

CHANNEL AND BAR OF COLUMBIA SHOULD BE DEEPEDED," HE THINKS

Saying that it is the policy of the river and harbors committee not to forestall its action on appropriations, Congressman Humphrey asked to be excused from giving opinion on the proposition to put the north jetty on a continuing contract basis and increase the appropriation to $2,000,000 and build a dredge.

"But we have always been willing to appropriate a million a year for the mouth of the Columbia," he said in conclusion.
The congressman said that yesterday a wire from the secretary of commerce informed him all bids for the Columbia light-house tender had been rejected, causing much delay in the completion of the vessel.

Humphrey to Consider Measures.
After the Chinook had deepened the channel over the bar an average of three feet in a new place the district government engineer, Major James P. McIntire, recommended that dredging be continued with greater capacity. Congressman Humphrey will probably be called upon as a member of the rivers and harbors committee to consider this recommendation insofar as it relates to a bill introduced by Senator Harry Lane of Oregon, providing an appropriation of $750,000 for the construction of a dredger to be put to work at the mouth of the Columbia.

The congressman, whose home is in Seattle, arrived in Portland late last night. He was accompanied by H. A. Chadwick, editor of the Seattle Argus. With A. H. Devers and E. C. Giltner of the Chamber of Commerce, Engineer George B. Howard of the dock commission, Gerald Bagnall, assistant engineer in charge of work at the mouth of the Columbia river, and Manager Marcus Talbot of the Port of Portland commission, Congressman Humphrey left for the mouth of the river at 3 o'clock this morning.

The program included a visit to the site of the north jetty and a ride over the bar in the government boat, Captain James Forman. It was arranged that Dr. Alfred Kinney should meet the party at Astoria. Dr. Kinney is chairman of the Port of Columbia committee.

DETERMINES TO LIVE AFTER DRINKING POISON

Santa Monica, Cal., Oct. 31.—Although 36 hours ago Mrs. Kate Holland Cardwell drank a saturated solution, containing 175 grains, of bichloride of mercury and then related the ministrations of doctors who attempted to save her, she is fighting desperately today for life, and, according to her physicians, has a chance to win.
Mrs. Cardwell's change of heart came late yesterday when Robert Cardwell, the husband from whom she was estranged, went to the hospital, took her in his arms and begged her to live for him.

When Mrs. Cardwell was found suffering from the poison she gave her name as Kate Holland. Her husband hurried to Santa Monica, from Sunset Beach after reading a newspaper account of her attempt to end her life.
