

GOVERNMENT THROUGH FRIENDLY SERVICE FOR POOR SETTLER URGED

Col. Bill Hanley to Carry New Message for Development of Western Lands.

Colonel Bill Hanley, the sage of Harney, is in Portland today on his way across the United States to plead with the National Conservation congress to back him in his crusade to create a new development policy on the part of the government. He would denude the government bureau of a scheming dominion obtained through well planned self-perpetuation and concentrate the power now used in bureau building on real service to settlers.

"We need government in the form of friendly service rather than machines built big and powerful to serve the ends of the builders," said he at the Hotel Oregon this morning in outlining the appeal he has prepared to make.

"The government must begin with the man of today on these western lands and find what he needs in tools of today and equipment of today to make the best success."

"The present policy is to let these poor home builders, who wouldn't go way out in the wild country if they weren't poor, try to solve great big development problems with no more equipment than the pioneers of the past generation."

"Here are streams torn holes in the mountainsides with their unstrained power but the government hasn't seen them, or permitted their use, in development of electric power or for irrigation."

"We've got to work out a way for the timber on the hill sides to be used. I do not agree with the agent who says trees are sacred and shouldn't be cut down. Nature makes it hard enough for man to get a living and she put the trees there, and the streams, to help him."

"The government ought to get into the road building business and make ways so that the people can get out on the land."

"We want to have it so that government agents, when they come to the poor little shack of a homesteader won't be considered as they are today, policemen acting as spies to see if they can prosecute the settler maybe for cutting down a stick of wood."

"We want a government that is friendly to its own people, that is devoted to their human interests. We want government agents not as policemen but as friends, as agricultural advisers and guides to show the settler how to make the land yield him up a living for himself and his family."

Young Men Head Ala.
"I'm going to tell these eastern people that of the west, it's not a different people. The pioneers are all of the present generation. Those of us that had to live with pioneer ways are changing over to modern ways. Young men of the east are coming out here to work, but they don't know how to work like we did. They only know how to work the way they do today, harnessing the powers of nature and doing things in a big way, or not at all. In fact, things have got to be done in a big way, or they won't be done."

"So if the easterners help up develop this western country they're doing it for their young men and for themselves. We're not separated any longer. The waters of the two oceans have been joined through the canal. It don't take a year and a half or two years to come across the country any more, it only takes comparatively a few hours. Times have changed."

"So many of these government people ain't got the human idea in their work. They like to build up a big machine for the sake of the machine. One of 'em that had built up a big irrigation district said to me the other day, 'I hate to turn that fine plant over to them farmers to operate.'"

Dodges Political Question.
"We've got to begin thinkin' and actin' for the individual people, and we've got to begin now."

Colonel Hanley will leave tonight for Washington, D. C., where the conservation congress will be held, November 18-19. He will attend the Chicago land show on his way back. He is accompanied by his daughter, Martha.

He answered rumors that he intends to be a candidate for governor, saying: "I'm not ambitious to be an office holder. There's lots of responsibility connected with bein' governor, and I don't know whether you can do more good by office than out."

Which, of course, couldn't be taken as a direct assertion that he would deny the honor if it came to him.

Professor Holden Will Be Guest.
As a compliment to Professor P. G. Holden, the seed corn and alfalfa specialist who has been touring the northwest for several weeks in the interest of diversified farming, the commercial club will tender a luncheon Thursday noon, to which will be invited a number of persons devoted to school gardening and general agriculture. The affair will be purely informal.

SUPREME COURT HOLDS WENDL WILL VALID

(Salem Bureau of The Journal.)
Salem, Or., Nov. 11.—In the case of John B. Wendl and Regina Wendl against the Prior of St. Benedict's Abbey and others of Mount Angel, contesting the will of Rev. Emmeran D. Wendl, who died at the abbey in November, 1910, the supreme court sustained the circuit court of Marion county in upholding the validity of the will. The will left property valued at about $2500 to the abbey, leaving to the decedent's brother and sister, who are the plaintiffs, $50 each.

LAW PARTNERS GO INTO COURT FOR SETTLEMENT

Two suits are now pending in the circuit court as the result of the dissolution of partnership of the law firm of John Ditchburn and John R. Downs last August. Ditchburn first sued Downs to collect a $100 note, and Downs came back with a suit for an accounting. Downs alleged that Ditchburn had appropriated to his own use $1325 received for Edgar Quiggis, a client of the firm, and failed to account for it. He said that the $100 note was to have been disposed of in settlement. The partnership began May 1, 1912, and was dissolved August 20, 1913.

APPLE WITH GORGEOUS NAME TO BE HONORED

Crownings of Sir Spitzenberg-Pippin, Etc., to Have Only One Sad Feature.

November 15 will be a great day for Sir Spitzenberg Pippin de Bellflower Van Jonathan von Maidenbush Apple, who on that day will be crowned king of fruits in every hamlet, village and farm of the land. The ceremonies were planned in Portland and heralded throughout the republic. The only sad part of the festivities will be the sacrifice of the king himself, who is doomed to perish in the height of his exaltation.

The Portland Commercial club promoted the coronation, abetted by the local hotels and the railroads centering here, who took the movement all over the nation. In response to the proclamation sent broadcast, responses have come from Texas, Florida, Alaska, southern California, New England, Michigan and every state of the northwest. Hotel men have promised to serve the apple in every conceivable style. Railway dining cars will present the fruit to patrons in all sorts of delectable forms. Several lines have issued booklets, telling of the possibilities of the apple and giving numerous recipes for preparing it.

INTEREST IN HIGHWAY BRINGS BENSON BACK

His interest in the success of the Columbia River highway has brought S. Benson, millionaire lumberman, from his winter home at Long Beach, Cal., to Portland for a stay of several days. He will make a trip over the route of the road from Portland to Shell Rock mountain either tomorrow or the day following. Mr. Benson has set aside a sum of $50,000 to influence congress in an effort to secure the passage of laws prohibiting the manufacture of strong liquor. Last night he said his interest in this matter is not because he is of the class known as "sentimental prohibitionists," but for economic reasons. He has found that the efficiency of men who drink high proof liquor is impaired.

PORTLAND REQUESTED TO JOIN COAST CHAMBER

Pleading for the return of Portland into the field of the Pacific Coast Chamber of Commerce, delegations from Seattle and San Francisco conferred with the trustees of the Portland chamber this morning and afterward were entertained at luncheon at the Commercial club. The trustees, in executive session tomorrow, will decide on what attitude it shall take.

chamber was discussed in executive session today and the trustees of the local organization will make known their stand at their regular meeting tomorrow.

REGRET DEATH OF FORMER PRINCIPAL

Former graduates of Phillips Exeter academy, living in Portland, sent a telegram of condolence and sympathy today to the family and friends of the late Harlan Page Amen, principal of that institution, who died at Exeter, N. H., last Sunday.

The late educator was a classmate at Harvard of A. L. Mills, president of the First National bank of this city. At the time of the death of Principal Amen he was associated with Mr. Mills as a member of the board of Overseers of Harvard university.

Following is a copy of the message wired this morning to the faculty of Phillips Exeter academy:

"Former students residing in Portland and the northwest are sorry to learn of the sudden death of Principal Harlan Page Amen. We feel that his services were of untold value to the institution and to young men of this country. Kindly convey our sympathy to his family and friends.

JUBITZ FUNERAL HELD HERE THIS AFTERNOON

Funeral services for the late Albin Jubit, who died Saturday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. O. M. Rankin, Humphrey boulevard, at the age of 78, were held at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon from the undertaking parlors of J. P. Finley & Son. Interment was at River-view cemetery.

Mr. Jubit, who was born at Weissenfels, Saxony, Germany, January 1, 1842, had been a resident of Portland for the past 49 years. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. O. M. Rankin, of this city; two sons, Raymond G. and George

YOUTH LAYS BLAME ON FORGER WHO IS SOUGHT

That William Evan Clark, not quite 21 years old, and bearing marks of the use of drugs, is a tool for a clever forger, is the opinion of the authorities, and the principal in the case is being sought. Young Clark yesterday jumped through a large plate glass window in the Willamette Tent & Awning company's place at First and Burnside streets, to escape detection and arrest for passing worthless checks. He was arrested a few minutes later by Constables Wohlberger and Deputies Hunter and Nicholson. He admitted that he had passed bad checks, but laid the blame on another man.
