There was little interest in the game among the students of the two schools in fact, by actual count, there were more players present than spectators.

The feature of the game was the splenlid offensive playing of George Nixon, Columbia's right half back. He was responsible for eight of the touchdowns scored by the Peninsula players. His forward pass receiving was the best witnessed on the local field this season. He also made several runs around Hill's end for big gains. Phelan and St. Marie, in fact every back field player of the Columbia team, played in championship form.

player of the Columbia team, played in championship form.

Philbin played a strong game at center. Quinn and Suefert were other star line players. For the Hill team, Graham and Briggs were the strongest players. Graham was carried off the field in the third period of play. Calhoun, Timmerman and Hinckley showed good form at times, although they were greatly outweighed by their opponents. Columbia scored a touchdown and goal in the first period, a touchdown in the second period, three touchdowns and one goal in the third period and five touchdowns and two goals in the last quarter. quarter.

Whether the Columbia team was laying over its head in yesterday's ame will be determined next Wednessay afternoon, when Coach Callicrate's players meet the Washington high school team. Had Columbia played in the form against P. Papke Says He Has Retired. Chicago, Nov. 6.—Writing from Paris to a Chicago sport writer, Billy Papke, former middleweight champion of the world, has announced his retirement from the ring. The fact that he has grown too heavy to make the middleweight limit has convinced Papke, according to his letter, that his fighting days are over.

"However," added Papke, "I never tossed my money away like a lot of boxers have done, and now I am getting the benefit of it."

Scoreless Tie Played in Mud. The field was a sea of mud. Bathing suits were more fitting than football togs. The game resembled water polomore than football. These and the sumtotal of the good old stand-by expressions descriptive of football played in the mud fall utterly to give any con-ception of the muddlest game ever, played at Reed college yesterday be-tween the teams representing the dormi-tory and the city students. The score was 6 to 6.

might be debated on identical lines.

We will therefore pass to the consideration of physical pleasure, and inquire whether a man whose sense of touch is so lacking in delicacy that he possesses an enormous handicap, and is reconciled to the possession of it, can fully appreciate the thrill of a clean hit. Such a problem can never be settled by actual demonstration, but evidence of the probable truth is forthcoming.

PETER MOELLER WILL BE SENTENCED MONDAY

Sentence will be passed upon Peter Moelier, convicted of manslaughter, next Monday. Circuit Judge Cleeton had set yesterday as the date of sentence, but on request of Attorney Skulason, post-poned the date. Moeller was convicted recently of killing Charles A. Broddle during a drunken row on August 22, in Broddle's scow in South Portland. It is understood that the delay was asked that further efforts might be made to have Moeller pardoned. Moeller's father has offered to aid Mrs. Broddle financially if his son is allowed to return to Norway with him.

benefit to the player's health which results from the exercise taken during the course of a round on the links.

Far be it from us to deny that exercise is healthful, and that the particular kind of exercise which the golfer must take justifies doctors in recommending it to patients of middle age. What we take exception to is the implied advice to golf for exercise. No game is worth playing unless it becomes for the player while playing an end in itself. We might go further and say that the game while it lasts should be the player's supreme end. If it is not be must fail to prove himself a worthy opponent.

We know from painful experience the golfer who golfs for exercise, and having lost his match proclaims that he does not greatly care whether he wins or not provided he had had a nice walk in the fresh air. If pressed, he will probably say that he considers himself for this very reason to be a "good loser." As a matter of fact, he is nothing of the kind, for he has failed to give his opponent the satisfaction of beating one who resents defeat as keenly as is consistent with good manners, and fights his hardest to avoid it.

In conclusion, let is be said that, however much the chancellor of the exchequer may decide his own skill at golf, those who are familiar with his play know him to be intensely keen when engaged in a match; he possesses his due share of that "oathful desire for mastery" which Mr. Hutchinson has noted to be the essential qualification of a worthy antagonist. Therefore it ill becomes him to lead others astray by devoting any part of a public speech to eulogy of golf as a purveyor of exercise.
