MRS. WILSON TO ATTEND SESSIONS

Mid-Biennial Council of Federated Clubs Meets in Washington This Week.

(By the International News Service.) Washington, April 21.—The work, play and all other activities of women's clubs of the United States will be discussed by the 500 women who constitute the mid-biennial council of the General Federation of Women's Clubs when that body opens its session at the New National Museum here tonight.

The meeting is the first the federation ever has held in Washington, and is attracted to this city by reason of the important activity of clubwomen here during the last year.

The real business of the council is to supervise the work of the federation for the coming year. This task will be begun tomorrow morning.

COLLEGE FOLK CLUB OF CORVALLIS PROUD OF AFFILIATION WITH STATE FEDERATION

Enrollment Books of Organization Opened to All Women in College Town.

"We clubwomen of Corvallis are very happy over having been admitted to the state federation and over having opened the doors of our club to the women of Corvallis," said Dr. Anna Z. Crane, dean of women at O. A. C., in discussing the activities of the women of the college town.

"For several years the College Folk club, made up wholly of women in some way connected with the college, has been an important factor in the social and intellectual life of the college set, and we had never federated. But this month has marked a new epoch in our progress for we have advanced in two directions. First we became affiliated with the state federation and then we voted to open our enrollment books to the women of Corvallis.

"This, I think, is as it should be, for we all know that in union there is strength. We expect to get much inspiration out of our membership in the state and general federation and in turn we hope to add our bit of good to the splendid work this great army of club women is doing. The little city of Corvallis has, strangely enough, never had a women's club; I mean by that a study or intellectual club, and probably the place is large enough for two but I think we have acted wisely and well in opening our College club to women not connected with the college. There are many very excellent women in our little city and I feel sure that we will find them very helpful, as many of them have been prominently identified with eastern clubs before coming to Oregon.

"This year our club has been making a special study of music and art and of sociology. Excellent papers on various phases of music and art, artists and musicians have been presented by our own members and for our sociological meetings were favored with speakers from Reed college. A mothers' department has also been one of the interesting and helpful departments of the club. We have one general meeting each month, and the departments meet once every two weeks. During the season we also have four social evening affairs to which gentlemen are invited. Just now there is an active plan on foot for the organization of a Faculty club to include both men and women.

in the self-government which we are introducing into the college for our girls. You know the boys have had self-government for some time, but with the girls it is a new thing, and I am keenly interested in its development, not only among the girls during school hours, but among the dormitory girls, of which there are 200. I hope to organize an Inner Circle, which will not only prove beneficial in the government of the girls during their college days, but will be a lasting influence on them through their lives.

"Our enrollment of girls has doubled within the last three years, and next year promises even a much larger attendance. Already I have registrations of 20 girls who have never before attended the college, who expect to live in the dormitory next year. They come not only from our own state, but from Washington, Idaho and even southern California."

RICH PLEASURE SEEKERS SCORED

Luxury-Loving Class Sets Example in Crime, Declares Bishop.

The wealthy, pleasure loving class of American citizens was roundly scored in a sermon yesterday morning by Rev. R. J. Cooke, resident bishop of Oregon for the Methodist Episcopal church.

"The people who have acquired wealth," he said, "and who then forget about their obligations to God and their fellow men, form the most dangerous element in America. The American people lead the whole world in crime, notwithstanding their supposed culture, science, literature, arts and all that makes for civilization. The crime record of the nation is traceable to the example of the luxury loving classes.

"We have more homicides than France, Belgium, Italy, Austria, Holland, Spain, Hungary, Germany, England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales combined. The general deterioration which exists in the social structure of this country is felt even in some church organizations, where humiliating conditions are allowed to exist.

"In some churches such strenuous efforts are made to get together a handful of hearers that the church actually turns a competitor of the motion picture opera houses. There are ingenious arguments necessary to explain and defend such outlandish methods, where a church may be reduced to a baseball club or concert hall. And even so, after expending millions of dollars in such efforts, the churches, in the matter of membership, have done little but mark time.

"The result of all this must necessarily be moral deterioration, social disintegration and national weakness. The evil power is in the example set by the fashionable leaders of the day, and my appeal is to them.

"Every good citizen owes something to the country, and since without morals there would be no state, he also owes something to the moral welfare of the state. You are not called upon to endorse the opinions of the pulpit, and are not asked to join the church without having the experience of the church. You are only asked to honor the majesty of God and to respect his institutions and his laws.

"The social leaders should throw their influence with the church, for the church is the only savior of society."

MONTAGUE TO EXPLAIN PREFERENTIAL VOTING

The Women's Political Science club extends to all the women of the city an invitation to attend the regular weekly meeting of the club to be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow in the lecture room of the Medical building. R. W. Montague will explain preferential voting, the amendments and answer all questions relative to the coming elections.
