PATH OF COUNTRY STOREKEEPER IS NOT STREWN WITH ROSES ON EVERY OCCASION

Mrs. Rosenthal, of McCleary, Wash., Tells of Unreasonable Demands Made.

Running a country store isn't exactly treading a path of roses, says Mrs. A. Rosenthal, storekeeper of McCleary, Washington, who spent Buyers' Week in Portland. She wrote for The Journal a little statment which she titled "A few things the country merchant has to put up with," in which she said;

"Not so very long ago a lady came nto my store and wanted to know if she could exchange a belt which was too small. I replied in a very courteous manner that she could. Upon opening the package I discovered that the belt had not been bought in our store at all. I confronted her with the question, Where did you buy this belt'? "'Why-why I sent back to Chicago
