

Social and Personal

Miss Gully Cook and Maurice E. Crumpacker were married last evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Cook, at the pretentious of all weddings, "the quiet home wedding." Miss Cook had originally planned an elaborate church affair, but owing to the continued illness of her father, she decided on a simple home ceremony, with only the relatives and a few additional guests, the intimate friends of the bride and groom among the younger set.

Miss Cook, a beautiful, stately blond, made an enchantingly beautiful bride in her wedding robe of white brocaded crepe enveloped in the cloudy folds of her long tulle veil. The gown was beautifully but simply fashioned, with elaborations of Irish point and velvet lace. She carried a bouquet of lavender orchids and lilies of the valley. She took her place before an altar of flowers banked at the mantel at the end of the living room. Quaintly of snow white chrysanthemum and festoons of asparagus fern and tall palms combined to form these attractive decorations.

Miss Cornelia Cook, who was her sister's only attendant, is an opposite type to her sister, and is as strikingly pretty a brunette as her sister is blond. She was most effectively gowned in orchid toned chiffon trimmed with rare lace. Her bouquet was of the pink bridesmaid buds arranged in a pretty shower.

Donald W. Green was the best man and the ceremony was read by Dr. Thomas L. Elliot at 8 o'clock. The bride's cake and a cluster of bride roses adorned the dining table, from which a buffet supper was served. The ring was caught by Miss Barbara Mackenzie. Honeymoon caught the bride's bouquet.

Mrs. Cook was handsomely gowned in a black velvet gown with lace elaborations.

Mr. and Mrs. Crumpacker left for a ten days' sojourn in Vancouver and Victoria, B. C., and will be at home later at the James W. Cook residence on Portland Heights.

Mr. Crumpacker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar D. Crumpacker of Valparaiso, Ind. He is an attorney, a graduate of the University of Michigan and of Harvard Law School. His father is a distinguished attorney of Indiana, having represented his state in congress for several years as well as being appellate judge of the state of Indiana under Governor Hovey.

Mr. Crumpacker has been in Portland but a short time, but is well known to the younger set, of which he is a popular member.

Miss Lovell Honor Guest.
One of the delightful events of the week was the tea this afternoon at which Miss Margaret Webber and Miss Francis Fuller presided for the pleasure of Miss Lilla Lovell of Oakland, Cal., who is the house guest of Miss Webber. The affair was held at the home of Miss Webber in Irvington. The invitations included the usual number of guests, and the afternoon was a fashionably gowned assemblage, who called to greet the charming visitor.

This evening they will again entertain for Miss Lovell with a dancing party when 75 guests will be present.

Complimenting Miss McKenna.
This afternoon Mrs. Craig McMicken entertained with her second afternoon bridge party for the pleasure of Miss Pearl McKenna, the bride-to-be of James Shannard Johns. There were five tables at auction with a few additional guests who called for tea later. Clusters of Richmond roses combined with greens made up the artistic decorations of the rooms. After the distribution of prizes the hostess presented the honor guest with a tray laden with dainty gifts, a miscellaneous shower from the guests present.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. McMicken entertained with five tables at auction, when the honors fell to Mrs. George Kuntler, Mrs. William Peaslee and Mrs. Frederick Austin.

K. of C. Ball.
An unusually attractive dancing party was held last evening at the Multnomah hotel, when the Portland assembly of the Knights of Columbus held their annual ball. An assemblage of about 200 couples formed in the grand march at 9 o'clock. Many handsome gowns were worn and the hall, with its decorations of stars and stripes, the insignia of the order, made an attractive setting. A feature of the decorations was the portraits of Columbus, a crayon sketch by one of the Knights, which held the place of honor over the platform. The orchestra played behind a tropical garden of palms.

The following committees had the affair in charge: Committee on arrangements—President, F. Bonden, chairman; Joseph T. Pheasant, Henry F. Calveleg, P. Joseph Hanley, H. Paul Due-

HE WASN'T SATISFIED

By Edna K. Woolley.

SOME MEN are not even satisfied when they marry and are supported in the style to which they have been accustomed, especially remarked a woman who sat behind me at the matinee.

"There's that Tom Blank. His father gets a salary sufficient to keep a small family comfortably. But Tom had overthrown pretty nearly his way—his mother's darling and the only boy. Even when Father Blank wanted to set his foot down and make a man of Tom, his mother saw to it that Tom's way was kept smooth.

"Of course Tom got it into his head that he was some pumpkin; also, he had an idea that he would be conferring an inestimable favor upon the girl he might marry. As he's fairly good looking and always had some pocket money, he had plenty of girls running after him.

"Tom didn't want any poor girl for a wife. He was looking for a wife with money. His mother thought even a millionnaire should jump at the chance.

"He finally annexed a simple little thing whose father owns a business block and adores his daughter to the extent of granting her heart's wishes as far as he can. The little thing fell head over ears in love with Tom, and her parents were also taken with his fine bearing and gift of gab. The young folks were duly married, with all the splendor of a middle class church wedding with trimmings and a description in the society columns. After a honeymoon at the expense of the girl's father they took up their residence with the bride's parents.

"They've lived there ever since. Tom has never given a cent toward his wife's support. His father-in-law paid for everything—and the girl didn't know any better than to keep on loving him. She saw that he was stoned in nothing.

"But Tom wasn't satisfied. He thought he might have done better. He looked down on his parents-in-law as 'common.' The 'old man' had carried 'hood' when he first 'came over.' He despised his wife. They're strict Catholics and don't believe in divorce. I suppose she'll stick to him until he runs off with another woman. I know he wants her to divorce him so he can marry somebody he considers in his own station in life—though his father commenced his business career as driver of a brewery wagon.

"Oh, there goes the curtain. Let's see—this is the fourth act, isn't it? I hope I won't cry any more over this play. It's awfully sorrowing. But it isn't a pity to the real tragedy that's going on in that poor little wife's life."

DESERTED MOTHER IS DESTITUTE AND NEEDS A SEWING MACHINE
With three little hungry mouths to fill, deserted by her husband and almost destitute, a worthy woman of Portland needs a sewing machine to enable her to follow her occupation as seamstress and milliner. She has three little boys, aged 12, 10 and 8 years, respectively, and cannot provide for them without a sewing machine to assist in her work. She has appealed to the Associated Charities for aid. Anyone able and willing to help this woman obtain a machine should communicate with the Associated Charities.

parted by his own company from his London playhouse, and brings with him the original productions of many of his past successes. "Tobias," "The Second in Command," "The Headmaster," "Beauty and the Beast," and "Grumpy" will be included in his repertoire.

Felix Edwards, the well known English stage director, who staged "Beauty Falls the Springs" and many other notable productions, has arrived in America to superintend rehearsals of the American production of London's biggest comedy success of last season, "General John Bogan." His "jugglers" caused great consternation among the United States customs officials, as it consisted mainly of boxes of old, dilapidated and apparently useless clothing. Mr. Edwards had spent a fortnight in Ireland buying clothes and various odds and ends that should prove useful in preserving the Irish atmosphere of the play.
