GOSPEL OF GOOD ROADS IN CLATSOP

himself a resident of the state of Washington.

Fruit Matter Squarley.

To put the proposition squarely before the farmers of the county went Frank Terrace, a resident of King county, Washington, and master of White River grange of that state. This is the man of whom Samuel Hill has said, "He has done more for good roads in proportion to his means than any man I know of."

Terrace was the most impressive and attentively listened to of the speakers, both at Astoria and Seaside. His homely logic and his intense earnestness made an instantaneous appeal to the audience. His was no technical discourse but a plain-shoulder to shoulder, straightforward talk in terms of the farm and ordinary highway.

Terrace told of his remarkable accomplishments in King county, Washington, and of the benefits that have accrued there from good roads. In terms of cabbages and horses he drove his lesson home. It is safe to say that Terrace made converts of all his hearers.

The meeting at Seaside was held in the Bungalow theatre, after a luncheon served at the Depot restaurant. The Portland party arrived there a little before 2 p. m. yesterday and after lunch and a glimpse of the surf discoursed on good roads for two full hours.

George E. Shaver, president of the Seaside Improvement club, presided in place of Julius L. Meier, who was indisposed throughout the afternoon. The speakers included C. S. Jackson of The Journal, Edgar E. Piper, president of the Commercial club; Frank Terrace and Samuel Hill.

Mr. Hill's talk was in shape of a lecture on good roads in general and was illustrated by a number of lantern slides showing road construction, good roads in various parts of the world and views of the Columbia.

The party left for Astoria by train at 8 o'clock. At this place they were escorted from the depot to the Walden hotel by a number of townspeople in automobiles. The evening's meeting was held at the opera house to which the good roads visitors marched, escorted by two headed by the Astoria band.

University Appropriation Voted. Dr. Alfred Kinney, chairman of the Port of Columbia committee, introduced Julius L. Meier as the chairman of the evening. Dr. Kinney asserted in his opening remarks that it had been predicted the bond issue would be defeated 2 to 1 and called upon the audience to pay heed to the words of the speakers.

As a sort of a curtain-raiser to the regular program R. W. Raymond made a short talk urging a favorable vote on the bond issue. He will go out Foster road on Tuesday. He was followed by Rufus C. Holman, chairman of the board of county commissioners of Multnomah county, who told of road work in Multnomah county.

Judge E. C. Judd, as a member of the county court, spoke for the county, promising that the county court would do all in its power to see that Clatsop county got the best roads possible, and that the court would appoint as road-master only a man recommended by the state highway commissioner. Dr. Andrew C. Smith, as former president of the Oregon Good Roads association, eulogized Samuel Hill as "the wheel-horse of the good roads movement."

"People who believe in bad roads must be pessimistic," said C. S. Jackson in a talk describing the good road as an institution. He was followed by Edgar E. Piper, who spoke as "a taxpayer and former member of the city council of West Seaside." Frank Terrace and Samuel Hill concluded the meeting.

Mr. Terrace told of the work in King county where farmers now think an investment of $20,000 a mile for roads cheap in comparison to the benefits derived, ascribing their present prosperity entirely to the good highway permitting easy marketing of farm products. Mr. Hill spoke of his efforts in good roads propaganda and of his experiences in searching for competent highway engineers. He mentioned Samuel C. Lancaster and Major Bowley, state highway commissioner, as engineers now working for the people of Oregon to whom road building would be a trust. Jimmy Dunn, Hill's views of the Columbia valley were enthusiastically received.

The visiting delegations from Portland and Rainier left Astoria at midnight on board the steamer Harry at Queen, arriving in Portland about 8 o'clock this morning.

Those who made the trip were: John

E. Beall, T. J. Baldwin, A. S. Benson, C. C. Chapman, C. F. Chamberlain, John W. Carroll, J. P. Daily, M. C. Dickinson, Arthur L. Finley, F. A. Freeman, Samuel Hill, E. L. Harmon, H. L. Hamblin, Rufus C. Holman, Julius L. Meier, C. S. Jackson, Dan J. Moore, J. L. Miller, Phil Meschery, Tr. Will E. MacRae, J. B. Middleton, Edgar B. Piper, David A. Pepp, W. E. Prudhomme, J. C. Potter, R. W. Raymond, R. W. Schmeer, Dr. Andrew C. Smith, Frank Terrace, O. W. Taylor, A. Welch, E. F. Wells, Sig Sigmond, Melvin G. Winstock, John B. Yeon.

Those who joined the party on the trip to Seaside from Rainier and Astoria were: Fred Trow, Al Clark, E. M. Young, R. Yount, J. Biunensadt and C. Lewis from Rainier; J. S. Deilinger, editor The Astorian; George W. Sabor, G. C. Fulton, C. W. Mullins, C. H. Colender, F. N. Whitman, Colonel John Adair, Judge E. C. Judd, Frank L. Parker, deputy collector of customs; Will Madison and John Grates, editor of The Budget from Astoria.

George E. Shaver, president of the Seaside Civic Improvement club; E. N. Hurd, editor of The Signal; J. E. Oates, A. J. Gragg, A. S. Foster, C. M. Godfrey, V. M. Spurgeon, W. E. Lewis, Dr. J. W. Conn and Harry Wheatley composed the Seaside reception committee.

CONTRACTORS SUED FOR HEAVY DAMAGES. Two suits for a total of $32,720.75 have been filed in the circuit court against Giebisch & Joplin, contractors in charge of the work on the Terwilliger boulevard, as the result of an accident to 7-year-old Sam Gasbarro. The boy, with companions, found some dynamite caps on April 6, and he was badly injured when they exploded some of the caps. His father, Ferdinando Gasbarro, as guardian, has brought suit for $30,000 in the boy's name, and for $2500 damages, and $320.75 doctor's, nurses' and hospital bills in his own name.

Dummies vs. Live Models. A well dressed dummy in a clothing store window is a good asset. I go one better and have "live models" (customers) boosting my upstairs system, which saves the high rent factor. Jimmy Dunn, 139-141 Oregon bldg. Take elevator. (Adv.)
