LINER BEAVER WILL BE COMPELLED TO MISS AT LEAST ONE ROUND TRIP

Damages Sustained in Collision With Steam Schooner Prove Serious.

Extensive repairs will be needed or the San Francisco & Portland Steamship company's liner Beaver, according to reports received here today from San Francisco, and the schedule has been cancelled for southbound sailing until November 17, when the Beaver sails. It has been estimated that repairs to the liner will amount to $60,000.

Examination of the Beaver at San Francisco, after her collision with the steam schooner Necanicum last week, disclosed greater damage than was at first thought she sustained, and showed bow plates and frames crushed 20 feet back from the stem.

After the collision the Beaver and the Necanicum both got to port under their sustained the greater damage, according to report, as she was struck by the Neland the greater will be received as the was struck by the Neland to report, as she was struck by the Neland to report, as she was struck by the Neland to report, as she was struck by the Neland to report, as she was struck by the Neland to report, as she was struck by the Neland to report, as she was struck by the Neland to report to the rep canicum. The Beaver will be repaired at the Union Iron works, and the Necanicum at the United Engineering U. S. POSTAL SAVINGS works in San Francisco.

Advices to the local officials of the San Francisco & Portland Steamship company state that the Beaver will not come north on her sailing schedule of November 6, and her sailing from here November 12 has been cancelled, with the result that there will be no steamer, so far as is known between the sailing so far as is known, between the sailing of the Rose City, now in port, on No-vember 7, and the steamer Bear, which of the Rose City, now in port, on Nowill be due to sail from here November 17.
