

Social and Personal

By Nora Lawler

TO sensitive people with any degree of fine feelings it is always a little matter of moment on humorous occasions to know whether their dear friends are laughing with them or at them. They say fine feelings are scarce in society; the edges get dulled, but who knows.

Sometimes, in this vale of tears it even seems worth while to be laughed at, if it will bring a smile to sour lips. It is a Christian like to suffer in so good a cause. So we are not condemning in the following little episode narrated but just considering that little matter of fine feelings which were certainly ruffled by at least one person present—but they were not dining.

A group of young people stood in the reception-hall of a popular country club. It was a big day at the club, opening or something of the kind. It was past time to dine but in the newness of things they were a bit delayed and every one was pleasant as could be expected on such an occasion.

Edging their way through the gayly gowning throng were two persons who seemed to have something on their minds besides dining. Little curious but business-like surveys they made of each other's costumes worn, and the wearers looked amused, conscious or bored as their temperament happened to run.

"Could one say ruffian-ruffian-ruffian with flowered with Dresden crepe over and over again" was plainly to be read in the bewildered eyes of the reporters. This was an informal affair and as such costumes predominated. There was at least a vest from "charmeuse." For that a grateful prayer went up to high heaven.

Wives were taxed to the utmost in the all absorbing task, so little notice of people and personalities was permitted the visitors.

A general view of the whole assembly was offered from an obscure corner and here we found the humorist.

Near at hand were a group of very smart people but young ones, just married or going to be. They were a bit tired and hungry and much pressed to keep up the flippant tone of conversation. A lull ensued and one young man came to the rescue. He looked hopefully around the crowd for an inspiration and found it at his very elbow, a reporter! Gladly he leaned toward his companions and they clustered, hopefully for something to say.

For that a grateful prayer went up to high heaven. With an inane giggle he burst out in a sonorous stage whisper, "Look who we have with us."

But to give them their dues, he was the only giggle, he was bored and disappointed with his news.

Miss Alice Dougherty Married.

Of especial interest this morning was the wedding of Miss Alice Dougherty to Thomas Jay Ward. The affair was quite informal only the relatives being present. They were married at 10 o'clock by Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Ward will leave this evening for a delightful honeymoon trip in the Canadian Rockies.

Mr. and Mrs. Villard Kiel (Lucy Dougherty) were the only attendants.

Miss Dougherty is the daughter of Mrs. Edward James Dougherty. Mr. Ward is formerly from St. Louis but has been about three years in Portland.

The bride who is a handsome brunette was simply crowned in a pearl gray tulle and lace. Her charming smile and plumed hat to match. She wore an effective corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Her sister wore a royal blue corded silk suit and carried an arm bouquet of Richmond roses.

ALL CITY GARDEN EXHIBIT PLANNED

Pupils Notified to Be Ready for Products Show Next Friday.

Bulletins were sent all the school children of Portland today calling upon them to get ready for the all-city exhibit of school garden products next Friday, and for the opening of the first public market by the juveniles in the exhibit building at First and Stark streets, next Saturday morning. It is considered quite significant that Portland's first public market should be arranged by the children, aided by the Woman's club and the Garden Contest league. The bulletins about the exhibit and the market sent out by Contest Director M. O. Evans read as follows:

"Place—S. W. corner of First and Stark streets.

"Time—Friday, June 27. Building will be open for receiving exhibits from 8 a. m. until 11 a. m. Open to public from 1 p. m. until 10 p. m.

"Getting to the impossibility of obtaining the armory or other large place, we are compelled to insist that only the very best products from each district be sent in for exhibition. All vegetables exhibited will be for sale the following day at the opening of the juvenile public market, which will occupy the same quarters. Proceeds will be used to pay expenses of the exhibit.

"A committee from the agricultural club in each district should find out by Thursday noon approximately how much will be exhibited from that district. A meeting of these committees will be held at the exhibit room at 2 p. m. Thursday. Space will be assigned and identification tags distributed. A district without representation at that time is likely to be left out.

"Each bunch or single specimen must be tagged with a regulation tag properly filled in. This must be done before the exhibits are presented at the place of exhibit.

"Classifications for individual prizes will be stated in the green circulars issued early in the season, except as follows:

"Green onions—Best three bunches (instead of six).

"Peas—No prizes for best vine with pods.

"Turnips—Best four specimens (instead of six).

"All directions must be carefully followed. Exact numbers specified, no more, no less."

Children may bring for sale in the public market all sorts of vegetables, flowers and fruit grown by them or given them for the harvesting. Also anything made in any manner by boys and girls, including cooking, needlework and handicraft of any sort.

Full proceeds will be given to the producers, less a small commission for running the market. Settlements will be made monthly.

Definite transportation arrangements will be made as soon as it can be determined which districts are going to participate.

U. OF O. STUDENT EARNS WAY, BUT FINDS TIME FOR COLLEGE ACTIVITIES

Miss Beatrice Littlefield Won Place on Co-ed Intercollegiate Debating Team.

(Special to The Journal.) University of Oregon, Eugene, Or., June 24.—Coming to the university nine months ago with but a few dollars earned by picking berries and working about a farm near Elgin during the summer, Miss Beatrice Littlefield, a freshman, set quite a mark for herself by not only working her entire way through college, but by making the college co-ed debate team, which won from the University of Washington a few weeks ago. She was the only freshman to make the team, and the first to do so in four years. She has earned her room and board by assisting in the home where she lived, outside of her college hours. She is attractive and is popular in her classes.

This summer she will work in the berry field and hop yards, and possibly leave, preparatory to resuming her work at the university next fall. She is not the only co-ed who has worked her way through the university, but she is one who has done so and taken equal part in student activities.

EQUALITY LEAGUE WILL HOLD SESSION THURSDAY

Principally about People

Professor J. A. Bexell, dean of the school of commerce of the Oregon Agricultural college, at Corvallis, is in Portland today on business. Professor Bexell plans to leave on a visit to Michigan soon, accompanied by Mrs. Bexell.

Miss Miriam Van Waters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Van Waters, 422 East Twenty-fifth street, north, has accepted a position in social service work in Boston. Miss Van Waters recently graduated from Clark university at Worcester, Mass., where she received her doctor of philosophy degree. Miss Van Waters is a graduate of the University of Oregon and went east to take up advanced work.

"Thank you," said J. H. Haner of Prineville, who is stopping at the Perkins, to Mr. Thompson, the clerk, as he handed Haner a small bundle of legal papers. "The papers represent about $4,000. I am here on a case in court and here is the stuff." Then he carefully tucked the valuable package in an inside pocket and walked away.

C. H. Shaffer, chief clerk at the Imperial hotel, and Ross Finigan, chief clerk at the Carlton, who were elected delegates to the national convention of the Hotel Clerks' association to meet in St. Paul, Minn., July 1, will leave for the east tomorrow.

F. G. Mock, a business man of Nampa, Idaho, and wife, arrived yesterday at the Multnomah, after motoring all the way from the Idaho city. "We had a fine trip in spite of the fact that we got stuck in the mud several times and had to wade out, with the auto in tow."

"Things look awfully good down our way," said W. B. Bolton, a rancher of Witch Hazel, Or., who is stopping at the Multnomah. "Crop prospects were never better, but we have to work harder this summer than ever before." And to prove his assertion he displayed two well blistered hands.

"Not only are the crops looking good in eastern Oregon, but the mining prospects are better than ever before. A nugget that was worth $1408.62 was brought in from Soussville last week and created considerable stir," said George B. Small, a newspaper editor of Baker, who arrived at the Cornelius this morning. "The recent rains here have extended east of the mountains and are doing us lots of good."

This story was told by State Game Warden William L. Finley and he vouches for it. He also showed the dried snake skin to prove that the story is true. The snake was the state normal school at Monmouth two Sundays ago—a walking went with his sweetheart. In the course of their rambles on "Cupid's noon," a huge bull snake was spied, stretched out in the hot sun. His under side, which at that time, happened to be uppermost, was lined with half a dozen curious looking knobs. The snake was dispatched and dissected. The bumps were found to be China pheasant eggs. The eggs were opened and found to be nearly hard boiled. The student wrote to Finley, sending the skin to show that he was fabricating. Finley replied that the hot sun and the native heat of the serpent had combined to stew the pheasant fruit. The skin is four feet, eight inches long, which shows that the former inhabitant was some bull snake as the story is some story.

"We are going to have some visitors Tacoma during the Montezuma Feste week, July 2-6," said A. D. Wick, traveling passenger agent for the Southern Pacific, with headquarters at Tacoma, who is in the city today. "Tacoma is making elaborate preparations, and we look for a large crowd."

Until a few weeks ago, Mr. Wick was chief assistant to General Passenger Agent John M. Scott of the Southern Pacific here, but since his promotion to the Tacoma field he has rapidly developed the faculty to boost Tacoma and he overlooks no opportunity to talk Montezuma Feste.

"I like Portland and have many friends here," said Mr. Wick this morning, "but I want to tell you Tacoma is all right and forging to the front all the time. Come to our Feste and have a good time."

Next Thursday night at 9 o'clock a dinner of 100 plates will be served in the crystal dining room in the Hotel Irving here, at the Postmaster Frank Myers. Those present will be employees of the postoffice department.

E. J. Abbey and wife and P. M. Abbott, hotel people of Newport, are guests at the Cornelius.
