CALIFORNIA

Rivergarden Farms

In the Famous Sacramento Valley

The home of prosperity and of plenty. Soil, water, sunshine and profit all the year round.

Recorded crops seem almost fabulous in this richly productive section, yet the following figures have been verified and the achievements of farmers heretofore attained can be duplicated: Alfalfa, six crops—12 tons an acre, a year. Hops, 3000 pounds an acre. Potatoes, 300 sacks or 600 bushels an acre. Garden truck, all kinds, three crops a year. Beans 40 sacks an acre. Sugar beets, 20 tons an acre.

All the above without mention of the most lucrative, probably, of all pursuits in the Sacramento river valley—that of dairying. With ample production of alfalfa for stock food, the herds have become famous for sleek, healthy condition and have set many high records for production of milk rich in butter fats.

This is the greatest empire in the world, considered from all standpoints, such as climate, soil, water, diversity of products, acessibility to mountains, ocean, cities, parks, etc., where one can drive on paved highways for hundreds of miles and can use an auto every day in the year with real pleasure. California has certainly the finest system of paved roads and boulevards in the world.

Railroads both electric and steam, give communication and shipping facilities unequaled, bringing the market gardener within easy reach of his point of disposal, the orchardist and hop grower close to their warehouses and the sugar beet farmer near to his factory.

The Sacramento river is one of the two great inland waterways of the state and shipments can be made direct by boat from Rivergarden Farms to the markets of Sacramento, San Francisco—and the world.

The soil, which the United States government reports to be a fine sandy loam, 35 feet deep—a river sediment soil, the richest and best agricultural land in the world, because it is subirrigated, no grading or leveling is necessary and no surface irrigation is required.

This property never overflows and there is no malaria or pests.

An Expert's Opinion

Professor Elwood Mead, who has made many investigations of soil and agricultural projects for the United States government, in which analysis of vitalizing principles and adaptability to certain crops were required, speaking of this section, said:

"Within a radius of five miles in the Sacramento valley I saw every product which I could call to mind. Apples and oranges grew side by side, as did oak and almond trees. There were olives from the south and cherries from the north. A date palm seemed equally at home with an alfalfa meadow; figs and tokay grapes were apparently as much in their element as the fields of wheat and barley or the rows of Indian corn, some of the stalks of which measured 15 feet in height. All of these could have been grown on a single acre, and doubtless have been."

We will send you a full set of photographs and complete information. Write us at once or call at our offices.
