MURDERER OF MUSICIAN NOT CAPTURED

Left to right—Lloyd Wilkins, charged with murder, and L. L. Winters, victim of the crime.

WILKINS SOUGHT AS MURDERER OF LOU L. WINTERS

black hat that hung in Winters' office, was found 50 feet from the body.

Nothing has been seen or heard of Wilkins since the tragedy. After Winters was slugged, the murderer went east along Boise street towards the Southern Pacific yards, three blocks away, and it is thought that he fled the city immediately on a south bound train.

Twenty-nine years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall, smooth shaven, very blue eyes and sandy hair, bald on top.

A state warrant for the arrest of Wilkins charging murder was issued by Municipal Judge Stevenson this morning.

A man answering the description of Wilkins applied at a saloon three blocks north of where the assault took place at 11 o'clock Saturday night for a flask of whiskey.

The trail of the crime can be traced almost exactly. Winters had alighted from the Sellwood car at Boise street.

Leaving the car, he walked towards the house, his violin under his arm.

As soon as the car started on, the detective pointed out, Wilkins darted from the rear estate office in the shadow of a tree and telephone pole to the curb, and then jumped at Winters.

The latter retreated to the other side of the street, where he dropped his violin.

Then he ran south on Milwaukee with his assailant pursuing. There is a job of a hundred feet in Boise street at Milwaukee.

Unconscious, and with the brain oozing from the wound, Winters lay undiscovered for 45 minutes. Then an automobile came along, and Marshall Barle, the chauffeur, discovered the prostrate form and went to the nearest house, which happened to be the Winters residence, and gave the alarm.

Wilkins' wife is at Salem, employed as a domestic. Her address is kept secret by the detectives, because it is feared that Wilkins, in his madness, may attempt to kill her also.

Separation of the two came last August, as a result of an indiscretion on the part of Wilkins, it is alleged.

They came to the Winters residence on Milwaukee street, where Mrs. Wilkins stayed four days. While there she was taken ill with symptoms of typhoid fever and was moved to a place in Montavilla, where she was sick for some time.

Wilkins came to Portland later. Thinking that the Winters family was trying to keep his wife away from him, he wrote a number of threatening letters to his wife and to members of the Winters family.

Two weeks ago, according to members of the Winters family, he went to Kootenai, Idaho, where his wife's parents live, and tried to persuade them, it is said, to have her return to him.

He even went so far, two weeks ago, as to send a telegram to the Winters home requesting that his wife be informed that her father had been killed.

Helms Wilkins, his wife, is 24 years old. She is of Swedish descent and has been in this country 10 years.

Winters was a musician and dealer in real estate and had the contract to sell lots in the Holgate addition, near his home.

His office was next to his home and it was there that the murderer laid in wait for his victim.

Two chairs in the office facing the double window in front indicated that the murderer sat watching.

Winters' desk had been ransacked thoroughly, presumably for letters in the opinion of the detectives, and in a very frenzy of malicious rage, every blank book, document and paper of any kind had been torn into tiny pieces and scattered over the floor.

Dr. G. A. Cathay and Bertillon Expert Hunter both went to the scene of the tragedy. The former attempted to formulate a theory from the blood stains that were found, and Hunter endeavored to secure finger print evidence on the papers.

Both were unsuccessful. Mrs. George Pippy of 876 Boise street said that she was awakened by two placings across her midnight, but did not respond immediately. Later she dressed and went to the hospital in the ambulance.

ROMAN MEAL BREAD

The ancient Roman soldiers, who ate no meat but who subsisted upon black bread, developed a strength of physique and a hardihood of nature which enabled them to exact tribute from every known nation, and to conquer the world.

A modern cereal food, over-refined, catering to the daintiness of appetite and weakening digestive powers, develops no such traits as were found in the Romans of old.

A physician has now given to the world something new in Roman Meal, which is a scientifically balanced food composed of wheat, rye and flax.

Roman Meal Bread is to be had at all grocery and delicatessen stores in Portland and vicinity, at 5c a loaf.

If you cannot find it at your grocer's, ask him for a 3-lb. package of Roman Meal, which he will sell you for 15c, and bake the bread yourself.

Roman Meal may also be used for making gems, muffins, fruit rocks, cookies, Boston brown bread, etc. It contains all the proteins and carbohydrates and is the last word in modern "back to nature" foods.
