

ALL CHILDREN RETURN HOME FOR GOLDEN WEDDING DAY

MINES OF OREGON NOW SHOWING BIG INCREASE IN PRODUCTION OF ORE

Industry in Eastern Part of State Particularly Has Received New Impetus.

(Special to The Journal.) Greenhorn, Or., Oct. 18.—Eastern Oregon in 1913 will make the best record for gold production in its history since the placer days of 1862, 1866, 1867 and 1868. From a precious metals (gold, silver and copper) production of only 1659,916 in 1911, and an output of $349,838 in 1912, Oregon as a whole is expected to produce very nearly $2,000,000 in 1913, based on the known output of the leading mines during 1912, to date. Of the same total in the mining industry, Eastern Oregon will produce probably seven-ninths of the whole, or close to $2,350,000.

This increase in the recovery of gold, silver and copper is due principally to the reopening of old deep mines, long dormant, as well as to the general introduction of electrical power, compressed air, cyanidation and wholly modern methods of mining in Oregon, principally in the counties of Baker, Malheur and Grant; though Coos, Curry, Douglas, Jackson, Josephine and Lane each annually yield their quota to the grand total.

(Special to The Journal.) Vancouver, Wash., Oct. 18.—Surrounded by their nine children, many grandchildren and great grandchildren, Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Woolfe of Lake Shore fittingly celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary October 12. The celebration should have been held on September 26, but owing to sickness in the family it was put off. The celebration was a complete surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Woolfe and was arranged by the children, who invaded the old home in a body. They were bountifully supplied with purple and white asters and immediately set to work decorating the room. A purple and white aster was placed at each plate and a white one at the plates of the "bride and groom" of 50 years ago. They also brought remembrances in the form of rings, a plain gold band for the mother and one set with birthstone for the father.

Osceola, Clarke county, Iowa, September 28, 1863. They came west 23 years ago and lived a year at Portland, then coming to Clarke county, where they have since resided. Aside from the year at Portland, they lived in a Clarke county all their lives, Clarke county, Iowa, and Clarke county, Washington. They have nine children, all of whom were at the celebration. They are: Lawrence E. Woolfe of Vancouver; James W. Woolfe of Lake Shore; Mrs. C. W. Rusk of Portland; Mrs. W. H. McFarlane of Vancouver; Mrs. F. V. Cornman of Felida; Mrs. Douglas Caples of Vancouver; Mrs. W. J. Byham of Vancouver; Mrs. H. A. Knapp of Canas, and Mrs. S. E. McIrvine of Lake Shore. Besides the children they have 24 grandchildren and three great grandchildren. Mr. Woolfe is one of the substantial fruit growers of Clarke county and has a large prunes orchard, from which dividends are realized each year.

ing New Mexico and Washington. In 1913 Oregon will probably pass Idaho as a gold producer, attaining to ninth place, but in order to surpass Montana ($3,707,900) and Arizona ($2,786,400), respectively in eighth and seventh rank, Oregon gold mines must yield not less than $4,000,000 in 1914.

BIG CHINOOK TAKEN WITH HOOK AND LINE

Newport, Or., Oct. 18.—The largest salmon caught in the Yaquina Bay this season, with a hook and line, was captured by A. A. Voigt, after a hard fight. The fish, a chinook, tipped the scales at 42½ pounds. It was three feet nine inches long and a foot wide, at the back fin. Mr. Voigt offered the fish, a beautiful specimen, to the Commercial club here to preserve, but no one had a jar large enough to hold it.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE RESIDENCE SECTION OF IONE FROM THE HILLS

MORROW COUNTY IS SUITED TO DAIRYING BECAUSE OF CLIMATE

Mild Winters Enable Cows to Feed on Green Grass; Roads in Need of Improvement.

By Fred Lockley. Accompanied by J. F. Knappenberg, the president of the commercial club at Ione, and Walter Smith, the local agent of the Oregon and Dakota Land company, also of Ione, I recently made an automobile trip north of Ione. Mr. Knappenberg is the owner of a dairy farm near Ione. He has about 3500 acres in his ranch, the headquarters ranch consisting of 350 acres. He is milking 30 cows. "I ship my butter far to Portland," said Mr. Knappenberg. "My ordinary check is about $2000 a month. Morrow county will eventually become a dairy country instead of a stock country. On account of our mild winters our cattle feed on green grass in the winter, while in the colder districts they are kept on hay. The two months that we have to feed in Morrow county are July and August. This country is a natural cow country. When the first settlers came in here they found the hills covered with green grass, and it is rare that the snow stays on the hills more than a few days at a time."

For the first few miles out of town the roads had been strayed. "These roads," said Mr. Smith, who was driving the automobile, "would be almost impassable for the chuck holes and dust if it were not for the straw. The county bought up a large number of straw piles and is scattering them on the roads where there is the most travel. What we need is a more uniform system of road improvement. One thing, however, you will find that wherever there are heavy sandy roads nature has put a remedy near at hand in the shape of weeds or sage that grows along the road and which can be used when straw can not be obtained."

Our road led over a series of long undulating billows of land. On each side of the road were vast wheat fields now in summer fallow or in stubble. The thing that strikes a stranger most forcibly is the absence of homes. In place of a farm house on every quarter section you will see here and there, miles apart, a ranch house. Passing Ella, which was formerly a postoffice, and which is about 19 miles north of Ione, we continued northward to Buckingham flat. On the southern edge of the flat there is a half mile strip of black sage brush higher than a man's head with gnarled contorted trunks from three to six inches in diameter. Jack rabbits literally run the thousands running in all directions. Beyond the line of sage brush was a long flat covered with bunch grass. "This land," said Mr. Smith, "is owned largely by the Northern Pacific Land company and by non-resident land speculators. It was bought up in the early days at as low as 25 and 40 cents an acre. It can be bought now at from three and a half to five dollars an acre. The railroad leases the land to sheep men at about $10 a section a year. There is no reason in the world why diversified farming should not be carried on in Morrow county."

That evening in Ione I met A. C. Petters, one of the early settlers of Morrow county. "I came to Salem, Ore., in 1854, when I was 24 years old," said Mr. Petters. "In 1857 I came east to the mountains settling on Willow creek, three miles above the present city of Ione. The first postoffice in what is now Morrow county was located at my farm house. My place was known as Pettysville and the old post route maps you will see the name 'Pettysville Postoffice.' I was the first postmaster and ran the postoffice for 14 years. One of my early neighbors was John Jordan, who settled here in 1852. He was a very exciting time in the early days. When General C. G. Howard was chasing the Indians eastward all of the neighbors for miles around came to my place for protection. When the neighbors came we had no guns. I hitched up a good team to a light wagon and starting at 4 o'clock in the afternoon I drove to The Dalles. From my place to The Dalles is nearly 80 miles, and when I tell you that my team was at The Dalles by daylight you can know that I put them through at a pretty lively gallop. When I applied at The Dalles for the guns they had no authority to give them to me. I telegraphed to the governor at Salem. He wired back authority for me to take 50 guns. The authority, however, did not authorize the issuing of own money for ammunition, which by the way, I never recovered."

"When we first came to Oregon I took up a place opposite Independence, near Humphrey's ferry. I had the fever and ague, so I gave the place up and bought a quarter section four miles south of Salem at what is now Rosedale. I was doing pretty well, but a friend of mine who needed some money had me go security on a note. He couldn't pay it. Neither could I. They took my quarter section to satisfy the note. When I first came to Ione I took up a quarter section. I have about

BIG GAME PLENTIFUL THIS SEASON IN ROGUE RIVER HILLS

Two days' bag of seven hunters. Grants Pass, Or., Oct. 18.—Hunters returning from the Rogue River hills report one of the best seasons for big game hunting ever experienced in the valley. Deer are especially plentiful, and every party out makes bags that approach the limit. One party that has returned from the country adjacent to Galice reports having seen 101 deer during an outing of ten days. Two hunters on the lower hills saw 36 deer in two days, and reports of like import are brought in by most of the hunters. Messrs. KLAMATH COUNTY IN LINE WITH ROAD WORK

Over 575 Miles of Highway Constructed During the Past Two Years.

Klamath Falls, Or., Oct. 18.—During the past two years Klamath county has built 575 miles of road. Of this amount 175 miles was heavy grade, with deep drainage ditches along both sides. The roadbed is from 20 to 30 feet wide. The other 400 miles built are classed as mountain roads. In the construction of roads it has been the policy of the county to build highways in the sections of the county where travel is the heaviest. It is only a few years since the county had no roads, except those provided by nature. Today every part of the county is tapped by a passable road. In many sections where travel is heavy the roads have been given a coat of crushed rock or clinders, making them exceptionally good throughout the entire year.

It is the plan of the present county board to secure a bond issue in the sum of $200,000, so that next year the various units can be connected up and grades made permanent. It is also the plan to build a highway to the California line to connect with the Interstate highway. Klamath county has established a reputation for its good roads. It has been done at considerable expense to the taxpayers, but no one is willing, despite the cost, to go back to the cow trails of a few years ago.

In many sections of this county road building is inexpensive, while in others there is a great deal of heavy work. It has been so arranged by the county committee that the only settled farming communities have been given roads first. The scenic route around the Upper Klamath Lake, which is traveled by the tourists, has also been made a boulevard.

300 acres now. Forty-five years ago Morrow county was pretty thinly settled. About the only neighbors I had were William Cecil, who took up a place 25 miles from mine, and Elisha Sperry. At first I got my mail at The Dalles. Later I got it at Umatilla Landing and still later at Leonard's Mills. When I bought my mail by going only 25 miles I thought the country was settling up pretty thickly.

"Spencer put in a store on Rhea creek and Heppner and Morrow put in one where the Palace hotel now stands. Dave Heron bought an interest in Heppner and Morrow's store and was appointed postmaster. "I am 33 years old, and while I am hale and hearty, nevertheless, I am planning to retire from hard work, and take it easy the rest of my life."
