"Twentisth Century School,"-Newton C. Gauntt, a Portland architect, has prepared an illustrated lecture on "The Twentieth Century School" which he will deliver in a number of Oregon cities as his contribution to the cause of progressive education. He announced yesterday that no admission fee was to be charged at any place where the address is to be delivered. The first appointment is at Stayton next Friday evening, at the invitation of the prin cipal of the Stayton schools, Gauntt said yesterday the lecture would emphasize the place of correct school ventilation, exercise, correct posture in sitting and general obedience to ordinarily little heeded laws of nature, in the development of healthy men and women

Starters. - Electrical-Mechanical-Air. As applied to the automobile. A very interesting pamphlet giving a fair and impartial comparison of the different starting systems now in use, has recently been edited by the prommechanical and electrical neer, Stanley D. Emmott. The author goes on to explain in a simple way the intricate mechanism of the differ ent starters, giving diagrams and comparative locations. He also briefly discusses the different systems of ignition. If you are contemplating the purchase of a new car this pamphlet might be of interest to you and may be had free for the asking. THE CITY AND PRIVACY

By Dr. Frank Crane.

NE reason why people flock so cities is that they may be able to mind their own business, Political economists seek complex and devious reasons for the tremend. ous rapidity of city growth and for the desertion of the country and of the country town. The cause, however, is quite simple, as simple as human nature. The people go to cities because they "want to." That's all.

Take the village of Podunk. In the first place you would not be allowed to go there to live without explaining why you came, where you came from, and what your business is. You can rent a flat in Chicago, however, and nobody cares a tuppence who you are or what is your criminal record, so long as you are peaceable.

If you do business in Podunk, and usually get down to the store at nine, and me morning you do not appear until ten, the town will not rest until it has found out the cause of your delay. Your neighbors know all about you and your wife, your sons, and your daughters. The bank cashier knows the size of your pile, the grocer and butcher know what you eat, the dry goods merchant knows what sort of underclothes you wear and how much your women folks spend on corsets, and they all meet and

When you leave town they know it, also when you return; and they want to know what you were doing in St, Louis,

Some people like it, and feel lost and lonesome in the city. But more and more that class is growing to whom this perpetual invasion of privacy is disa-

It is all a very cosy family arrangement. You live in the constant glare of the limelight.

It is pretty generally assumed among moralists that people love the privacy of cities because they wish to plunge into vice. Doubtless some do, But it is floubtful if the average city bred person is any more immoral than the country-

It is conceivable that a person may wish to live his own life as he pleases, and not under the unremitting supervision of Mrs. Grundy, and that this wish may be prompted not by a desire for secret crime but simply by a desire for Ulster.

Portland, Nov. 15 .- To the Editor of The Journal:-That distinguished publicist, Mr. George Harvey, just returned from a visit abroad, believes that the whole Ulster question has been grossly exaggerated for partisan purposes.

So have the recent utterances of Winston Churchill of the liberal cabinet on the same question. To quote an impartial reviewer:
"Mr. Churchill had explained that he meant by his Ulster proposal that the government will consider any solution ompatible with the fundamental principle of an Irish parliament and a government responsible to it, and not destructive to the unity of Ireland.

"Mr. Asquith finally settled the exclusion proposal, October 25: "Nothing is to be done," he said, lature with an executive responsible to it, or which may erect a permanent or insuperable barrier to Irish unity. This is the root principle of the home rule bill, from which we will not depart. "He welcomed a settlement by consent, but: 'a conference of party leaders without more or less an agreement as to a basis and a defined limit would be abortive and leave matters worse than it found them.' "Sir Edward Carson's comments were mild, showing a conciliatory tendency, and it seems now that a conference may be held on the basis of strengthening the finances of the bill and increasing the representation of the three or four

Seed Corn for Oregonians. Dayville, Or., Nov. 9,-To the Editor of The Journal-After reading several forn reports in The Journal, I wish to say for the benefit of the people, if you wish to use the information, that I sent to Virginia and got a few pounds of what is called the Nocob corn, a very deep grain with a cob no larger than a man's finger. I gave it only moderate; care, but it got ripe and was of excellent quality. I had another let from a relative not a great way from Galax, Va., which did equally well and is a more desirable It grew with ears as high as my head and about 10 to 12 inches long. It is a white corn, and fine for bread It also got ripe and is as glossy and as well matured as any eastern corn. I think it out of place to get seed from the middle west. I would be glad to send a small amount to some energetic farmer for postage only, to introduce it. I am sending it around among my neighbors for trial, not to make money on it. I give it away. I feel it the duty of the farming world whenever anything profitable is found, to pass it along free of charge.

Appeal for the Pisgah Homes, Lents, Or., Nov. 15 .- To the Editor of The Journal-I ask space to address your readers in this appeal: As the wintry days draw near, we begin to recognize the growing need of preparation for the time when work closes down. We hear of "close times," hard times," and "financial stringency" on all sides, and we know of the many who will have to be housed, clothed and fed at times through the winter. We cannot but wonder where the means necessary to accomplish this is to come

Just today, a man, one who has been a hardworking man and an earnest Christian, told me of his dire need and that of his family of six. His face already showed the lines of hunger and despair. He had been wearily walking the streets for days in futile search for

In our Pisgah Home there are now 50 men out of work, most of them erippled or otherwise incapacitated for labor other than doing little odd chores in the vicinity of the Home. Many of these very men were capable workmen in the different avenues of life, and are stranded here through adversity or, more often, drink.

The winter is upon us and we must have clothing, especially underwear and shoes, in order to keep them clean and warm. When you look over your own full store, don't forget the Pisgah Homes. I say "Homes" advisedly, as we now have a women's adjunct to the Home, which we call Bethany, a place of retreat, where those women who have lost their rightful place in life through weakness, adversity or even wilful misdemeanors, can, if they will, have a quiet place where they can, by penitence and prayer, regain their lost po-sition in life, and be restored to a life of virtue and rectitude. Bethany needs curtains, carpets, dishes, provisions and
