profuse in their apologies and resented the insult with the utmost chivalry. Ever since the epi-sode, they have been more than ever gracious and eager to show their appreciation of the work she is doing. Her book on "The Evolution of Art in the Louvre," has been made an official guide and her course recommended at the various art schools, Miss Heywood believes very thorughly in the chivalry and innate politeness of the Frenchman. She is an ardent suffragist, and of the suffrage for French women, she says: "When the French women desire the yote, they will ask for it politely, and the Frenchman with a gallant bow will say, "You wish the vote? Take it, madame, it is yours."
