

PRIZE WINNING BABIES PRESENTED WITH MEDALS

300 Entrants at Fair Represent 10,000 Babies of the State.

Queen of all the babies of all Oregon, Miss Jane Kauzler of Portland is not "puffed up" a bit today, although she won a grade of 1000 per cent at the state fair and has a neat little nest egg of $100 cash, a silver medal and a silver cup, besides.

Sharing equal honors is Wayne Porter Buchanan, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Buchanan, of McMinnville. He is 36 months old and scored 995, just a shade under that of the Portland miss.

Robert Kenton Adams took first honors in the one-year-old city boy class, with a score of 970. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Arnold Adams, 191 North Sixteenth street, Portland.

Governor Oswald West presented the state prizes to the winning babies Friday night in the eugenics pavilion at the fair grounds. He said the 300 entrants in the state eugenics contest represented 10,000 babies of Oregon because they had been selected out in numerous local baby contests held in counties all over the state.

DETAILS OF EXHIBIT ARE TO BE ARRANGED

Head of Oregon Commission Goes to Frisco to Confer With Officials.

For the purpose of completing many details in connection with the Oregon exhibit at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, O. M. Clark, president of the Oregon Commission, left yesterday afternoon for San Francisco to confer with the exposition officials.

A conference will also be held with the board of fire commissioners of the Bay city relative to bringing the Oregon building within the fire regulations.

The details of lighting and heating the building will also be arranged by Mr. Clark.

In the allotment of space in the exhibit palaces made by the exposition officials some time ago Oregon did not fare very well. Her allotment was 3000 feet in the agricultural exhibit, 1800 feet in the horticultural and only a few feet in the pure food products.

These exhibits are competitive and Mr. Clark will endeavor to get additional space.

He will also attempt to complete the necessary contracts for the construction of the Oregon building in order that ground for it may be broken during the Portland celebration the latter days of this month.

Sutherland Will Vote. Roseburg, Or., Oct. 4.—After study of the law in the matter, District Attorney Brown holds that a local option election may be held at Sutherland November 4 next, provided the petition therefor is found regular and has been signed by the required number of legal voters.

Arrested as Murder Suspect. Chicago, Ill., Oct. 4.—Edward G. Spencer, a railroad man and a former dancing teacher, was arrested and examined at an outlying police station today in connection with the murder here recently of Mrs. Mildred Allison-Rearfoot.

WILLAPA EDITOR IS CITED FOR CONTEMPT

Second of Like Charges Growing Out of Alleged Conspiracy Case.

South Bend, Wash., Oct. 4.—County Attorney H. W. B. Hewn today filed a complaint citing Edwin M. Conner, editor of the Willapa Harbor Pilot, for contempt of court for having commented quite vigorously and adversely in the Willapa Harbor Pilot on the prosecution of M. C. and J. B. Welsh, P. W. Culver and J. W. Jackson, all of Raymond, who have been charged with conspiracy, in an alleged attempt to procure false testimony in a damage suit.

The cases against these persons aroused so much feeling that about two months ago Superior Judge E. H. Wright made a rule that no further comment such as might prejudice the minds of possible jurors, should be made by local papers.

About a month ago F. A. Ekeltine, editor of the South Bend Journal, was fined for contempt of court, in defending the prosecution of the above case in his paper, and he has appealed his case to the superior court, declaring that he was the victim of a conspiracy, and that his comment on the case was perfectly justifiable and in defense of witnesses for the prosecution who had become intimidated.

The trial of the conspiracy case will begin Tuesday.

UNION SCHOOL FAIR WAS GREAT SUCCESS

Union, Or., Oct. 4.—The fair held this week under the auspices of the pupils of the Union public schools was the most successful exhibition of the kind ever held in this place. The exhibit was displayed at the high school building and included the usual agricultural products, samples of fine needle work, products of the manual training and domestic science departments of the schools, articles of historical significance, and numerous other exhibits.

The young ladies of the domestic science department served lunch, and the entire affair was highly successful. It is the purpose of those in charge of the fair to take the principal articles of the exhibit to the county fair at La Grande next week. The business men of Union responded liberally, and the list of premiums was the most attractive ever offered at a similar event at Union.

"HIGHEST HONORS" IS NEW "U" RECOGNITION

University of Oregon, Eugene, Or., Oct. 4.—"Highest honors" is a new recognition granted a graduation to University of Oregon students who achieve special distinction in a given subject. The honors will take precedent over scholarship average, and will be equivalent to a recommendation for a fellowship in post-graduate work. To gain "highest honors" at least three years' work at Oregon is necessary, except in those departments which have not been established three years. In these the work will be more exacting.

A committee consisting of the students' major professor and at least two other professors from allied departments will pass on the work of candidates, and if satisfactory will recommend the student to the faculty colloquium for "highest honors." The final decision in the matter will be left to the faculty as a whole.

110 violins, $75; 50 oboes, $1.25; 10 mandolins, $4.75; 50 guitars, $4.25; 50 banjos, $5.00; 112 cornets, $3.75 during Graves Music Co.'s Removal Sale, 111 P. (Adv.)

STORIES THEY ARE TELLING IN NEW YORK

By H. C. New York, Oct. 4.—Leo Flynn operates a string of fighters through the oyster-stew circuit. Now and then the manager of a "club" in a town which was only be found under a reading glass, telephones an order: "Rush one fighter, white, 140, ring-side, for Thursday night, C. O. D."

Flynn furnishes fighters of any size, color and disposition, while the manager waits. Not long ago one of his stars became retive. He had discovered that the returns for rough fighting were not commensurate with the wear and tear. So Flynn resorted to diplomacy.

"Mickey, my boy," said Flynn, "because you've been a good lad I'm going to give you the welterweight championship of New Jersey."

That kept Mickey in line for a time. When he began again to compare his bruises with his bank account Flynn gave him the welterweight championship of Connecticut. Mickey was pleased as Punch for a couple of months. Then he announced that he was about to get married. He obviously expected his manager to do something handsome by him.

"And I did," said Flynn. "I recognized that this was the most important event in the boy's life. I was glad of the opportunity of showing him that I appreciated his faithfulness. So I gave him the welterweight championship of the world."

They never tire uptown of telling stories of William Sulzer, recently impeached as governor of New York.

"When he was elected governor," said one of his associates, "he received a telegram that ran this way: 'Congratulations upon your triumphant election.' Frans Schubert Liederkranz, Brooklyn."

"And Bill," said his friend, "Bill he took his pen in hand and this is the way he replied: 'My Dear Mr. Schubert—I hope to have the opportunity of thanking you

In person for the support you have so generously given me. Won't you drop into my office the next time you are in Manhattan? With kindest regards and warmest personal remembrances, I remain, etc. Jack Hammond is trying to lose six years. When he was 17 years old, he was just as impudible and elongated as he is now. But he talked and acted like a fully grown up man. He honed for a job on the Chicago paper on which George Ade was the star. Ade was then 22 years old. "How old are you?" asked the city editor. "Er—23," said Hammond. "Ever had any experience?" "Years and years," said that greenling. "So that he got his job and became 23 years old on the spot. His age became known about the office. Until by and by he was 30 years old in fact, and then desired to go backward. But he couldn't. Every one perfectly remembered his appearance in the office at the age of 23. The other day George Ade returned from Europe, and Hammond ran into him at the Waldorf. "And how old are you, anyhow?"

asked Ade, with a totally deceitful affectation of interest. "21," said Hammond, brightly. "False," said Ade. "Buy a lot of beverages. You're just as old as I am—you always have been—and I am 47. It is to be hoped that the reader will never be short of that penny coin, a miserable half dollar. If he should be stranded in New York, however—" "If I ever needed a piece of change," said one of Jack Sirocco's friends, "I'd buzz in the ear of the first push-cart man I saw." "Come too will half a bean, or I'll put a knock in your noodle." "And believe me! He'd come too." The gunmen never used to bother for such small trifles as the push-cart craft. But they'll take nickels nowadays. Times downtown are hard. This is the verbatim report of a recent conversation between Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and one of his warmest admirers. The admirer is a newspaper man, who has reported some hundreds of the colonel's speeches. They were in mild and harmless talk the other day, when the newspaper man felt an impulse for candor burning within him. "Do you know, colonel," said he, "I have often found a great similarity between you and Colonel Bryan." "The Roosevelt teeth snapped within an inch of his jugular." "In what way?" the colonel demanded, angrily. "What do you mean?" The newspaper man became pensive. "Ah," he said, "in the way you—manage your audience, you know. Part of light and shade, you know—humor and—sincerity—and—er—all that sort of thing." Colonel Roosevelt's teeth clicked again. "You are a miserable judge of men," said he. "Then the conversation came to a complete and hopeless end. Tells How to Do It. The best way is to look everywhere for the best piano to be had at whatever price you wish to invest, then come to the big piano house where the exact same grade and quality will be found for just about 25 per cent less and the player pianos being sold for banker's prices can be had for exactly half price. It's almost too good to be true, but it's true—that's why so many people are buying here each day. See announcement page 12, section one, this week, under heading, "Music in the Home," etc. (Adv.)
