RECLAMATION PROJECT IS KNOTTY PROBLEM

The Sacramento river reclamation project is one of the most difficult ever submitted to congress, said Congressman W. E. Humphrey of Washington, who is a visitor in Portland on his way to investigate the merit of the scheme. "It involves a number of perplexing problems," said he, "There is no doubt problems," said he. "There is no doubt that the reclamation of several million acres of land would more than justify the $10,000,000 or $12,000,000 of expenditure. But the government must consider the demands of navigation, the effects of the division of current, and its own responsibility in the deposits of silt resultant from the river mining permitted by the government in the early days of the gold discovery.

"I am given to understand that the people will bear perhaps the cost of the project. If that is the case it will probably be undertaken, because I don't think congress would negative a project where the people's interest was shown by a large contribution toward its cost."

Salem, Or., Nov. 1.- Representatives of the principal railroads in the state appeared before the state board of equalization yesterday and protested against the tentative assessment of the railroad properties made by the state tax commission. All of them objected to the assessments, declaring the railroad preperties were being assessed at a higher ratio than other property in the same counties.

Representatives of the O.-W. R. & N. introduced testimony in behalf of all-the companies. This included exhaustive tabulated statements purporting to show the assessed and actual values of property generally throughout the counties through which the railroads run.

Those attending the hearing were: For O.-W. R. & N. and O. S. L., A. C. Spen-cer, general attorney; J. W. Morrow, tax and right of way agent; R. B. Hallock special tax agent. For Northern Pa-cific and S. P. & S., Charles Murray, tax commissioner; J. C. Daries, tax and right of way agent; W. C. Smith, special the county revenue $384 less this year tax agent. ### COURT DISPOSES OF FURS IN LITIGATION

Two trunks and a big box, filled with furs valued at approximately $3000, were claimed by three different sets of claimants in District Judge Jones' court vesterday afternoon. The original owners finally received the property by order of Judge Jones, and the furs will be returned to five New York fur houses. The furs were secured through a search warrant from the store of the Standard Suit & Cloak company, which alleged that it had purchased them. Adolph Landau, representing the New York firms, claimed them. A referee in bankruptcy claimed them as assets of the Standard Suit & Cloak company, which went into bankruptcy a few days

Originally the furs were sent to J. Ellison & company, on consignment to be sold on a 10 per cent commission. be sold on a 10 per cent commission. Ellison died and a fur salesman named Max Wechsler is accused of taking the furs for his own use. ### ARMORY IN NEED OF EXTENSIVE REPAIRS

The sum of $500 was authorized to be spent for the repair of the roof of the armory by the county commissioners this morning. A written statement of repairs needed was presented to the commissioners and showed that $91,130 could be spent in making repairs and changes to put the building in good condition and make it fairly modern. In the report from the Oregon national guard officials it was said that the value of government and state para-phernalia stored and in use in the build-ing is $125,000 and that $200,000 worth more may be added in the near future. The repairs and improvements asked are: A basement under the south half, $42,000; a new floor in the south half, 4500; a new metal roof, $6500; repairs to the walls, $1500; a new kitchen, $3200; new plumbing and repairs, $10,000; remodeling of quarters, $15,000; painting, $1600; a steam heating plant, $6800. The report was referred to the budget committee for consideration.

RAILROADS OBJECT TO BOY TRAMPS CAPTURE WILD GOOSE ON RIVER

Have Luck Hunting Without Gun, Bag or Hunting License.

With hunger as a sauce, the sky as oof, green grass as a tablecloth and the water of the Columbia river to wash their throats, four bors a few days ago enjoyed to the limit a feed of "mulligar stew." The methods employed to gather together the various viands of the feast vere unique.

The four boys, James Madonna, 15, and Chester Reed, Darrell Gentry and Chauncey Butler, each 14 years old, were runaways from Portland and were camped at "Hobo camp," a point on the Columbia river about 20 miles downstream from Vancouver, Wash. "Eats" had been scarce for some time when one of the boys spied a goose floating on the bosom of the river within a stone's throw of the bank.

Arming themselves with rocks, they each let go a rock. The goose flapped its wings and showed distress. In a twinkling one of the boys stripped and dove into the cold water. Spurred by the thought of a square meal he broke swimming records in making for the goose, which was attempting ineffectually to escape. Grasping the bird by the neck, he towed it back. An old can was discovered and the bird was soon steamng over a camp fire. Meantime the boys skirmished around at neighboring houses and secured bread, potatoes, salt, epper and other necessaries. When the last bone was picked they were prepared to quit for the time being, The boys are all Pertland youths and ad started to see the world. Deputy Juvenile Officer Jeffries found Madonna Thursday when that youth returned to the city, aparently to get some money to continue on the way. Remembering a threat Madonna had made to get two of the other boys and fearing on account of their absence that Madonna might have carried out the threat, Jeffries started for the others only to find they had passed him coming toward Port-land. All are safely in custody now and will be given hearings in the juvenile court.
