

ENGLISH WOMEN SHOW
THEY DO NOT ALL LIKE
MRS. PANKHURST WAY

Mrs. Millicent Fawcett Asserts
Women Will Win Ballot in Spite of Militants.

(United Press Lead Wire.)
London, Oct. 23.—The sensational activities of the militant suffragettes in recent months have served to obscure to a considerable degree the solid, substantial, and really effective campaign work being done in England by the large and growing army of non-militant advocates of votes for women. In view of Mrs. Pankhurst's visit to America, and in order that American men as well as women may have an opportunity to make intelligent comparison between the policies, methods and aims of the two antagonistic camps, Mrs. Millicent G. Fawcett, L. L. D., leader of the non-militants, has prepared for the United Press the following article:

The National Union of Women's Suffrage societies is the largest the oldest, and as we believe, the best organized suffrage society in the United Kingdom. It is non-party in character. In the sense that it welcomes among its members sympathizers with all political parties or with none, it is, and always has been strict in its methods of work. The non-militant character of the national union is a matter not only of expediency but also of principle.

Appeal to Better Instincts.
We believe that the best method of promoting the success of our cause is to appeal to what is the highest and best in man, and not to what is worst; to arouse his sympathy, his conscience, his sense of justice and his courage, and not his terror and cowardice. We contend that all the women's victories of the past 50 years have been won on these lines. Women have by peaceful means, by education, by appeals to experience and common sense, broken down the barriers which a generation or two ago shut out their sex from higher education, the professions, municipal and local franchises, employment in the civil service, etc. The enormous progress of the women's movement has been unstinted by crime, or violence of any kind.

Moreover, in those countries and states where full parliamentary suffrage has been won it has been won as the result of peaceful propaganda. I need only mention the countries which have already enfranchised their women—New Zealand, Australia, Norway, Finland, 16 states in the United States and the territory of Alaska. In not one of these has the women's victory been achieved by violence. Women's suffrage has passed its preliminary stages in Denmark, Sweden, Iceland, and a government franchise bill to which women's suffrage may be added by amendment has recently been mentioned in the queen's speech in opening a new parliament in Holland. In none of these countries has there been the least trace of organized or unorganized violence on the part of the advocates of the cause.

In Great Britain we have a large number of suffrage societies, representing politics, parties, religious persuasions, professions and industry, and among all of these violence as a method of propaganda has been monopolized by two societies in England and one in Ireland. The National Union which has developed from small beginnings nearly half a century ago is not only the largest of all these organizations, but one of the most democratic institutions in the United Kingdom. Every society is entitled to send delegates, in proportion to its membership, to the general council which meets twice a year to decide questions of policy and to elect officers of the union. Our methods of work are entirely constitutional. We endeavor to educate the country to sympathy with our cause by holding meetings, canvassing, conducting press campaign, and organizing courses of educational lectures. Side by side with our educational campaign, we carry on the political side of our work. Our endeavor is to transform the sympathy of the voters into political pressure exerted on individual members of parliament, and on parties, in order to maintain and increase a majority in the house of commons that is committed permanently to the principle of women's suffrage and that will be dependable in divisions on the subject. This latest count gives our numbers as 45,000 annually subscribing members, distributed among our 419 societies. In addition to these we have an auxiliary of non-subscribing but pledged "Friends of Women Suffrage" 20,000 strong—a force created out of an adaptation of the American plan of enrolling sympathizers.

Americans Give Help.
If it had not been for the tremendous activity and ceaseless educational work carried on by the non-militant suffrage societies in the United Kingdom, I believe that our movement would have been ruined, at any rate for a generation or more, by militancy. But we persistently ask why the revolutionary riot and destruction of a York school, which held to justify the political disfranchisement of the women of the world. If a rule of this kind had been applied to men, not a single man in any part of the globe would today be entitled to the exercise of the parliamentary franchise. Why apply to women an egregiously unjust method of exclusion, which men have never dreamed of appropriating to themselves.

CAPTAIN SLOVER WILL BECOME EVANGELIST

"I expect to have arrangements made by January 1st to visit the 'Arrow' work," said Captain Slover this morning. "My wife will join me in the work."

which will be under the auspices of the Free Methodist church, in which we have been intensely interested for many years. When such arrangements are made, my resignation from the police department will be tendered. "I am more interested in men than in money. Dr. Coy's address at the World's Christian Fellowship conference here last summer had much to do with my entrance into the evangelistic work. See the right way. My plan is chiefly to prepare the way for the evangelist."

Captain Slover and his wife have for several years maintained what they call the "Lord's treasury." This is a fund made up of one-tenth of their monthly salaries. When acting chief he drew $250 a month, of which $25 each month was placed in this fund. The money in the fund is used for charitable and church support. Many men and women have been assisted financially out of this fund, which during the holidays is usually depleted on account of charity work and donations.

man asked Captain Slover for the loan of $25. The money was given from the "Lord's treasury" with the promise of the young man to repay it when he secured employment. The man was never seen again. This is one of many similar experiences the captain relates of charity being abused, but he makes no apology for such acts, and he says he has no regrets.

ACCUSED OF GIVING
BEER CHECK AS $5

A five cent beer check passed upon Michael McCormick of Sandy last evening by Thomas Downey, for a $5 coin brought both men into the municipal court this morning, with a charge of larceny against Downey. The Sandy rancher sold Downey a quantity of apples, taking a $5 deposit. The money was paid in the Star livery barn.

This morning McCormick counted his money and found he had been given a beer check. He hunted up Downey, who is a city hawker, demanded his money, which the hawker refused to give. Downey declared he gave the apple grower a $5 coin. Judge Stevenson was of the opinion that Downey had given the beer check, either by accident or knowingly, and gave him until Saturday to make right.

DO THE DOGS PUSH OR PULL CRIPPLE'S CART?

E. J. Gould travels through life with the "cart before the horse."
Strictly speaking, however, in this case it is not the horse, but the dogs. Gould is a cripple and for five years has made his way over the coast by selling pencils and a booklet entitled "The Dog."
There is a question of whether the dogs push or pull the horse, in which the crippled man rides. The dogs are hitched to the rear, themselves pulling, but the wagon is pushed. The driver guides the vehicle by means of a lever attached to the front wheels. Yesterday Gould inhaled too freely. He admitted it this morning to Municipal Judge Stevenson, who allowed him to proceed with his dogs. Special Officer Joseph Mork had taken the man and dogs in charge yesterday.

ROWELL WILL OPPOSE
HENRY FOR SENATE

Fresno, Cal., Oct. 23.—Chester H. Rowell, editor of the Fresno Republican, admitted today that he had been urged by a group of Progressive leaders to run for the United States senatorial nomination against Francis J. Henry at the Progressive primary. Rowell said if he decided to make the race it would merely be a friendly contest with Henry to determine the Progressive choice for the senate.
