

FISHER'S ERROR BREAKS HARRY KRAUSE'S LONG STRING OF VICTORIES

HARRY'S STRING IS BROKEN AFTER HARD 12-INNING CONTEST

MACK BANKING ON HIM NEXT YEAR

Jimmy Shinn's Double and Cy Swain's Sacrifice Put Sacramento in Second Place.

(Special to the Journal) Sacramento, Oct. 25.—It took twelve terrific innings to break Harry Krause's string of victories, but the Portland southpaw had the luck against him when he attempted to put over the tenth straight one. The score was 3 to 2, and by their victory the Sacramento club moved into second place in the league when Schaller's home run gave San Francisco a victory over the Senators and put the Seals in the .500 class for the first time in months.

Portland looked a winner until the teams turned into the ninth, when by prodigious effort the Senators put over the run that gave the count and won the game three innings beyond the ordinary limit.

Portland made a noise like winning in the first frame, when one run was put over on Jack Lively, the husky right hander, who was finally knocked out in the tenth inning. Rodgers was safe on Young's error with two out and stole. Hobby Davis singled and scored the captain.

Was 21 in Seventh. Portland enjoyed this lead until the seventh inning, when Moran opened with a double. Spas camped under Hallman's fly, but Dolly Stark got away with a single and scored Moran.

Portland got men around in the third station but big Lively was too good for them and kept snuffing them out. Just like Hal Krause, until the end. When Portland put over a run in the ninth the fans were wondering if the Senators could do the same thing. They did and kept the game from ending then and there.

With two out in the tenth Rodgers and Davis singled, putting Lively on the bench, and Russell finished up the game.

Shinn Starts 2. Shinn opened with a double down the left field foul line in the 13th and when Young beat out a punt to Ruggie, he took third. Cy Swain backed Lobar up with a long sacrifice fly and Shinn beat the throw to the plate. Score:

GOLF--Some Tips on Short Approaches

"The short approach from 30 to 50 yards is one of the most useful, as it is one of the most difficult, of golfing strokes," says Golf Illustrated. "In full shots with any club the player is merely concerned with hitting the ball clean and straight, but in approaching he has the additional difficulty of measuring the strength of his stroke, and of hitting the ball with the exact force to make it travel the distance desired. It is a stroke more than any other that requires constant practice until the arms and wrists acquire the power of hitting the ball mechanically, in precisely the same way every time.

"But there are many players who have learned the art of hitting their short approaches truly and consistently, and so of getting the right distance, but who yet seem never to be able to master the art of keeping them straight. Every player has had experience of how often his approach shot, played with perfect strength, finishes five or six yards to right or left of the hole. One of the chief causes of this prevalent want of straightness in approaching is that players do not aim straight. We are not here alluding to errors in bringing down the club face at a crooked angle on the ball, but to the fact that players are not sufficiently careful in addressing the ball to have the club face exactly at right angles to the proposed line of flight. There is a sort of idea that a rough approximation will do in approaching, and an even rougher aim in full shots; a vague notion that players do not aim straight. It is even more important, since the eighth of an inch of inaccuracy of direction at the moment of impact increases in proportion to the distance of the point aimed at. In a one put it might only mean a foot off the hole, but in an approach of 40 or 60 yards it might mean several yards. Both for accurate judgment of distance and for straightness of direction it is therefore of the utmost importance that careful aim should be taken and preserved throughout the stroke.

"Within certain limits the position of the feet in the short approach is not of much importance, so long as the stance is firm and well balanced. But whatever the position of the feet the player should stand so that without any straining or stretching of the body the ball shall be played from a position straight under the head. The player should be looking directly down on the top of the ball, with the head neither in front of it nor behind it. The greater part of his weight should be on the right leg, which must be kept rigid throughout the stroke. The head and body must also be kept as steady as possible. Most important of all is that the stroke be played with the arms, wrists, and hands alone, without any body weight or motion whatever. The club should be taken back with the right arm and hand, and the stroke delivered with them entirely, the left hand and arm being only used to steady the club. It must not do any of the hitting. It is, as it were, only the railway, but the steam engine is the right arm. The grip should be firm with both hands, but firmest with the right, so that the muscles of the right forearm are taut, and the ball must be struck sharply with the wrists. The club should not be taken back fast, and it should be taken back a good way, even for the shortest strokes, and brought forward on the ball with gathering force proportionate to the distance to be covered.

"It need hardly be said that the eye should be glued on the spot on which the player desires the club face to strike, and this spot is usually the center of the back of the ball, if the turf is taken with the stroke. The club face should strike the ball first, or, at any rate, simultaneously with the ground, so that the turf displaced by which lies immediately under or in front of the place where the ball is struck is straight.

OREGON CRIPPLES TO MEET STRONG IDAHO FOOTBALLERS TODAY

Coach Bzdek Is Worried on Morning of First Conference Game With Gem Staters.

University of Oregon, Eugene, Oct. 25.—Coach "Pink" Griffiths and 18 husky football warriors from the University of Idaho arrived in Eugene yesterday to play the University of Oregon team on Kincaid field this afternoon.

Jack Johnson, Idaho's right end, whose eligibility has been a bone of contention among conference managers, will play. Oregon has accepted the rule that Idaho faculty committee that Johnson is eligible.

The Idaho line will average about 170 and the backfield 175.

Although Idaho has never defeated Oregon, the Gem staters have an edge on the Eugene boys. Gonzaga college, always a hard team to beat, was taken in tow by Griffiths' men to the tune of 54 to 0. Last Saturday Johnny Bender's Pullman boys were beaten 8 to 0.

Oregon is crippled in going into the game today. Parsons is out; Beckett, Malarkey and Jones are "near outs"; Crowell will not be able to play; Bryant will probably start, but it is doubtful if he will be able to finish the game.

When seen today Coach Griffiths of Oregon said: "We have never beaten Oregon, but if the fellows put up the same kind of fight that they did with W. S. C. last Saturday we'll give Oregon an awful game. We hope to win."

The probable line-up will be: Oregon: ... Idaho: ...

PHELAN BOOTED BALL BETWEEN POSTS AND WON FOR COLUMBIANS

Jefferson Also Makes Touchdown but Herzog's Toe Is Not So Accurate as Rival's.

The ability of Quarterback Phelan to kick a goal after he had scored a touchdown in the fourth period gave the Columbia university a 7 to 6 victory over the light Jefferson high school team yesterday. Columbia's touchdown was scored in the last three minutes of play.

Phelan made a 16 yard pass to Nixon from the place kick formation and after receiving the ball Nixon gained 15 yards, while Phelan carried the ball to the five yard line. Jefferson held on the first down, but Phelan carried the ball over for the tying points on the second down.

Phelan's touchdown was scored in the first part of the final period. The blue and gold players had worked the ball down to Columbia's five yard line, when they lost the ball on downs.

Phelan, from behind his own goal line, putted out to the 25 yard line to Bonney. A shout from Captain Irvine to go away around resulted in Bonney scoring a touchdown. Herzog's attempt to kick failed.

Jefferson had two other chances to score. Twice the Jefferson line broke through and blocked punts. This caused Columbia's line to brace and hold Jefferson for downs. Captain Irvine tried many forward passes but all failed.

One feature of the game was the splendid work of Kennedy and Gliblich on the defensive. Kennedy was down under every punt, and Gliblich blocked Phelan's punts. Wilcox and Bonney were Jefferson's ground gainers. Captain Irvine, of Jefferson, made several big returns of punts. Sax's playing at end for Jefferson was another big feature.

Phelan and Nixon stand out above the other Columbia players as stars. The game which was mostly a punt-dodge in the first half, was the easiest of the season. The lineup: Columbia Position. Jefferson: ...
