Semi-evening gown, showing novel sash display.

By Lillian Young.

A notable feature of the Balkan persuasion in dress is the broad swathed sashes. One sees them in various forms on suits and dresses, and now on afternoon and evening gowns. Have you a long, wide, silken scarf? Use it by all means. It will be just the thing for a draped sash. Tied in the back, tucked in the front, looped down below one hip, draped in flat folds, the sash continues modish and interesting.

A novel sash arrangement of a broad black chiffon scarf is shown in the gown of the sketch. It is cut in half and crossed in front, forming a point under the bust. Each side drapes diagonally down across the hips, and in back is tied in a flat panel arrangement with the ends finished with fringes.

The gown, suitable for receptions or semi-evening wear, is of gray-blue charmeuse and chiffon of the same shade, embroidered with tiny cut steel beads. The head embroidered chiffon, over a foundation of white net, is used for the hipline-sleeved blouse. This is cut with a V-neck that is partly filled in with a fold of white chiffon. The sleeves are banded with an inch-wide fold of black chiffon, tied in a flat bow on the outside and finished with scanty gathered ruffles of white chiffon. Hints above the sash on either side of the front is a triangular shaped bib of the charmeuse.

The skirt is of the gray blue charmeuse, with an overdrap of the head-embroidered chiffon swirling from the left hip down across the front and around the feet. The charmeuse is held in a tulle on the right side under this and then drapes over it, forming a small train in back.

HINTS FOR SHOPPER AND HOUSEKEEPER

By Vella Winner

Beauty Hint.
In selecting face powder take care that the proper shade is chosen. I know a woman who has long been using a deep flesh color and when it was suggested that pure white would be more becoming, she scoffed the idea, but was finally persuaded to try it. As a result the purplish cast which was noticed in her complexion has been transformed to a proper shade.

Balkan Blouses.
The Balkan cut has invaded the land of the middy blouse and now the new arrivals are somewhat fuller than usual and are confined at the bottom in a broom-skirt band after the manner of the Balkan blouse seen in the suit departments and on some women who evidently believe in the old adage "one may as well be out of the world as out of fashion." The new middies come in white with blue and white and red and white collars and ties and there are also some in khaki for tramping and camping. I found these at a big up-town shop where one always finds the novelties.

Victoria Chocolates.
If you have ever been in Victoria, B. C., you are probably familiar with the picturesque old man who goes about the city every day with a big basket filled with boxes of the famous Victoria chocolates which he sells for a dollar a pound. Only this old man and his wife know the secret of making these confections and so closely do they guard their secret that they will not employ any assistance in their little shop, doing all the work themselves. Neither will they sell their candy to any except customers. The proprietor of the attractive little "sweets" shop on "Theatre Row" has come dangerously near solving the old man's mystery and is putting out a chocolate that so strongly resembles the original "Victoria" in both appearance and flavor that it is difficult to tell it from the "real thing." The filling has a peculiar maple flavor and the chocolate covering is mixed with ground nuts. They are delicious.

Strawberry Muffs.
Now that the strawberry season is on, you will probably be interested to know that the big hardware store on Fourth street is supplied with the best, fat little strawberry muffins imaginable. They are tweezer-like in shape and size.

FOR THE HOUSE-KEEPER

Four pages of valuable suggestions will be included in THE SUNDAY JOURNAL Magazine for next Sunday.

Reducing Living Expenses

The cost of living and facts pertaining thereto is a most vital topic. After a careful study of the subject, Winifred Harper Cooley tells many ways in which you can cut corners to make your income go a little farther.

The New Brides-maids

The month of brides is approaching and accordingly Lady Burr Gordon, fashion authority, writes of the newest costumes for the bride and her attendants.

What a Lemon Will Do

A lemon is an unappreciated subject, but Mrs. Henry Fynes handles it in a way that appeals to all women who take pride in their personal appearance.

Guest Towels

Adelaide Byrd offers a fascinating needlework design for hand embroidered towels so suitable for the bride's chest.

NEXT SUNDAY

Long Skirts Mean Low Shoes.
With the advent of very long skirts, low shoes are coming in with a swoop that makes happy the maiden who possesses a pretty ankle. The colonial pump and the Oxford are both good and are to be gotten in patent, suede, gummetal and satin. The new toe is moderately round and the heels are a trifle lower than those of past seasons. Many of the new pumps are ornamented with fancy buckles.

Shine Off.
For the powder case, to carry in the handbag, let it be instead of a chamois skin—which I have always thought put the shine on one's nose—a piece of fine white velvet. It need not be of fine quality, but may be of the cotton backed variety. It is softer than mole skin or down, and of the most used powder "rag," and it takes the shine off instantly. You may "prettify" it if you wish, by rounding the corners and sewing a tiny lace edge upon it.

Beautiful Big Bows.
Beautiful bows of enormous proportions are making their bows from the hats of fashionable women, word having been received from the east that the big bow is "the thing." It is made of either the Bulgarian colors, black, white or the delicate pastel tints, is stiffly wired and stands at an angle to suit the individual taste or shape of the face.

Late Wrinkles.
A dainty and inexpensive wash goods available in all the wanted colors is christened Linax.

The new picture hats introduce the French fashion of streamers down the back, they may be in gay, ribbons, but are most often of black velvet.

SELLING hats for fancy wear are more elaborately embroidered than ever before. Some are even set with rhinestones.

Probably never before have silk shirt waists had the popularity they now enjoy. They are dainty, serviceable, comfortable and easily laundered.

Already the brilliant Nell Rose is beginning to wane in popularity and its place is being taken by French blue and the new shades of green.

Ratine hats for jaunty morning wear are in great demand. They come in white, pink, blue and other dainty colors and are very fetching.

SERVICE AS MISSIONARY AMONG INDIANS CREATES CONFIDENCE IN REDMEN'S TRAITS

Miss Isabel Crawford Tells of Her Work Among Indians in Oklahoma.

By V. W.

Miss Isabel Crawford, for 14 years a successful missionary among the Indians of Oklahoma, was a visitor in Portland last week and while here addressed a number of gatherings in the various Baptist churches on her work among the red men. Miss Crawford is now traveling superintendent of missions among the Indians and is on her way to the reservations in Montana and she may go on to Alaska before returning east.

"My principal work was at Saddle Mountain, where there are about 1,600 Indians," said Miss Crawford. "I was always kindly received by the Indians, who said, 'A white Jesus man never sat down among us—one white Jesus woman come all alone, and no scared; this is good; the Great Father talked to your heart and we will listen to you.'"

"But you must have met many obstacles in trying to teach these people. What was the greatest one?" I asked.

"Their prejudice against the white man, which was the most natural thing in the world when one considers how they had been treated by the whites, cheated and stolen from and pushed farther and farther away from their lands. After all, the Indians are very like we white people, when once they have been betrayed it is hard to again get their confidence, but when once won they are faithful, kind and generous."

Generosity is Prominent Trait.

"Speaking of generosity; after I had been at Saddle Mountain some time I urged my interpreter's wife to can some fruit for the winter and she and I together put up 40 cans of berries and other fruit. One day later there was a celebration in the home and there were a number of other people present. She gave the visitors some of her fruit, meaning to open a few cans and give each one a little dish of the sauce, but instead she set all 40 cans on the table and told them to help themselves, and they took every last can, and she thought it was all right, but you may be sure I didn't. I wasn't quite accustomed to such wholesale hospitality."

"I am especially proud of my Saddle Mountain Indians, not only because they have erected their own church there on the reservation and worship in large numbers, but because they have erected three churches and four missions in other reservations, notably on the Hopi reservation in Arizona. I tried so hard to teach them that the real Jesus spirit was to help others and thus help one's self and they have proven it in their work to Christianize their brothers as well as themselves. I suggested that when I first went there I always sat around the campfire at night and listened to them tell their stories. Sometimes they were interpreted to me and sometimes they were not, but I always listened and when it came my turn I took the pipe of peace and went through all the motions of smoking and passed it on just as it had been passed to me. Finally they begged me to tell them a story, and so I told them about All

Baba and the 40 thieves, and such a stir made. I had never told them any thing but Bible stories before, and I think they had the 12 disciples, the 40 thieves and the 70 elders as badly mixed in their minds as some of our preachers do some of their theological problems, but the Indians are straightened out more easily. All I had to do was to tell them that the story of the disciples and the elders were in the Jesus book and the other was a big lie.

Indians are Great Eaters.

"Speaking of things to eat, Indians are the biggest eaters I ever saw. I once went to the tepee of an Indian who was supposed to be very sick; in fact, all of his relatives were there, expecting the end most any time, and that was the reason I had been sent for. When I came near a big washbasin was piled high with meat. It looked like enough for the whole crowd, and I supposed it would be placed in the middle of the table, but instead it was taken to the sick man and he ate every bit and had the pan refilled.

"The Indians are not polygamous as many people seem to think they are. Formerly they sometimes had two wives, usually sisters, but even that is rare now. Their marriage ceremony was well, there isn't any ceremony at all; it is simply an exchange of gifts and then the buck carries off his squaw to his tepee. The matches are invariably made by the parents of the bride and the prospective bridegroom and the men are usually true to their wives. It behooves the women to be true to their husbands or else get out of their reach, for if found out a favorite way of punishing them is to bite off their noses and then turn them out of the tepee. I know one old fellow who bit off the noses of four wives at different times; some way he seemed to be unfortunate in getting filthy wives."

WOMEN'S CLUBS

Woman's Political Science Club.

The Women's Political Science club will hold a special meeting Friday afternoon and another on Monday afternoon in the lecture room of the Medical building for the purpose of seeing and hearing short addresses from the various candidates for commissioner. Each member of the club present at the last regular meeting suggested the names of those to be invited to these two meetings. The following were those named: C. C. Craig, A. G. Clark, L. M. Lepper, Marshall N. Dana, C. E. Mears, C. A. Bigelow, W. B. Hollingsworth, R. C. Clyde, W. C. Benbow, Will Daily, H. P. Wagoner, R. G. Dieck, M. L. T. Hildan, A. E. Borhwick, W. L. Brewster, T. N. Stoppenbach, J. H. Nolta, Victoria Hampton, George W. Sellers and D. W. Ward. C. L. McKenna, candidate for mayor, will be the speaker of the next regular meeting of the club to be held next Tuesday.

Art Club to Meet.

The club conducted for the study of art by Mrs. Alice Welster will meet tomorrow evening at the East Side library. Mrs. Welster will speak on Italian art, illustrating her talk with stereopticon slides of some of the great artists and their masterpieces. Italian art is the special subject under consideration now. Other speakers will be Mrs. LeNore, Mrs. R. B. Schmidt and Mrs. L. B. Whitney. The public is invited to this meeting.

Multnomah Chapter, D. A. R.

Multnomah chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, was entertained very delightfully yesterday afternoon by Mrs. C. U. Gantenbein, 406 East Twenty-fourth street. Members of the Willamette chapter were special honor guests and the entire company numbered about 70. The program was opened with a piano solo, "Hark, Hark, the Lark" (Liszt), Mrs. Miller. Papers were read as follows: "Martha Washington," Mrs. John Pearson; "Abigail Adams," Mrs. Robert Farrell; "Martha Jefferson Randall," "Dolly Madison," Mrs. I. L. Patterson. All of the papers were exceedingly interesting and brought before the members vivid pictures of these colonial women who played such a great part in the early history of our country. The program was rounded out by a piano solo by Mrs. John F. Beaumont. During the social hour while tea being served, Marshall N. Dana met the women informally and in response to their questions explained the working of the preferential ballot to be used in the forthcoming election.

Portland Woman's Club.

The regular meeting of the Portland Woman's club will be held tomorrow afternoon in Women of Woodcraft hall. The program will begin at 3 o'clock and will be as follows: Current events, Mrs. C. M. Hoerber; soprano solo, Miss Korressa Wurtenberger, accompanied by Miss Edna Acker; address, "The Creative Power of an Ideal," Dr. John H. Boyd, pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

IN STAGELAND

Alice Fleming, now leading lady with the Alcazar company, San Francisco, is soon to open in "The Ne'er-Do-Well," Charles Klein's dramatization of Rex Beach's story of life in the Panama canal zone.

Miss Elele Janis with her "Love Letters of an Actress," and Miss Evelyn Van Buren as author of "Pippin," are two actor folk who have taken a fling at writing during the season.

John Drew was telling a reporter in a western city the other day that he thought he might appear next season in a revival of "Much Ado About Nothing."

"You've played Shakespeare?" inquired the interviewer.

"About a million roles," said Mr.

Drew. And then as the reporter rose to go he said in an alarm that was as good as real if it wasn't, "For heaven's sake, don't write that I said a million roles or some old Baconian will come along and say Shakespeare never wrote that many."

Ethel Charlotte Mantell, 16-year-old daughter of Robert B. Mantell, the Shakespearean actor, has made her professional debut on the stage. Singularly she appeared in the same theatre where her father made his first American appearance.
