

NEW DALLAS COUNCIL MAY LET IN THE THIRD SALOON, THOUGH DRY

Is Expected to Continue Policy of Predecessors as to Paving 9 Additional Blocks.

(Special to The Journal.)
Dallas, Or., April 12.—With the city election over, the administration forces completely routed and an entirely new council at the helm, speculation is rife here as to the probable fate of the proposed hard-surface pavement. It had been planned by the present council to construct at least nine blocks of hard-surface pavement during the coming summer. However, it seems very probable at this time that the new council, headed as mayor by J. G. Van Orsdel, Democrat, and one of the leading citizens of the county, will favor this pavement. The new council is composed entirely of taxpayers who have long been identified with the active business life of the city. Mr. Van Orsdel is a former sheriff.

It is believed also, however, that election of this new council means lifting the ban with reference to the issuance of additional saloon licenses. Under the ordinance as they now exist only two licenses can be issued, one for each 1000 inhabitants or major fraction thereof. During the past three years, under this ordinance, the two licenses issued have become very valuable, and one of the principal fights waged against the present council was for not permitting another saloon to enter into competition here.

The new council, though composed of men who really favor prohibition, it is believed will adopt the theory that if the city is to have saloons at all, three will be no more harmful than two. However, it is certain that strong opposition will develop should any attempt be made to change the provisions of the present saloon ordinance, which is considered one of the best in the state, and has been followed in many cities of the state.

DRAIN STAGE ACCIDENT HURTS NO ONE FATALY

Contractor Johnson Sustains Dislocated Hip; Puddle of Seattle Breaks Leg.

(Special to The Journal.)
Marshfield, Or., April 12.—Passengers on the Drain stage line, who arrived this afternoon, say the stage turned over about four miles out of Scottsburg. It was heavily laden, and the driver was attempting to turn away from a mud hole. E. T. Johnson, one of the contractors doing the work on the Sluslaw jetty, had his hip dislocated, and a traveling man named Puddle, from Seattle, suffered a broken leg. Both men are being cared for at a farm house. The driver was also injured.

Miss Margaret Johnson, daughter of E. T. Johnson, who was injured in the Drain stage accident, received the first word of the injury to her father, through the columns of The Journal, last night. She lives with her parents at East Fifteenth and Elizabeth streets.

FRASIER'S RAGE BARN ESCAPES THE FLAMES

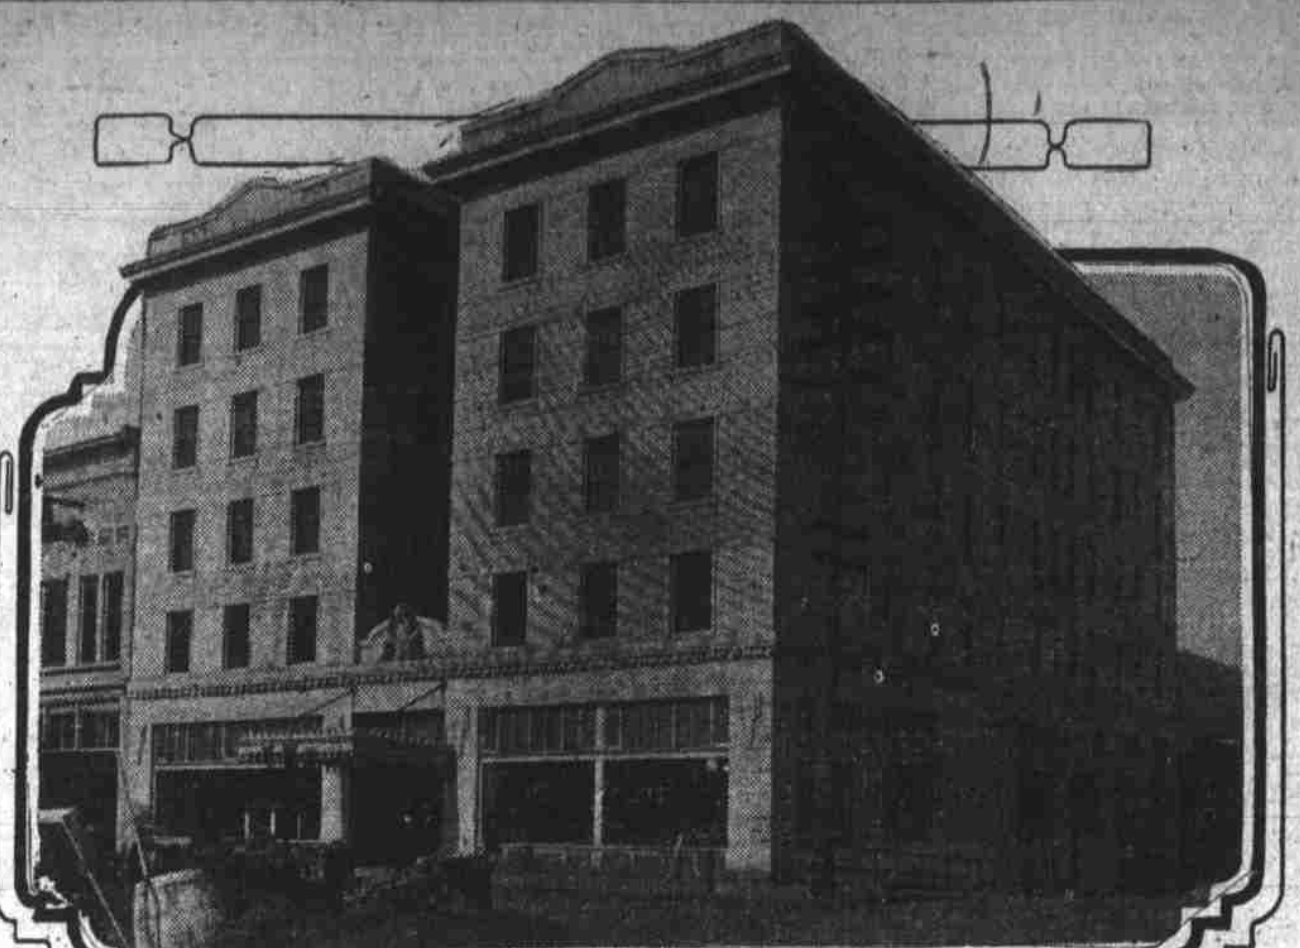

Three Cottages Burn, However; Nye Man Has $250 Gold Melted in Fire.

(Special to The Journal.)
Pendleton, Or., April 12.—Fire this afternoon destroyed three cottages on the Frank Frasier ranch, one mile south of Pendleton, with a loss estimated at $3000. Frasier's barn, where he keeps his race horses, escaped the blaze by a fortunate veer of the wind.

In another fire near Nye, D. M. Russell had $250 in gold burned so badly that it melted; but he has the metal and will have it recoined.

ISLAND IN COLUMBIA BETWEEN GOBLE AND KALAMA HAS HISTORY

First to Live There, So Legend Says, Runaway Squaw and Brave She Wanted.

Kalama, Wash., April 12.—Out in the Columbia river, between Kalama on the Washington side and Goble on the Oregon side, lies an island of some 25 or 30 acres, about 12 of which are under cultivation. This island is one of the landmarks of the Columbia, and is probably remembered by travelers from many lands who have passed by on ocean steamers or crossed the river on the old ferry Tacoma.

The history of this little island is quite interesting. There are some old Indian tales connected with it but few of the old timers remember them. The first recollection of an inhabitant on the island seems to be of a squatter, Blacketer by name, who married an Indian woman and whose descendants are scattered about the states of Oregon and Washington. Since that time the island has been occupied the larger portion of the time.

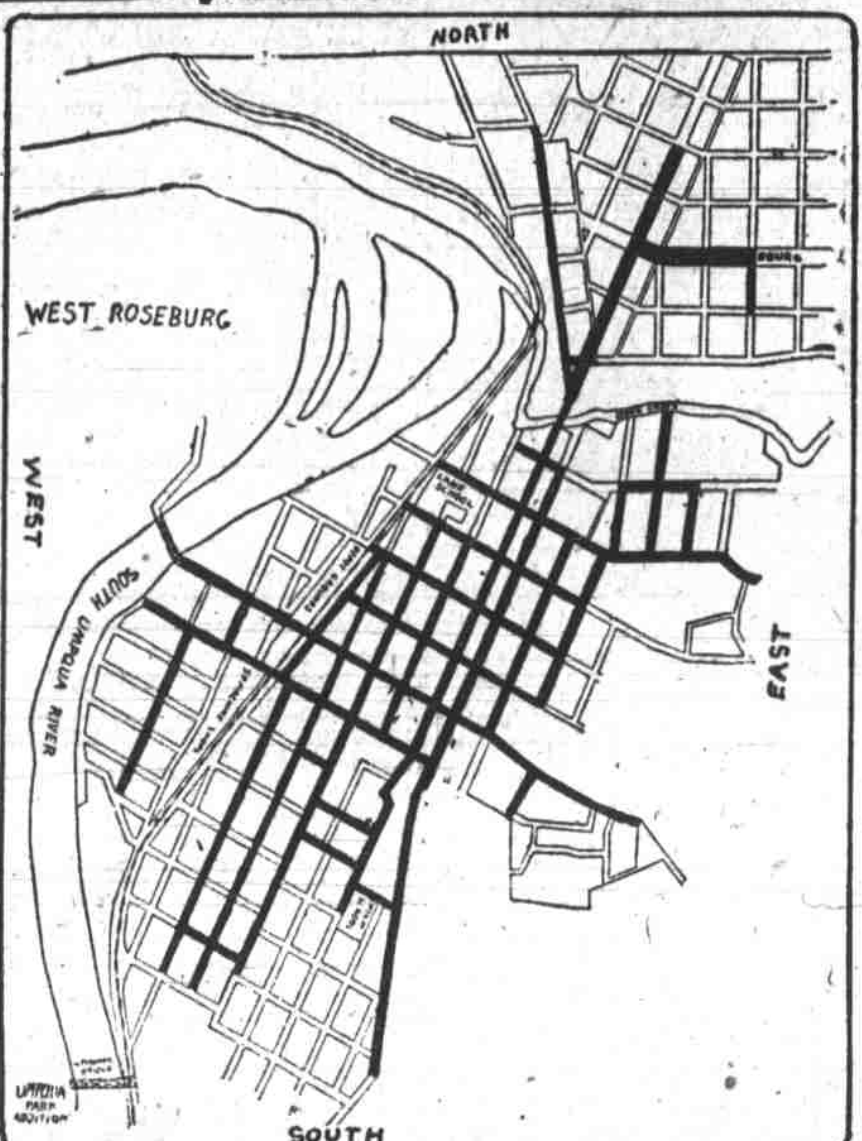

The first man to have legal right to the little domain was Thomas Ericson, who homesteaded it some twenty-four years ago. Then he sold to Chris Hoven, who sold to Carlson of Kalama, Carlson using it as a seining ground.

After the death of Carlson the property was sold to Brit White for $2600 and recently White sold it for $6000. One of the Indian tales connected with the little island is of a young squaw whose people lived on the Lewis river, up among the mountains back of where Woodland now stands. This little island maid had been promised by her father to a brave who was not at all to her liking and the romantic little brown lassie took it into her head to run away, which she did, for she was perfectly able to "paddle her own canoe."

Steering her little runaway craft safely down the Lewis river and into the broad Columbia, she wandered along until she met a fleet of hunters from the Cowitz country, who were on their way to Mt. St. Helens for hunting. The last canoe in this line of hunters proved that of a very desirable young brave, who appeared to please the eye of the little maid. And, being also attracted by the tales of the hunt and together the canoe paddled on in search of a home where they might rest secure from the vengeance of the enraged chief, father of the Indian maid, and the more enraged suitor. Thus they came to locate upon the little island, and the old chief's rage had time to cool before he found their hiding place.

It is said he was so pleased with the new son-in-law and the new home they had made for themselves that he readily forgave them and gave them a big feast.

Gates Resident Cuts Own Throat.
Salem, Or., April 12.—John Goodwin

The Umpqua hotel, built recently at Roseburg by the Provident Trust company of Portland; map showing Roseburg's paved area and streets for which contracts have been let, in all about nine and one half miles.

Roseburg, Or., April 12.—Faith in Roseburg's future is exemplified by the Umpqua hotel recently erected in Roseburg by the Provident Trust company of Portland, at a cost of $125,000. The structure is five stories high and is equipped with all modern conveniences. Most of the first floor is occupied by the lobby, which has a large fireplace and the dining room, the four upper floors being divided into guest rooms.

A number of other fine buildings are in view for the coming summer, among them being an armory which will cost $28,000, a federal building to cost $125,000.

Perkins, and probably a fine stone M. E. church, a Moose lodge and club rooms and a five story Odd Fellows' temple and office building.

Street paving work also will be resumed in a short time, and taken all in all Roseburg will have a busy year during 1913.

MRS. CUMMINGS SAFE IN CABIN AT CORDOVA

Fears of Her Mother Allayed by Letter; Gold Rush Is Cause of Silence.

(Special to The Journal.)

Pendleton, Or., April 12.—Mrs. Pearl Cummings, daughter of Mrs. J. D. Brown, of this city, who, her mother thought, had been abducted by white slavers in California, is safe in Cordova, Alaska, and will leave as soon as the weather permits for her claim at Esther creek, from which she has taken $40,000 in the last few years. Her mother has just received a letter from her, explaining the cause of her long silence.

Mrs. Cummings states in her letter that she intended coming on to Pendleton to visit her mother, but had received news of a rush being made to Esther creek, and hastened to get back. Mrs. Brown states that her daughter has been in Alaska for the past seven years, since she was 18 years of age. She has made a fortune in that time, and is in love with the northern country. She lives in a cabin on her claim, works her own claim, with the assistance of paid laborers, roughs it like a man, and intends spending her life there.

Her mother, who came here a year ago from Portland, was formerly named Hutchison, and it was under this name that she conducted the search for her daughter, because of the fact that the daughter had not been made aware of her marriage to J. D. Brown. "That was a surprise we had in store for her when she came to visit me," said Mrs. Brown.

MRS. J. B. DESPAIN DIES AT PENDLETON

(Special to The Journal.)
Pendleton, Or., April 12.—Mrs. J. B. Despain, a native daughter of Oregon, and a pioneer resident of Pendleton, passed away last night following a long illness. Her husband, who was a prominent merchant of this city, died two years ago. She is survived by nine children. The funeral will occur Monday.

OLD EMPIRE SETTLER CUT UP BY ADVERSARY

Refuses to Name Antagonist Although Slashed Severely by Knife of Caller.

(Special to The Journal.)
Marshfield, Or., April 12.—James Burnapp, a resident of Empire, was attacked at his home in that place by a man who cut him severely with a knife. One gash laid open his face. Burnapp refuses to tell who did the cutting further than that it was a man who came to his house this afternoon and demanded admittance. Burnapp is an old settler. He is probably not fatally hurt. A half-breed Indian woman who has figured in other trouble in the Empire and South Slough country, will probably be arrested as an investigation leads to the belief that she is mixed in the case.

GLENDALE REFUSES BIDS; INSTALLS OWN SEWERS

(Special to The Journal.)
Glendale, Or., April 12.—The city of Glendale has decided to build its own sewer system, as all bids submitted have been refused. Work will be started at once and a large number of men will be employed. The job will last for some months. Captain McGinnis, retired, U. S. A., will have charge of the engineering end of the work.

Nestucca, Or., Pioneer Dies.

Cloverdale, Or., April 12.—Charles Johnson, one of Tillamook's oldest pioneer residents, died Wednesday at the age of 87 years. He was a native of Finland, which he left when a young man, passing about five years as a sailor on the high seas, after which he spent some time in Canada, and finally came to Oregon, where he settled in the Nestucca country, in northern Tillamook county, in 1873.

WILLAMETTE PACIFIC TO HAVE 10 TUNNELS ON LINE TO COOS BAY

First Is Long Noti Tunnel and Four Are Between Sluslaw and the Umpqua.

(Special to The Journal.)
Marshfield, Or., April 12.—On the line of the Willamette Pacific railroad between Eugene and Coos Bay there are 10 tunnels, aggregating in length 14,360 feet, or two and one-half miles. The first tunnel out of Eugene is No. 1, known as the Noti tunnel. This will be 2300 feet long. It is partly finished, there being yet 760 feet to be driven. On the Sluslaw river is tunnel No. 2, which is 450 feet long.

Between the Sluslaw and the Umpqua rivers are four tunnels, Nos. 3 to 6, which will be 2030, 540, 1050 and 1580 feet in length. Tunnel No. 7 is the longest. It is known as the Wind creek tunnel, is 4300 feet long and is located south of the Umpqua river. It has been announced that the driving of this tunnel will be started at once. There has already been much work done clearing right-of-way up to the face of the tunnel and the contractors are now preparing for immediate work on driving the tunnel. It will require probably 18 months to do the work.

Below Wind creek are three other tunnels: No. 8, 510 feet; No. 9, 520 feet; No. 10, 730 feet. These last three tunnels are in the Ten Mile lake district and it is said that work on them will be started soon.

Construction of the road from the Wind creek tunnel north to connect with the road down the Sluslaw river will be rushed this summer, but from the tunnel south to Coos Bay there will not likely be much road building this year as it will require more time to build the tunnel than it will to construct the road from the tunnel south to Coos Bay.

DR. OWENS-ADAIR BILL MAY YET BE SCOTCHED

Referendum Petitions Against It Are All Ready for Circulation.

(Salem Bureau of The Journal.)
Salem, Or., April 12.—Representative Childs, of Linn county, was here today and said he believed the referendum would be invoked against the sterilization law, the state university improvement appropriations and the new game code. He said M. G. Munly, of Portland, was the leader in opposition to the sterilization law and that the petitions were all ready to be placed in circulation.

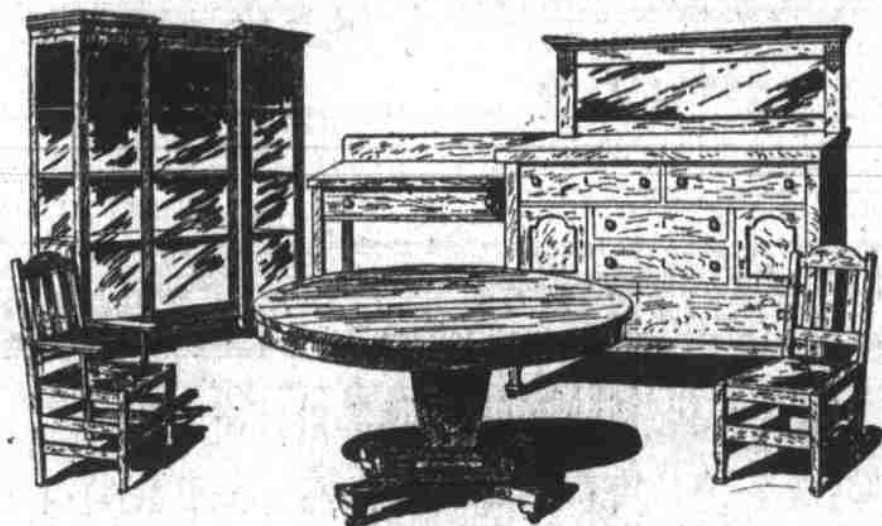

The Brownsville Rod and Gun club, of which Representative Childs is a member, is the chief source of opposition to the game code. Mr. Childs said the club had not decided what action it would take since the visit to the club last Tuesday of State Game Warden Finley, who endeavored to persuade the sportsmen to drop their opposition.

All material and supplies for the big tunnel will be shipped through Coos Bay and taken to the Ten Mile country on barges. Teamsters in the Ten Mile district have been hired to haul supplies to the camps at the tunnel site, which is being built by Contractors Willett and Burr for the Smith-Powers Logging company out of Myrtle Point down the south work of the Coquille river is progressing rapidly. All work that was possible during the bad weather was done and now that good weather will soon start a large force will be put on the job. Probably 2000 men will be at work on the road this summer. The contract requires that about 20 miles must be finished by July.

NEW HEADS IN CHARGE AT ST. HELENS

St. Helens, Or., April 12.—This city, partly through being the county seat, is suspected to have developed many of the features of the new colleges on the latter day code of mortal politicians. Whether true or not, it has been accused of being under the dictation of a boss and for a long time the citizens have been trying to get under new rule.

but the same element that controlled the county controlled the city. To add to the political complications the wet and dry question was grafted on as a sentimental issue, though not really endorsed by the drys. This had the effect of drawing the attention of those who heretofore had taken no part in the affairs of the city, and develop a very interesting fight at the election this week. The election has been of as much interest throughout the county as in the city as it effects the entire county, which has been spending large sums of money on roads. The election resulted in a complete overthrow of the old rule and the election of a progressive mayor and council.
