the design in the accompanying sketch startles you with its furs in this hot weather, be reassured, for it is not shown as a summer design, but to give you an idea of next fall's styles, and was sketched from one of the models exhibited at the recent convention of the National Ladies' Tailors' and Dressmakers' association.

It is a street costume of burgundy yellours de laine, and has for trimming beinds of skunk at the peck sleave-ends.

of skunk at the neck, sleeve-ends, and edge of the tunic. Fur as a dress trimming has been introduced at inter-vals of two or three years with con-siderable regularity, but only to through the season in a merely desultor; ion. Now, by all indications, it will le seen edging not only suit and street dresses, but frocks of every material and description, and skunk is to be as popular as any of the furs used.

To return to the sketch, The blouse is slashed on either side of the front below the bust and buttoned down over a length of burgundy satin that ties be low the walst in the back. The sleeves are set smoothly into dropped armholes and finished at the three quarter length by a band of the fur. Soft, white chiffon ruffling is used for the jabot,

The tunic is crescent shaped and draped across the sides and back below the hip line, with the two pointed ends caught up at the left side of the belt. The lower part of the skirt length is of burgundy satin fike the sash-but the upper section and the tunic are cut from the velours de laine.

Bergundy and other deep rich reds are to be popular next fall. Also there are some charming new shades of blue in medium light tones. Brown will be much worn, and one of the very good shades is known as moist earth. Then there are the greens in lovely moss colorings which combine so beautifully with either dark or light furs.

Little Stories for Bedtime

Peter Rabbit Has a Sudden Change of Mind. By Thornton W. Burgess,

(Copyright, 1913, by J. G. Lloyd.) Peter Rabbit stared at the two soft gentle eyes peeping at him from be-hind the big fern just back of the sunning bank in the far corner of the old pasture. He had so fully expected to see the angry face of the big gray old rabbit who had made life so miserable for him that for a minute he couldn't believe that he really saw what he did see, And so he just stared and stared. It was very rude, indeed. Nearly half of the amount asked has So it was no wonder that after a minalready been subscribed. This has been done largely through small subscriptions.

Any amount, no matter how small, and amount, no matter how small, and amount, no matter how small, and amount is the first state of the ferm. Peter gave a great sigh. Then he remembered how rude he had been to stare so.

"I—I beg your pardon," said Peter in his politest manner, which is very polite indeed, for Peter can be very po-

Peter waited for a reply with the greatest eagerness. You know it was because he had been so lonesome that he had left his home in the dear old briar patch on the green meadows. And since he had been in the old pasture he had been almost as lonesome, for he had had no one to talk to. So now he waited eagerly for a reply. You see, he felt sure that the wner of such soft, gentle eyes must have a soft, gentle voice and a soft, gentle heart, and there was nothing in the world that Peter needed just then so much as sympathy. But though he waited and waited, there wasn't a sound from the big fern.

"Perhaps you don't know who I am. I'm Peter Rabbit, and I've come way up here from the green meadows, and I'd like very much to be your friend," continued Peter, after a while. Still there was no sound. Peter peeped from the corner of one eye at the place where he had seen the two soft, gentle eyes, but there was nothing to be seen but the gently waving leaf of the big fern. Peter didn't know just what to do. He wanted to hop over to the big fern and peep behind it, but he didn't dare to. He was afraid that whoever was hiding there would run away. "I'm very lonesome; won't you speak to me?" said Peter, in his gentlest voice, materials are made up on the strict, and he sighed a deep, deleful sort of severe lines of the tailored suit, the had just about made up his mind that the wearer.

would go over to the big fern when he saw those two soft, gentle eyes peeping from under a different leaf. It seemed to Peter that never in all his life had he seen such beautiful eyes. They looked so shy and bashful that Peter held his breath for fear that he would frighten them away.

After a time the eyes disappeared Then Peter saw a little movement among the ferns and he knew that whoever it was it was stealing away He wanted to follow, but something down inside him warned him that it was best to sit still. So Peter sat just where he was and kept perfectly still for the longest time. But the eyes did not appear again, and at last he felt really gone away. Then he sighed another great sigh, for suddenly he felt more lonesome than ever. He hopped over to the big fern and looked behind it. There in the soft earth was a foot-print, the footprint of a rabbit, and it was smaller than his own. It seemed to Peter that it was the most wonder ful little footprint he had ever been. "I believe," said Peter right out loud, "that I'll change my mind. I won't go back to the dear old briar patch just yet after all."
