Wedding Kept Secret.

THE many friends of Miss Genevieve Kelly will be surprised to read of the wedding recently announced in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer as follows:

"Frank (Ike) Dowd, athlete, football hero and well known young man about town, and Miss Genevieve Kelly, a wealthy and popular Portland society girl who has many friends in Seattle, were very, very quietly married at Astoria by a justice of the peace two weeks ago.

"Following the ceremony they came to this city and very quietly began housekeeping in a cozy little home at 1014 First avenue west. Since then they have endeavored to keep their marriage a secret. Hence nothing is being said about it.

"That Mr. and Mrs. James B. Dowd of 1200 Queen Anne avenue, the bridegroom's parents, are aware of the marriage there is no doubt. It was admitted at the Dowd home this morning, though not for publicity.

"Frank's friends, of whom there are hundreds here, simply don't know a thing about it.

"The bridegroom himself could not be found today.

"Dowd played football at Broadway high school and at the University of Washington and last year was a member of the all-star professional football eleven commanded by Tom McDonald.

"Dowd now is in the contracting business and in the employ of Samuel G. Lamping, 519 Second avenue west."

This is their honeymoon trip, the doctor having been absent from his home in Brookline, the antiseptic suburb of Boston, for nearly a year on a protracted vacation. His new romance, entitled "Love and Life," which will soon be brought out in Boston and London, he expects to appear through a leading publishing house in Melbourne, Australia.

IN STAGELAND

"Food," a farcical treatment of the high cost of living, if such a thing can be farcical, is pleasing New York playgoers. It is at the Princess. C. DeMille, the author, has set the time of his action 50 years hence, when eggs are supposed to be as scarce as Beaver victories. Mrs. Basil, who, with her husband, a New Yorker, is living in moderate circumstances, has a mauffa for eggs. She is visited by Harold, a former sweetheart, and an officer of the food trust, who tempt her with an egg. As she is about to yield Basil enters, draws a revolver and acts as though he intended to "start something." To protect himself, Harold says:

"If you shoot I will drop this egg." He escapes, and later Mrs. Basil, in fixing things up with her husband, explains:

"You cannot imagine how great a temptation it was—you who have never eaten an egg."

"Food" is made up of such situations. Reviewers say it is clever and expressively acted.

Louise McCormick, 55, once prominent in melodrama, killed herself yesterday in New York by drinking poison. Nervous troubles had prevented his public appearance for two years.

Bert Williams, colored entertainer, is owner of a cafe with cabaret features in Chicago.

President Wilson went to see Eva Tanguay at a Washington theatre the other night. It is said that he broke another precedent by his presence at a vaudeville entertainment.

Billy B. Van, star comedian in "A Lucky Hoodoo," as chairman of a national committee organized in Detroit, Mich., has sent the postmaster general a petition signed by more than half a million traveling men protesting against the Sunday closing of post-offices.

Donald Brian, who has just closed a long tour in "The Sifen," is planning a visit to Europe, where a musical play in which he may be seen next season is now being presented in one of the continental capitals. Brian wants to see a few performances of it. Later on he will take his real vacation somewhere in rural America.

Dispatches say that Madame Sarah

DUCHESS OF RUTLAND TO ARRANGE BALLET

The Duchess of Rutland.

London, April 24.—One of the sensations of the season is to be a dance which the Duchess of Rutland is trying to arrange and which is to be in the nature of a society ballet.

There is a great craze here for ballet dancing. This is partly due to the popularity of Pavlova, the Russian dancer, who seems to be received everywhere. Lady Diana Manners, the Duchess' daughter, has studied with Pavlova and now far excels many a professional ballerina.

Bernhardt has turned up her nose at an offer of nearly $700 a minute to pose for the "talking pictures." Madame says she will take not less than $1200 a minute. The sad part of it is that madame will probably get what she asks for.

TOO MUCH ADVICE

By Edna K. Woolley.

"I am thoroughly weary of being advised," remarked a woman friend of mine with some asperity. "And I'm tired to death of all this marriage talk," she went on.

"It was bad enough when only the women's magazines and the women writers had the monopoly of that sort of thing," said our friend. "We could bear up even under actresses' advice concerning beauty and behavior. We didn't have to read the stuff if we didn't want to.

"But I can't take up a newspaper any more with advice and comment on the most intimate matters concerning women. No longer is this kind of thing confined to women writers. The men have started. I could name half a dozen right now who are putting out a series of articles on marriage, women, babies, etcetera. And the funny part of it is that they're only repeating what the women writers have been telling up right along—things that most of us knew, anyway.

"All the ministers have joined in too. Every Monday's paper is full of reports of sermons on how a woman should manage her home, husband, and babies, how she should cook, and how she should spend her leisure; how she should or shouldn't dress, and what points she should cultivate to be an ideal wife and mother.

"I am not saying that we women don't need advice occasionally. But we're getting too much of it gratis. It's grown cheap. The result is that we're looking askance at even good advice. And now that the men have begun it, too—well, it's too much. We didn't mind Mr. Bok so much, because he was a pioneer in his line and we had grown used to him. He was unique in his way. We sort of laughed and let him go ahead, while we did as we liked. He didn't rub it in, anyway.

"The fact is that the modern woman is pretty clever.

"She knows her business, whether it's tapping a typewriter or minding babies or bossing a husband.

"She has her own individual problems to work out, and she's got to work them out her own way. Interference is confusing and aggravating, misleading in most cases. And the college professor who puts his theories of a housewife's efficiency on paper ought to be punished by being made to do the actual duties of a housewife and

MUTTON DISHES

By Oscar Tschirky, Manager of Waldorf-Astoria.

Country Stewed Mutton. Put three pounds of mutton or shoulder of mutton into a saucepan, having cut it in small squares, with an ounce of butter and six small onions. Cook for 10 minutes, or until of a good golden color. Add three tablespoonfuls of flour, mix well together and moisten with three pints of water or light broth, stirring continually while boiling. Season with a tablespoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of pepper, a half teaspoonful of nutmeg, adding two carrots and two turnips cut into small pieces, a bunch of sweet herbs and a crushed clove of garlic. Boil over a moderate fire for 30 minutes, put in a half pint of cooked lima or white beans, let the whole cook again for 15 minutes, skim off the fat, remove the parsley and serve.

Mutton Steak, Florentine. Cut the meat off a leg of mutton in thick slices, rub each slice over with salt, pepper, and grated nutmeg on both sides. Season breadcrumbs with thyme, savory, cloves, mace, salt and pepper, and bind them with beaten yolks of eggs. Then divide and mould the mixture into small balls. Butter the edges of a pie dish, line them with paste and put in the slices of mutton, together with the balls, also four chopped shallots, a little powdered herbs and two or three anchovies. Moisten with one half pint each of claret and water and put on top one half pound of butter, broken in small pieces. Cover with puff paste and trim around the edges, moistening and pressing them together. Bake in a hot oven and serve while very hot.

Curried Mutton Kidneys. Pour a wineglassful of rich gravy or brown sauce into a saucepan with one tablespoonful of butter well kneaded with curry powder and boil until it is fairly thick. Meanwhile cut three portions in rings, fry them over a moderate fire to color slightly, sprinkle with a little salt and drain them. Put a dozen mutton kidneys, skinned and minced very fine, into a frying pan with a little butter and fry until done. Place them on a strainer to remove all fat, arrange them on a dish; pour the sauce over them and decorate with rings of fried onions and potato croquettes.

The Coterie Meets.

The Coterie held its regular social and literary meeting yesterday morning at Ellery's hall, the president, Mrs. M. T. L. Hidden presiding. Sheeman gave an interesting paper descriptive of the home life and educational facilities in the Philippines, where she made her home for a number of years. Mrs. James Bristol spoke briefly on pure food and pure food laws. A delightful feature of the morning was a piano solo by Mr. Lockwood. Following the program the members enjoyed a luncheon at the Hazelwood, covers being laid for twenty.
