HIGH, MIDDLE AND LOW MEET ON EQUAL PLANE IN POULTRY CONTESTS

Shows Democratic in Extreme; Magnitude of Business Shown by Number.

By Miller Purvis, Editor Poultry

Life. If any one has any doubt about the magnitude of the poultry business of Oregon that doubt will be dispelled by a visit to the poultry show now being held in the new Failing building, Fifth and Alder. On two big floors is gathered the most valuable and interesting collection of domestic fowl ever brought together on the west coast.

More than 1000 fowl, old and young, are to be seen at this show, and numer ous estimates have been made as to the value of the exhibit as a whole. It is quite probable that the owners of the birds would not part with them for less than $50,000, and single birds are held much higher than this sum indicates if it were divided by the number on exhibi-

A breeder who had brought his birds nearly 1000 miles to get a chance to compete at the great Portland show was ter uld not pass. Several women voted. asking $50 for a cock bird he owned Monday. Tuesday this bird was awarded a second prize, and the price was to him than a first prize in any other coast show. It is easy to find birds in line on which the owners will not make any price because they feel that they can not afford to part with a fowl which is likely to produce for its owner stock which will sell for long prices. Two Sides to Business.

There are two sides to the poultry business. The market poultryman seeks to produce lowls which will make the heaviest weight on the least feed, or hens which will produce the most eggs in a year. The fancier tries to breed upon as being the ideal.

getting hearer together in their ideals fully give their time to those who visit all the time. The market poultryman the show. knows that pure breeding means greater bers of the association, visiting poultry excellence in all desirable directions, while the fancier is constantly striving to improve his birds in practical value, so that he may have an invincible combination by getting good market birds which will also win at the shows. Struggle Makes Poultry Shows.

This struggle is what makes poultry shows, such as is now being held in this city, so interesting to all classes of peo-The market poultryman knows he is likely to produce some birds good enough to enter at the shows, while the fancier knows that if he can produce hens which will lay 200 or more eggs in a year he can always sell the fowl which falls below the winning paint of excellence to his market brother at a price which makes his work a paying one. Thus it happens that in this show fancier and farmer mingle and talk chicken from morning until night, while interested groups stand around and listen or interject a remark now and then.

In this show are to be seen representatives of flocks of fowls kept in the back taken high prizes, and fowls from farm ribbons as are those from the flocks of the man who breeds for pleasure and recreation without giving a thought to making money from his hobby.

Rich and Poor Equal.

A poultry show knows no classes. The workingman who can produce a good bird fares just as well as the millionaire fancier, and the two will get together and talk about their fowls without a thought that there is any social distinction between them. Richly clad ladies talk with laborers without feeling that the they are condescending in any way, and the whole poultry world stands on a common level as soon as it enters the doors of a poultry show, the awards of the judges deciding who shall be considered highest and who shall take the lower places.

In themselves the exhibits are interesting, as they represent the ends of the earth in their origin. Nearly every country under the sun has originated one or more varieties of domestic fowl.

W. A. EWING IS NEW MAYOR OF SCIO, OR.

W. A. Ewing. Scio, Or., Dec. 3 .- At the city election held Monday W. A. Ewing was elected mayor. Other officials elected were: Recorder, J. S. Sticha; treasurer, R. V. Shelton; marshal, J. N. Weddle; councilmen, Dr. A. G. Prill, R. M. Cain, P. H. MacDonald, F. T. Bilyeu, E. C. Shelton, A. W. Hagey and N. G. Morrison. A measure proposing a new city char-

Crowds have been visiting the show, and the interest seems to have reached to the shape which has been agreed every home in the city. Now a marked can find the prize birds and learn who creasing demand for birds of both the owners are without trouble. A banquet will be given to the memgon hotel tomorrow evening.

Secretary Fulmer and the official board of the Oregon Poultry and Pet Stock association receive many compliments on the way the show is staged, and visitors who have visited eastern poultry shows are not slow in saying that the Portland show is the Madison Square Garden show of the west, which is the highest possible compliment.

AT POULTRY EXHIBIT

An interesting feature of the third annual exhibition of the Oregon Poultry & Pet Stock association will be a lecture and demonstration of caponizing tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, on the third floor of the new Failing building, to be given by Dwight Whitman, of Tacoma, one of the best known poultry men of the northwest.

The subject of caponizing is one in which all poultry raisers are becoming fourth intensely interested, due to the remarkyards of Portland homes which have able results that have been accomplished. It is claimed that the result flocks are as proud behind their blue is better and bigger birds for market purposes. Mr. Whitman was among the first to introduce the subject in the west, and he has had phenomenal success with his experiments. From the number of in-quiries that have been received by Secretary W. L. Fulmer in reference to the ecture it is believed that more than 160 will attend.
