Grant-Pratt.

One of the pretty weddings of the month took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Pratt on Wednesday evening, July 9, when Miss Maybelle Claire Pratt was married to Benjiman Wiley Grant. The ceremony was preformed by the bride's father. The house was decorated in pink and green. An altar of palms, ferns and roses was placed in the dining room. The living room and hall were a mass of pink roses and ferns.

Just before the bridal party come in Miss Ethel Fraker sang Greig's "I Love Thee," accompanied by Miss Gladys M. Morgan. To the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march played by Miss Morgan, the bridal party crossed to the altar. Miss Anita Slater and Miss Lois Pratt were bridesmaids. Miss Slater wore a gown of lace over silk; Miss Pratt wore flowered chiffon over satin. They carried bouquets of sweet peas. The bride intered on the arm of her father. Her gown was of crepe meteor made en traine, and she wore a full tulle veil caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of Bride roses.

Ices were served on the large porch which had been made a bower of roses and ferns with softly shaded lights.

Only the immediate families, a few very intimate friends were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant will be at home at 84 East Twenty-seventh street after August 10. Both Mr. and Mrs. Grant were popular University of Oregon students and have a large circle of friends. Mrs. Grant is a member of the Beth Reah Sorority. Mr. Grant was graduated from the university in 1912. He is a member of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity.

SCHOOLS IN COOS MUCH INTERESTED

Exhibit Will Be Sent to Industrial Contest to Be Held at Salem.

(Special to The Journal.)

Coquille, Or., July 21.—"Coos county is likely to be heard from at the state industrial contest for the schools," says L. P. Harrington, industrial field worker, who will remain in this county for several weeks.

"In touring Coos county in the interest of the county and state industrial contest for the schools," he said, "I find a lively interest in any and every move that will help to make the schools and the school work more practical and efficient.

"There will be a good county fair at Myrtle Point, September 12, and the school department will be a prominent and interesting feature. Good prizes are being offered by business men in the various towns of the county for articles that boys and girls can raise and make.

"'Hand training' is considered an important feature in the educational system of Coos county. An effort will be made to send the best from the county exhibit to the state industrial contest at Salem, September 29. If satisfactory arrangements can be made for transportation this will be done.

"The people of Coos county are progressive, they have the products and are anxious to show what their schools are and what the boys and girls are doing. There is no question but that when Coos county has been thoroughly developed, agriculture, horticulture and dairying will be her great resources. Timber she has in abundance, but this resource will diminish as the county develops.

"I have been impressed with the extent and importance of dairying at the present time. Cheese factories, condensers and creameries are becoming common in this section and with the rapid growth of rich, nutritious grass and clover large herds of good dairy cows can be kept.

"Better roads are needed and there is a strong sentiment in favor of concerted action on the part of the county in having thorough and systematic work done. A big meeting at Marshfield this week has given this progressive movement an euthusiastic start.

"County Superintendent R. E. Baker is wide awake to the best interests of the schools of his county. In his work he has the help of an able supervisor and the cooperation of progressive city superintendents."

According to a Finnish scientist the air around pine and fir trees is purer than around other trees because their needles act on the atmosphere as disseminators of electricity and ozonize it.

BROAD VISION MOST ESSENTIAL

Wide View Secured by Education Should Be Used for Spiritual Betterment.

"A Broader Vision" was the topic of a practical educational sermon delivered yesterday morning by Rev. George F. Hopkins, pastor of the Patton M. E. church.

Rev. Mr. Hopkins said in part:

"The child at home, as Lyman Abbott recently said, is taught in the early years of its life by the mother, and unconsciously has learned many things not ever to be taken out even when mature. But when the child starts to school it soon has a wider vision of things. The three 'R's' that used to be so much talked of are only the essentials that open the wider vision of the child to life in its multiplied phase.

"The eighth grade finished, or at the close of the common school, many say enough. The high school as it used to be was mainly to fit for a college course. Now we have ,vocational schools and technical institutions. Our own Trade School in Portland is taking and giving not only a wider vision to the student in literature and science and mathematics, but fits the boy and girl for life's work. But the high school also has its mission, fitting for other wider visions of life.

"So also our colleges and universities are really vision wideners. We need leaders in all lines of our country. We need men and women of the greatest vision. Our great state institutions of higher learning and our many denominational schools are supplying this. But the broadest vision is not of book knowledge only. We cannot omit the spiritual also. So the presidents of the great state schools are asking that pastors for students be placed in college towns to give their whole time and attention to the spiritual needs of the students. This is in harmony with the greatest teacher and the man of broadest vision, the master, Jesus Christ. Let the aim of all youth be to get the widest and clearest vision possible by education, and then bear the responsibility resting on them, and become leaders in life and especially in things that tend to the betterment of the world, through the fullest spiritual vision."

Mormons Will Picnic Thursday.

(Special to The Journal.)

DRESSING WELL ON TEN DOLLARS A WEEK

Denver, July 19.—Any working girl who is making $10 a week can dress well. That's what Crystal Herne, known as one of the best dressed women on the stage, says, and she declares she knows whereof she speaks, for she has done it. Miss Herne believes that if a girl studies the psychology of dress she can do it. By "psychology of dress" she means the art of dressing to suit one's individualities of character and style. The plainest looking girl, she believes, can "get herself up" attractively if she but practices the psychology of dress.

"Every woman has her own individual characteristics and her own peculiar personality," said Miss Herne today. "If she dresses to fit her character and style she will attain the ideal in correct clothes. She will not need to spend a great deal to achieve this object. It is hard to explain this, but most girls will know what I mean, I have found only one dressmaker in New York who understands me—who understands my personality and individualities. Understanding them, she can gown me attractively on comparatively little outlay. She might not be able to do the same for other women, and that proves my point.

"Dress is simply one way to add to character—to set it off. The plain, easily satisfied girl should never be decked out in frills and fancies by an aspiring seamstress. A woman like 'Nora,' in Ibsen's 'Doll's House,'—light, airy and rather shallow, should not attempt to wear elaborate gowns. Her dresses should be rather of the fluffy, simple order which fits her own personality.

"Simplicity in all things is essential to correct dress. Gaudy clothes, many frills, and ridiculous fashions are never seen on correctly gowned women."

Miss Herne is extravagant. At least that is what she says. She believes in buying only the best. When playing recently in New York she wore three gowns which were made to her own order. The total cost of these three gowns was $800.

"But those dresses were not elaborate or gaudy," she said. "New York papers spoke of them as 'wonderful creations' but at the same time commented on their extreme simplicity. They were made as I felt they should be for the part I was playing—simple, but rich. If I could afford only a few clothes, I would have them tasteful and as near 'the best' as my pocketbook would afford. I would prefer one afternoon dress, one evening gown and one tailored suit of good quality to several of each of cheaper material.

"If I were a working girl in a store and earned $10 a week I would still have good clothes. I would watch the papers carefully for sales, and what few clothes I did have would not be cheap imitations. I would rather have a shirtwaist and skirt made simply and of good material than several gaudy dresses and a number of ribbons which showed their cheapness on the face of them. If girls would but realize this, they would look far better dressed and cause a good deal less comment, and be happier in the long run. Elaborate dresses on rich or poor girls cannot be of any great credit to their training.

"The same general scheme of dress works for rich and poor girls alike. Simplicity and quality, not gaudiness and quantity, and a careful study of what is best suited to one's own particular style are the true secrets of proper and therefore attractive dressing."

DRESDEN PHONE USERS KICK—MAY LOSE SERVICE

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Berlin, July 21.—Dresden, capital of Saxony, is threatened with a year's deprivation of its telephone service, just because the townsfolk have been making complaints.

The town council represented forcibly to the Federal Telephone bureau here that the telephone service was so inefficient that it was seriously affecting business interests and that nearly every one of the 20,000 subscribers had complained.

Many of the telephones were out of order for weeks at a time, and the Dresden authorities put up such a big kick that Berlin got peeved.

Berlin red tape does not admit that the service is bad, and warning was issued today that if Dresden made any more complaints, the service would be discontinued for a year, as a punishment.

MISUSE OF WORDS BY PUBLIC MEN

Reference to Dictionary Shows How Exact Quotation Would Injure Self Esteem.

This is not a defense of the newspaper reporter but simply a plain statement of fact which persons who are interviewed for the press should well bear in mind.

Occasionally some man or woman who has come in for newspaper publicity is heard to exclaim:

"They ought to fire that reporter. He quoted me incorrectly. Why is it they never get anything right, etc., etc."

If such a person had his wish just once there is every chance in the world that he would never ask for an exact report of his utterances a second time. The first would be sufficient to give a severe jolt to his self esteem.

Here is a reproduction of the way a certain well-known local citizen insisted upon being correctly quoted:

"The reporters — newspapermen I mean—ought not to—the reporters should not be allowed to judge what should be left out—omitted—but—well you know what I mean. I should be the judge of what should be put in—that is published—the important stuff you know—I know what is important—in my speeches—and sometimes you fellows get things so involved by quoting me incorrectly that no one can understand anything."

All of which is fine! It happens every day. A newspaper man is compelled to get the gist of things out of word combinations like the one above. If he did not he would lose his job and the person interviewed would bellow with rage for a week or so and declare the newspapers were attempting to make him the town's laughing stock.

But luckily there is a way for men in the public eye to eliminate errors. And it works for others to the same end. It is the New Modern English Dictionary which The Journal is giving away in exchange for six coupons clipped from consecutive issues of the paper and presented with 98 cents to cover routine expenses such as express and packing.

The dictionary is a good thing for the boss—and better for the stenographer, because the boss, like public men, usually is overly anxious to unload the responsibility of his mistakes upon someone else.
