Members of City Administration Point Out Inconsistent Record of Candidate for the Mayoralty Nomination.

That Gay Lombard, candidate for the Republican nomination to the mayor-alty, suddenly switched his attitude toward the proposed commission charter because he thought popular sentiment was against it and by changing front he could glean a few more votes was the common charge made by three speakers at a Rushlight campaign meetlog held in the hall at Front and Gibbs streets in South Portland last night. The speakers were Waldemar Seton, a member of the city executive board John F. Logan of the city civil service commission and George L. Baker, presicommission charter publicity committee, was particularly emphatic in his arraignment of Lombard, whom he challenged through the candidate's campaign manager, E. W. Wright, to a debate on the proposed charter at any time or place.

"Let me tell you people of South Portland," said Coupcilman Baker, "that in spite of the campaign of misrepresentation that has been made against the new charter and in spite of the hopes of Mr. Lombard who deserted the fight when he thought by so doing he could better his political fortunes, we are go-ing to have commission government for Portland. The new charter is going to be adopted by the people, most of whom are sick and tired of the ranting and raving of politicians and are at last beginning to learn the real reason for the opposition to the charter—the fear of public service and paving corporations that they may be regulated in the interest of taxpayers.

Calls Lombard Change-Pace. "Gay Lombard was a strong advocate of commission government two years ago," said Mr. Baker, "and he was then running for office against the present mayor. Being defeated, he deserted the cause of commission government until carly in the present campaign when he announced his candidacy for office.

"He was for commission government up till a few weeks ago, when he thought he heard a rumble against it. Perhaps his sudden change of front was also brought about when he opened the draft of the proposed charter, no doubt for the first time, and discovered that it contains a provision which would pre-vent him, if elected mayor, profiting byhis position as head of a big bonding company. That settled the matter for Lombard. He was against the charter after that, notwithstanding that he had knew all about the proposed charter and that it was a good one.

John F. Logan, in addressing the gathering on behalf of Mayor Rushlight's candidacy for relection, called attention to the fight of two years ago when Gay Lombard was first pitted against the present occupant of the mayor's chair. "Al G. Rushlight at that time was opposed by two of the most powerful newspapers of the city," declared Mr. Logan, "the political writers used every means of invective and invendo to defeat him and he won against all oppo-sition. Now after the lapse of nearly two years I want to call your attention to these same newspapers. You may scan their columns closely and you will find no word of criticism.

This is a remarkable record, for the present administration would certainly have come in for a bitter and scatching arraignment if it had not been conducted in a manner above reproach.

Took Little Interest Then. The mayor and I differ on many im portant public questions, but though I am one of his appointees on the important civil service commission, he has never once asked me to use my position to favor him in any way. I have voted with him and against him and I have never known him to use his office for the furtherance of his own personal or political interest. Indeed, he has, to my knowledge, hurt himself politically on a number of occasions, by voting for what he thought was right. "If I may be permitted to do so, I wish to refer a minute to the attitude of Gay Lombard toward the proposed charter. Mr. Lombard was appointed on the charter commission two years ago. I believe is attended two meetings and then left city. He now says he will, if elected mayor, appoint a 'good charter commission' and sbumit to the voters a charter that will suit him, ergo, one that cannot fail to suit the voters. Now he tells you that he could appoint a commission that will draft a satsfactory charter. He was a member of the commission that drafted the proposed charter. He left the city and permitted the commission to struggle along without his aid. Therefore, if, as he says, the proposed charter is not a good and he is to blame. He is the last man that you would expect to make a fight on the charter,

TO FINISH HIS TERM

Yesterday afternoon a man who had been out of the state penitentiary for some years left the county jail and was taken back to the state prison in charge of one of the wardens. He is Mac O'Brien, alias William Burke, who broke his parole because, he says, he was not been telling voters for weeks that he paid enough money while working as a steamfitter in the employ of the state while on this parole. He says he left because favoritism was shown. O'Brien, alias Burke, has been in the county jail at Seattle since last September, when he was picked up as a suspect in the Humbolt gold bullion robbery Shortly after his arrest he was recognized by Frank Curtis, formerly superintendent of the Oregon penitentiary, now a deputy sheriff under Word, as the man who had broken his parole

O'Brien was sent to the penitentiary from Pendleton, where he had been found guilty of robbery. Shortly after serving his sentence he was paroled and put to work as a steamfitter. Later he broke his parole and went to Canada, going from there to Alaska. He was employed on board the steamship Humbolt coming from Alaska when the vessel was robbed of the gold bullion. Along with others, he was arrested and sentenced to six months in jail in Seattle, because, he says, he refused to "squeal" on those who were known to have been implicated in the affair.

humble beginning as a plumber 15 years ago, of his indomitable energy, sterling honesty, steady purpose and long career of sacrifice for his sick crippled mother and sick brothers.

Mayor Rushlight took the platform for brief time and outlined the achievements of his administration. He showed how he had saved the taxpayers of the city hundreds of thousands of dollars in the reduced cost of paving, sewers and other public improvements; the reorganization of the police department, the water department and the city engineer's office any many other departmental changes. He said that if he had done nothing else he at least saved three times his salary in the construction of the Morrison street fill across the Tanner creek guich. Contractors wanted $30,000 to do this work, he said, but that with the assistance of Councilman Wilhelm, he had induced other contractors to use it as a dumping ground and the fill was made for about $2000.

The mayor will speak tonight at a hall on the corner of Russell street and Williams avenue.

CIVIL SERVICE WORKERS HEAR CHARTER TALKS

The civil service provisions of the commission charter were thoroughly explained to the 'civil service employes ast night at a meeting of the East Side Business Men's club, East Sixth and Morrison streets. L. M. Lepper, C. C. Hall and others explained the charter provisions, C. A. Bigelow presided. A great number of the civil service employes thought that there would not be as much protection under the proposed charter as there is under the present one, but Mr. Lepper took the stand that they would be better protected under the new commission charter, and gave different reasons to support his theories. The meeting was well attended and the entire time was taken over to the discussion. Even after the meeting many of the civil service men expressed doubt as to the benefits of the new charter. Other meetings of a similar nature will be held during the
